

Bram Marchetti

Chronicle, volume 1

Blunt, practical and allergic to small talk hydroponics technician of the Academy of Vell

Volume 3 of 10 in the Bram Marchetti collection. The other volumes cover the rest of this character's record.

About this volume

Day-to-day records kept by Bram, hydroponics technician of the Academy of Vell, in no particular order of importance. Among the things Bram keeps at the Hall of Echoes is a copper pipe; Bram calls it 'Small Hours' and will not explain why. It appears in these pages more often than it deserves.

Full name	Bram Marchetti
Volume	Chronicle 1
Name of the copper pipe	Small Hours

Entries

Entry 1, autumn of year 40

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. Bram repaired the sack of salt at the bell tower for Matthias, who paid in 85 guilders and a long story about the new curfew. At the bell tower, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone. Valentin came by asking about who really won the regatta. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. Bram found a spool of wire half-buried near the bell tower and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Bram polished 'Small Hours', the copper pipe, and said nothing about it.

Entry 2, winter of year 40

A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the bell tower; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the bell tower, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Bram repaired the signal flag at the bell tower for Xanthe, who paid in 61 guilders and a long story about who really won the regatta. At the bell tower, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real signal flag from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 3, summer of year 40

At the Hall of Echoes, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. Bram closed early, walked to the candle library, and watched the lights come on. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. The weather turned. Bram moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census.

Entry 4, autumn of year 40

Bram repaired the oilskin map at the candle library for Brigid, who paid in 54 guilders and a long story about the tariff on salt. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. Bram spent the day counting stock at the candle library: 15 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short.

Entry 5, autumn of year 40

Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Bram moved the glass float indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census.

Entry 6, winter of year 40

Bram won 80 guilders on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. At the greenhouse cloisters, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. Bram won 15 guilders on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper. Bram was hired to carry a ledger from the greenhouse cloisters to the bell tower without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Bram was hired to carry a grain scale from the greenhouse cloisters to the bell tower without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 7, summer of year 40

Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. Bram was hired to carry a ledger from the bell tower to the north observatory without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Xiomara came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Hyacinth came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 8, autumn of year 40

A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Fenwick came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the Hall of Echoes, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. Bram closed early, walked to the bell tower, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 9, summer of year 40

Nikolai came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the census flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the Hall of Echoes; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Bram repaired the clockwork bird at the Hall of Echoes for Zeph, who paid in 28 guilders and a long story about the quarantine.

Entry 10, spring of year 40

Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. Bram closed early, walked to the greenhouse cloisters, and watched the lights come on. Tallulah came by asking about who really won the regatta. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 11, summer of year 40

At the bell tower, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. Bram found a brass lantern half-buried near the bell tower and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. At the bell tower, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 12, summer of year 40

At the Hall of Echoes, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone. Bram won 15 guilders on a bet about the census and spent all of it on supper. Bram was hired to carry a cracked compass from the Hall of Echoes to the greenhouse cloisters without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Bram moved the pair of spectacles indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the missing shipment. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 13, spring of year 41

Bram closed early, walked to the greenhouse cloisters, and watched the lights come on. Bram closed early, walked to the greenhouse cloisters, and watched the lights come on. Rowan came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the north observatory; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 14, autumn of year 41

Bram found a ledger half-buried near the bell tower and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Bram found a copper pipe half-buried near the bell tower and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Bram closed early, walked to the greenhouse cloisters, and watched the lights come on. At the bell tower, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 15, winter of year 41

Bram closed early, walked to the candle library, and watched the lights come on. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Bram was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the Hall of Echoes to the candle library without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Bram spent the day counting stock at the Hall of Echoes: 76 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the Hall of Echoes; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 16, summer of year 41

Bram repaired the bolt of linen at the candle library for Elowen, who paid in 82 guilders and a long story about the quarantine. Bram found a bundle of letters half-buried near the candle library and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the candle library; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 17, summer of year 42

Bram found a brass lantern half-buried near the greenhouse cloisters and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Bram was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the greenhouse cloisters to the Hall of Echoes without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Bram spent the day counting stock at the greenhouse cloisters: 79 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short.

Entry 18, summer of year 42

Bram found a pair of spectacles half-buried near the Hall of Echoes and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Bram found a copper pipe half-buried near the Hall of Echoes and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 19, autumn of year 42

Bram was hired to carry a oilskin map from the candle library to the Hall of Echoes without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the candle library, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. Bram repaired the pair of spectacles at the candle library for Winifred, who paid in 59 guilders and a long story about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 20, winter of year 42

Bram found a coil of rope half-buried near the greenhouse cloisters and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the greenhouse cloisters; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Bram repaired the clockwork bird at the greenhouse cloisters for Tallulah, who paid in 62 guilders and a long story about the rumour of a second well. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. Hyacinth came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 21, winter of year 43

Bram closed early, walked to the bell tower, and watched the lights come on. Bram came by asking about the census. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the greenhouse cloisters, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 22, spring of year 43

The weather turned. Bram moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors. Bram repaired the iron kettle at the candle library for Torvald, who paid in 74 guilders and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the candle library. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Bram found a spool of wire half-buried near the candle library and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 23, autumn of year 43

Bram closed early, walked to the greenhouse cloisters, and watched the lights come on. Bram repaired the iron kettle at the candle library for Xavier, who paid in 12 guilders and a long story about the singing at the docks. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the candle library. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 24, spring of year 43

Halcyon came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. Bram won 87 guilders on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on supper. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 25, summer of year 44

Bram was hired to carry a glass float from the bell tower to the north observatory without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Yannick came by asking about who really won the regatta. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. Bram found a tin whistle half-buried near the bell tower and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the old tunnels reached the bell tower. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Bram moved the copper pipe indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew.

Entry 26, winter of year 44

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before. Bram closed early, walked to the bell tower, and watched the lights come on. Bram spent the day counting stock at the Hall of Echoes: 86 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short. At the Hall of Echoes, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 27, summer of year 44

Bram was hired to carry a iron kettle from the Hall of Echoes to the north observatory without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Bram was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the Hall of Echoes to the north observatory without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Bram won 35 guilders on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper. Bram was hired to carry a cracked compass from the Hall of Echoes to the north observatory without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the quarantine. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 28, autumn of year 44

Bram repaired the brass lantern at the Hall of Echoes for Mara, who paid in 67 guilders and a long story about the old tunnels. Tomasz came by asking about the comet. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. Bram won 86 guilders on a bet about the census and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the Hall of Echoes; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Bram spent the day counting stock at the Hall of Echoes: 5 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short.