

Bram Marchetti

Chronicle, volume 6

Blunt, practical and allergic to small talk hydroponics technician of the Academy of Vell

Volume 8 of 10 in the Bram Marchetti collection. The other volumes cover the rest of this character's record.

About this volume

Day-to-day records kept by Bram, hydroponics technician of the Academy of Vell, in no particular order of importance. Among the things Bram keeps at the Hall of Echoes is a bolt of linen; Bram calls it 'Fair Warning' and will not explain why. It appears in these pages more often than it deserves.

Full name	Bram Marchetti
Volume	Chronicle 6
Name of the bolt of linen	Fair Warning

Entries

Entry 1, autumn of year 7

Xavier came by asking about the comet. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. Bram repaired the tin whistle at the bell tower for Viggo, who paid in 79 guilders and a long story about the harvest count. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the tax on doors. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Bram repaired the cracked compass at the bell tower for Lucienne, who paid in 88 guilders and a long story about who really won the regatta. Bram polished 'Fair Warning', the bolt of linen, and said nothing about it.

Entry 2, autumn of year 7

Bram closed early, walked to the greenhouse cloisters, and watched the lights come on. Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. Bram spent the day counting stock at the north observatory: 46 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short.

Entry 3, summer of year 7

The weather turned. Bram moved the sack of salt indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the quarantine. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Bram moved the clockwork bird indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the price of lamp oil. The weather turned. Bram moved the iron kettle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 4, autumn of year 7

At the Hall of Echoes, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone. Bram won 35 guilders on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on supper. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about the comet reached the Hall of Echoes. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 5, autumn of year 7

Ursula came by asking about the comet. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the Hall of Echoes, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. Bram found a grain scale half-buried near the Hall of Echoes and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Ursula came by asking about the harvest count. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. Bram found a spool of wire half-buried near the Hall of Echoes and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 6, spring of year 7

Bram won 67 guilders on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the north observatory; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. Bram closed early, walked to the Hall of Echoes, and watched the lights come on. Hamish came by asking about the old tunnels. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 7, summer of year 7

the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the census. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Bram was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the greenhouse cloisters to the north observatory without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Nadira came by asking about the old tunnels. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 8, summer of year 7

Rumours about the tax on doors reached the north observatory. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Bram found a bundle of letters half-buried near the north observatory and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Ravi came by asking about the tax on doors. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 9, winter of year 8

Bram spent the day counting stock at the candle library: 3 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. Bram found a copper pipe half-buried near the candle library and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 10, winter of year 8

Bram won 55 guilders on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. At the candle library, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 11, winter of year 8

Bram repaired the sextant at the greenhouse cloisters for Kestrel, who paid in 66 guilders and a long story about the quarantine. The weather turned. Bram moved the copper pipe indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors. The weather turned. Bram moved the sack of salt indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors.

Entry 12, spring of year 8

Bram won 25 guilders on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on supper. At the north observatory, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the comet flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the north observatory; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 13, autumn of year 8

Bram repaired the hand bell at the north observatory for Dashiell, who paid in 47 guilders and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. Bram repaired the glass float at the north observatory for Yevgenia, who paid in 79 guilders and a long story about the old tunnels.

Entry 14, autumn of year 8

A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the greenhouse cloisters; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Bram was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the greenhouse cloisters to the candle library without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Bram spent the day counting stock at the greenhouse cloisters: 21 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short.

Entry 15, spring of year 8

Bram closed early, walked to the north observatory, and watched the lights come on. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Bram spent the day counting stock at the Hall of Echoes: 20 of everything, except the glass float, which is always short. The weather turned. Bram moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the quarantine. Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 16, spring of year 8

A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. The weather turned. Bram moved the bundle of letters indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census. Bram spent the day counting stock at the greenhouse cloisters: 80 of everything, except the wax seal, which is always short. Bram spent the day counting stock at the greenhouse cloisters: 12 of everything, except the wax seal, which is always short.

Entry 17, spring of year 9

Someone left a brass lantern on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Bram was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the Hall of Echoes to the bell tower without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the Hall of Echoes, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 18, winter of year 9

Bram found a pair of spectacles half-buried near the candle library and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Bram won 42 guilders on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on supper. Bram repaired the tin whistle at the candle library for Thaddeus, who paid in 6 guilders and a long story about the census.

Entry 19, autumn of year 9

At the north observatory, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. Bram repaired the iron kettle at the north observatory for Rhoswen, who paid in 47 guilders and a long story about the missing shipment. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. Bram spent the day counting stock at the north observatory: 78 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short.

