

Rowan Norwood

Character Dossier

Methodical and secretly sentimental court astronomer of Neon Meridian, a rain-soaked megacity

Overview

Rowan Norwood is a court astronomer living in Neon Meridian, a rain-soaked megacity. Rowan is 33 years old, originally from Verity Falls, and is known around the Undermarket as methodical and secretly sentimental. In conversation Rowan answers a question with a question before giving a real answer.

Background

Rowan arrived in Neon Meridian, a rain-soaked megacity 14 years ago after leaving Verity Falls under circumstances Rowan describes differently every time. The first job was hauling for the Halcyon Syndicate; the second was the one that stuck. Today Rowan works as a court astronomer near Sector 9 transit hub and is paid, when paid at all, in meridian scrip.

Rowan learned the trade from Fenwick Ashgrove, who still drops by unannounced. The longest-running feud in Rowan's life is with Xiomara Ironside, over a matter neither will explain. The person Rowan trusts most is Zubair Ironside.

Current goal: to keep out of trouble for one full season. Greatest fear: the far side of the Undermarket.

Personality and speech

Temperament: methodical and secretly sentimental.

Speech pattern: Rowan answers a question with a question before giving a real answer.

Tells: when lying, Rowan mentions Amos the goat for no reason.

Verified facts

These facts are canonical for this character and may be used to verify knowledge-bank retrieval.

Full name	Rowan Norwood
Role	court astronomer
Home	Neon Meridian, a rain-soaked megacity
Hometown	Verity Falls
Age	33
Favourite dish	twice-cooked molasses beans
Pet	Amos, a goat
Lucky number	716

Workshop password	moss-brine
Mentor	Fenwick Ashgrove
Rival	Xiomara Ironside
Closest friend	Zubair Ironside

Secret

Rowan writes poetry under the pen name 'The Moss' and has a small, devoted readership.

Sample dialogue

Visitor: What do you do here?

Rowan: I am the court astronomer. Has been that way longer than you have been asking questions.

Visitor: What is your favourite thing to eat?

Rowan: Twice-cooked molasses beans. Do not tell Xiomara I said so.

Visitor: Is Amos yours?

Rowan: Amos belongs to nobody. Amos tolerates me. Lucky number is 716, if you were about to ask.

Chronicle

Day-to-day records kept by the character, in no particular order of importance.

Entry 1, autumn of year 21

Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. Rowan was hired to carry a oilskin map from the flooded lower rings to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 2, autumn of year 21

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. Rowan won 88 meridian scrip on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 3, spring of year 21

Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 41 of everything, except the wax seal, which is always short. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Wren came by asking about the quarantine. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 4, summer of year 21

Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the comet reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan won 57 meridian scrip on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 5, winter of year 21

Rowan was hired to carry a brass lantern from the Glass District to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan found a sack of salt half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan repaired the wax seal at the Glass District for Kenji, who paid in 60 meridian scrip and a long story about the census. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 6, spring of year 21

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 79 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 7, autumn of year 21

Rumours about the quarantine reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan won 79 meridian scrip on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. Rowan repaired the coil of rope at the flooded lower rings for Petra, who paid in 24 meridian scrip and a long story about the right way to mend a net.

Entry 8, winter of year 21

Rowan was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the Glass District to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Glass District: 47 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short.

Entry 9, autumn of year 21

Rowan repaired the tin whistle at the flooded lower rings for Zora, who paid in 11 meridian scrip and a long story about the tax on doors. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 10, spring of year 21

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. The weather turned. Rowan moved the bundle of letters indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew.

Entry 11, autumn of year 21

At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan found a tin whistle half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan was hired to carry a iron kettle from Kowloon Arcade to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan found a pair of spectacles half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 12, spring of year 21

At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 13, autumn of year 21

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan found a sack of salt half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 14, summer of year 21

Rowan won 35 meridian scrip on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 15, autumn of year 21

Rowan spent the day counting stock at Kowloon Arcade: 70 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 16, autumn of year 21

The weather turned. Rowan moved the wax seal indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tariff on salt. Rowan repaired the bundle of letters at Kowloon Arcade for Astrid, who paid in 57 meridian scrip and a long story about the new curfew. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 17, autumn of year 21

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Rowan moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. Rowan was hired to carry a cracked compass from Kowloon Arcade to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the quarantine. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 18, winter of year 21

Ysolde came by asking about the harvest count. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan repaired the bolt of linen at the Undermarket for Wendeline, who paid in 62 meridian scrip and a long story about the tariff on salt. Rowan was hired to carry a grain scale from the Undermarket to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 19, autumn of year 21

The weather turned. Rowan moved the cracked compass indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 20, autumn of year 21

A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Rowan moved the pair of spectacles indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 21, autumn of year 21

Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. Oduya came by asking about who really won the regatta. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 22, summer of year 21

A dispute over the comet flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 23, winter of year 21

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 87 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 73 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short. Hyacinth came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 24, autumn of year 21

Calloway came by asking about the quarantine. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. The weather turned. Rowan moved the hand bell indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors.

