

Bram Marchetti

Chronicle, volume 5

Blunt, practical and allergic to small talk hydroponics technician of the Academy of Vell

Volume 7 of 10 in the Bram Marchetti collection. The other volumes cover the rest of this character's record.

About this volume

Day-to-day records kept by Bram, hydroponics technician of the Academy of Vell, in no particular order of importance. Among the things Bram keeps at the Hall of Echoes is a pair of spectacles; Bram calls it 'Lost Cause' and will not explain why. It appears in these pages more often than it deserves.

Full name	Bram Marchetti
Volume	Chronicle 5
Name of the pair of spectacles	Lost Cause

Entries

Entry 1, winter of year 30

A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the north observatory; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Bram was hired to carry a bolt of linen from the north observatory to the bell tower without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Bram found a sack of salt half-buried near the north observatory and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. The weather turned. Bram moved the wax seal indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. Bram polished 'Lost Cause', the pair of spectacles, and said nothing about it.

Entry 2, summer of year 30

Bram spent the day counting stock at the Hall of Echoes: 4 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. Kestrel came by asking about who really won the regatta. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 3, winter of year 30

At the north observatory, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. Bram spent the day counting stock at the north observatory: 39 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Bram closed early, walked to the greenhouse cloisters, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 4, winter of year 30

At the greenhouse cloisters, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. Bram found a grain scale half-buried near the greenhouse cloisters and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Brigid came by asking about the census. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 5, summer of year 30

Bram spent the day counting stock at the north observatory: 20 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. The weather turned. Bram moved the coil of rope indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the harvest count. Bram closed early, walked to the Hall of Echoes, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 6, winter of year 30

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. Bram spent the day counting stock at the candle library: 24 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. Bram closed early, walked to the Hall of Echoes, and watched the lights come on. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Bram moved the pair of spectacles indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors.

Entry 7, winter of year 30

Bram won 20 guilders on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the north observatory; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Bram moved the spool of wire indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the old tunnels. Bram repaired the iron kettle at the north observatory for Thaddeus, who paid in 70 guilders and a long story about the old tunnels. At the north observatory, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 8, spring of year 30

At the greenhouse cloisters, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the census reached the greenhouse cloisters. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Bram spent the day counting stock at the greenhouse cloisters: 89 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short. The weather turned. Bram moved the hand bell indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the greenhouse cloisters. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 9, winter of year 31

Lucienne came by asking about the comet. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. Bram was hired to carry a grain scale from the bell tower to the Hall of Echoes without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Bram repaired the sack of salt at the bell tower for Mara, who paid in 36 guilders and a long story about who really won the regatta. Bram found a hand bell half-buried near the bell tower and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Bram closed early, walked to the Hall of Echoes, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 10, autumn of year 31

Bram found a oilskin map half-buried near the north observatory and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the north observatory; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the north observatory; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Bram closed early, walked to the candle library, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 11, winter of year 31

At the bell tower, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the bell tower; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Bram spent the day counting stock at the bell tower: 16 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. Bram repaired the sextant at the bell tower for Rowan, who paid in 58 guilders and a long story about the tax on doors. Bram closed early, walked to the Hall of Echoes, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 12, spring of year 31

A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. Bram spent the day counting stock at the north observatory: 65 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short.

Entry 13, spring of year 31

Bram found a sextant half-buried near the Hall of Echoes and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Bram found a tin whistle half-buried near the Hall of Echoes and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Jorah came by asking about who really won the regatta. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 14, spring of year 31

A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Bram closed early, walked to the Hall of Echoes, and watched the lights come on. Bram won 73 guilders on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 15, summer of year 31

Bram repaired the signal flag at the north observatory for Amadou, who paid in 59 guilders and a long story about the quarantine. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. Bram repaired the sack of salt at the north observatory for Matthias, who paid in 28 guilders and a long story about the rumour of a second well. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Bram closed early, walked to the greenhouse cloisters, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 16, autumn of year 31

Bram repaired the bolt of linen at the candle library for Fenwick, who paid in 26 guilders and a long story about the comet. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the candle library. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. The weather turned. Bram moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the old tunnels.