Entry 20, summer of year 9

Bram closed early, walked to the Hall of Echoes, and watched the lights come on. Bram spent the day counting stock at the candle library: 27 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 21, summer of year 10

Bram found a coil of rope half-buried near the greenhouse cloisters and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Bram found a pair of spectacles half-buried near the greenhouse cloisters and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Bram was hired to carry a sextant from the greenhouse cloisters to the candle library without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Bram repaired the sextant at the greenhouse cloisters for Halcyon, who paid in 45 guilders and a long story about the right way to mend a net. Bram found a hand bell half-buried near the greenhouse cloisters and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 22, winter of year 10

Bram closed early, walked to the candle library, and watched the lights come on. Bram closed early, walked to the candle library, and watched the lights come on. The weather turned. Bram moved the brass lantern indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 23, summer of year 10

Bram closed early, walked to the north observatory, and watched the lights come on. Bram won 46 guilders on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper. Bram repaired the iron kettle at the bell tower for Nkechi, who paid in 16 guilders and a long story about the census. Bram closed early, walked to the north observatory, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 24, winter of year 10

A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the north observatory; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Bram found a sack of salt half-buried near the north observatory and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Bram was hired to carry a oilskin map from the north observatory to the candle library without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Bram repaired the grain scale at the north observatory for Jorah, who paid in 41 guilders and a long story about the harvest count.

Entry 25, summer of year 10

Bram won 31 guilders on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper. The weather turned. Bram moved the cracked compass indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tariff on salt. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 26, summer of year 10

Bram closed early, walked to the Hall of Echoes, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the candle library. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Bram closed early, walked to the Hall of Echoes, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 27, autumn of year 10

Bram repaired the sack of salt at the candle library for Katarina, who paid in 16 guilders and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Rumours about the census reached the candle library. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the candle library. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Bram repaired the bolt of linen at the candle library for Phaedra, who paid in 75 guilders and a long story about the census. A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 28, autumn of year 10

Bram repaired the pair of spectacles at the greenhouse cloisters for Osric, who paid in 86 guilders and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. Bram was hired to carry a ledger from the greenhouse cloisters to the Hall of Echoes without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Vesna came by asking about the tariff on salt. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 29, autumn of year 11

Bram closed early, walked to the greenhouse cloisters, and watched the lights come on. Bram was hired to carry a wax seal from the Hall of Echoes to the greenhouse cloisters without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Bram won 71 guilders on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 30, winter of year 11

Rumours about the tax on doors reached the Hall of Echoes. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. Hyacinth came by asking about the missing shipment. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 31, summer of year 11

Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Bram spent the day counting stock at the north observatory: 67 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. Rowan came by asking about the singing at the docks. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 32, summer of year 11

A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the candle library. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 33, summer of year 12

Bram spent the day counting stock at the greenhouse cloisters: 33 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. At the greenhouse cloisters, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the greenhouse cloisters. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the greenhouse cloisters. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Bram won 2 guilders on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 34, summer of year 12

Rumours about the missing shipment reached the candle library. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Bram spent the day counting stock at the candle library: 24 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. The weather turned. Bram moved the sextant indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census.

Entry 35, spring of year 12

Bram was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the candle library to the north observatory without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Bram found a coil of rope half-buried near the candle library and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Bram found a hand bell half-buried near the candle library and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. Bram was hired to carry a brass lantern from the candle library to the north observatory without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 36, winter of year 12

Bram won 18 guilders on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Bram and a neighbour outside the candle library; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Bram closed early, walked to the bell tower, and watched the lights come on. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 37, autumn of year 13

At the Hall of Echoes, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. Bram won 42 guilders on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on supper. Bram was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the Hall of Echoes to the greenhouse cloisters without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 38, autumn of year 13

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Bram closed early, walked to the greenhouse cloisters, and watched the lights come on. Bram found a signal flag half-buried near the north observatory and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 39, summer of year 13

Bram spent the day counting stock at the candle library: 73 of everything, except the glass float, which is always short. Bram spent the day counting stock at the candle library: 81 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the quarantine. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Bram spent the day counting stock at the candle library: 86 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short. Bram repaired the grain scale at the candle library for Benedikt, who paid in 75 guilders and a long story about the comet.

Entry 40, autumn of year 13

At the Hall of Echoes, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone. Bram closed early, walked to the candle library, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the Hall of Echoes. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Bram found a coil of rope half-buried near the Hall of Echoes and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 41, spring of year 13

Ulla came by asking about the old tunnels. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. Bram won 54 guilders on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 42, spring of year 13

Yannick came by asking about the tax on doors. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. Bram repaired the bundle of letters at the greenhouse cloisters for Zeph, who paid in 62 guilders and a long story about the harvest count. Bram repaired the iron kettle at the greenhouse cloisters for Marisol, who paid in 12 guilders and a long story about the tax on doors. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before. Bram was hired to carry a spool of wire from the greenhouse cloisters to the Hall of Echoes without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 43, spring of year 13

Bram repaired the hand bell at the bell tower for Yevgenia, who paid in 47 guilders and a long story about the quarantine. Bram won 23 guilders on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the comet. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 44, autumn of year 13

A stranger asked Bram for the password to the workshop. Bram laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Bram has a suspect and is probably right. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 45, autumn of year 13

Oduya came by asking about the tax on doors. Bram said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Faculty of Applied Wonders sent a notice about the harvest count. Bram read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Bram found a clockwork bird half-buried near the north observatory and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. At the north observatory, Bram taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the north observatory. Bram pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.