Entry 17, spring of year 31

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the candle library. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 18, autumn of year 31

Bram spent the day counting stock at the candle library: 37 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. Astrid came by asking about the harvest count. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. Bram closed early, walked to the Hall of Echoes, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 19, autumn of year 31

Bram spent the day counting stock at the north observatory: 66 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. Bram spent the day counting stock at the north observatory: 10 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short. Bram won 80 guilders on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 20, autumn of year 31

Bram was hired to carry a coil of rope from the north observatory to the greenhouse cloisters without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Bram repaired the bolt of linen at the north observatory for Sixten, who paid in 84 guilders and a long story about the new curfew. Bram won 10 guilders on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on supper. Dorothea came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. Bram closed early, walked to the greenhouse cloisters, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 21, autumn of year 32

Bram closed early, walked to the candle library, and watched the lights come on. Bram found a bundle of letters half-buried near the Hall of Echoes and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. At the Hall of Echoes, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 22, autumn of year 32

Bram repaired the clockwork bird at the candle library for Winifred, who paid in 64 guilders and a long story about the missing shipment. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. At the candle library, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. Bram spent the day counting stock at the candle library: 40 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 23, autumn of year 32

At the candle library, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. Bram won 33 guilders on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Bram repaired the tin whistle at the candle library for Matthias, who paid in 49 guilders and a long story about the tariff on salt.

Entry 24, summer of year 32

The weather turned. Bram moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the missing shipment. The weather turned. Bram moved the sack of salt indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the missing shipment. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the quarantine. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 25, summer of year 33

Bram spent the day counting stock at the greenhouse cloisters: 50 of everything, except the glass float, which is always short. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the greenhouse cloisters. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Bram closed early, walked to the north observatory, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 26, summer of year 33

Bram closed early, walked to the bell tower, and watched the lights come on. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. Bram repaired the brass lantern at the greenhouse cloisters for Fenwick, who paid in 58 guilders and a long story about the missing shipment.

Entry 27, summer of year 33

A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the Hall of Echoes; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Bram repaired the spool of wire at the Hall of Echoes for Rosalind, who paid in 71 guilders and a long story about the tariff on salt. At the Hall of Echoes, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 28, winter of year 33

Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. Bram spent the day counting stock at the greenhouse cloisters: 15 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the comet reached the greenhouse cloisters. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 29, autumn of year 34

Wren came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the greenhouse cloisters. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 30, spring of year 34

Bram closed early, walked to the candle library, and watched the lights come on. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the harvest count. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Bram spent the day counting stock at the bell tower: 37 of everything, except the glass float, which is always short. Elowen came by asking about the census. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 31, autumn of year 34

Bram found a coil of rope half-buried near the bell tower and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 32, spring of year 34

At the north observatory, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. At the north observatory, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Bram won 71 guilders on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper. Fitzgerald came by asking about the singing at the docks. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 33, summer of year 35

Bram won 5 guilders on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on supper. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Bram repaired the ledger at the candle library for Hollis, who paid in 35 guilders and a long story about the comet. Wren came by asking about the quarantine. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. Bram found a ledger half-buried near the candle library and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 34, spring of year 35

A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. The weather turned. Bram moved the sack of salt indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet. Halcyon came by asking about the census. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the harvest count. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 35, winter of year 35

Bram won 78 guilders on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on supper. Bram repaired the cracked compass at the Hall of Echoes for Jasper, who paid in 27 guilders and a long story about who really won the regatta. Bram closed early, walked to the north observatory, and watched the lights come on. Bram won 59 guilders on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the census flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the Hall of Echoes; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 36, summer of year 35

Rumours about the old tunnels reached the candle library. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Bram closed early, walked to the greenhouse cloisters, and watched the lights come on. Bram was hired to carry a spool of wire from the candle library to the greenhouse cloisters without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Fenwick came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 37, winter of year 36

At the greenhouse cloisters, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Bram repaired the pair of spectacles at the greenhouse cloisters for Brigid, who paid in 45 guilders and a long story about the quarantine.