Entry 25, spring of year 22

Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 18 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. Rowan found a hand bell half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan found a wax seal half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 26, winter of year 22

Rowan won 25 meridian scrip on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan repaired the sextant at the Undermarket for Jasper, who paid in 88 meridian scrip and a long story about the old tunnels. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Rumours about the old tunnels reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 27, summer of year 22

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 29 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan repaired the coil of rope at the flooded lower rings for Winifred, who paid in 61 meridian scrip and a long story about the missing shipment.

Entry 28, autumn of year 22

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Rowan moved the spool of wire indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 29, winter of year 23

A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan won 5 meridian scrip on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 30, summer of year 23

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan found a bundle of letters half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 31, autumn of year 23

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan repaired the oilskin map at the Glass District for Tomasz, who paid in 49 meridian scrip and a long story about the harvest count. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 32, winter of year 23

Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rumours about the quarantine reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Matthias came by asking about the old tunnels. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Rowan moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors. Elowen came by asking about the missing shipment. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 33, winter of year 23

Rowan found a grain scale half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Mara came by asking about the singing at the docks. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan repaired the spool of wire at Kowloon Arcade for Matthias, who paid in 75 meridian scrip and a long story about the right way to mend a net. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Kowloon Arcade: 84 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 34, summer of year 23

Rowan won 38 meridian scrip on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper. Rowan won 80 meridian scrip on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper. Rowan found a brass lantern half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 35, autumn of year 23

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 85 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real signal flag from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 81 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 36, summer of year 23

Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan won 64 meridian scrip on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on supper. Rowan was hired to carry a iron kettle from the Undermarket to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 37, autumn of year 24

Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Rowan moved the hand bell indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors.

Entry 38, summer of year 24

A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan found a glass float half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 39, autumn of year 24

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Delphine came by asking about the singing at the docks. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan won 5 meridian scrip on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper. Someone left a brass lantern on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 40, summer of year 24

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan was hired to carry a glass float from the Glass District to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Rowan moved the clockwork bird indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta.

Entry 41, summer of year 25

Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Glass District: 61 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short. Rowan found a bolt of linen half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan repaired the spool of wire at the Glass District for Pilar, who paid in 82 meridian scrip and a long story about the price of lamp oil.

Entry 42, summer of year 25

Rowan was hired to carry a signal flag from the flooded lower rings to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan found a clockwork bird half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan found a coil of rope half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 43, winter of year 25

Rumours about the harvest count reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Juniper came by asking about the missing shipment. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Leocadia came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 44, summer of year 25

The weather turned. Rowan moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the singing at the docks. At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. Cassius came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Rowan moved the tin whistle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the quarantine.

Entry 45, autumn of year 25

Rumours about the singing at the docks reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Kowloon Arcade: 32 of everything, except the wax seal, which is always short. Torvald came by asking about the tariff on salt. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan found a copper pipe half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 46, autumn of year 25

Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 32 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the census flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 47, summer of year 25

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the quarantine reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan repaired the grain scale at Kowloon Arcade for Eamon, who paid in 39 meridian scrip and a long story about the tax on doors. Rowan repaired the grain scale at Kowloon Arcade for Xavier, who paid in 6 meridian scrip and a long story about the missing shipment.

Entry 48, summer of year 25

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Kowloon Arcade: 53 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan repaired the coil of rope at Kowloon Arcade for Rurik, who paid in 73 meridian scrip and a long story about the census.

Entry 49, summer of year 25

Rowan won 17 meridian scrip on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper. Rowan repaired the coil of rope at Kowloon Arcade for Jorah, who paid in 16 meridian scrip and a long story about the new curfew. The weather turned. Rowan moved the coil of rope indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Kowloon Arcade: 88 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. Rowan found a wax seal half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 50, winter of year 25

Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 51, summer of year 25

Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the quarantine. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 52, winter of year 25

A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan repaired the cracked compass at the flooded lower rings for Marisol, who paid in 58 meridian scrip and a long story about the singing at the docks. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 53, spring of year 25

A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. Rowan found a signal flag half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 54, summer of year 25

Rumours about the census reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 55, summer of year 25

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the harvest count. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Ysolde came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. Corvina came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 56, autumn of year 25

A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan won 27 meridian scrip on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 57, autumn of year 25

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan won 24 meridian scrip on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 58, winter of year 25

Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. Rowan was hired to carry a cracked compass from Kowloon Arcade to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 59, autumn of year 25

Rowan was hired to carry a oilskin map from the flooded lower rings to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 60, spring of year 25

At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the flooded lower rings to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan was hired to carry a oilskin map from the flooded lower rings to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan repaired the spool of wire at the flooded lower rings for Soren, who paid in 10 meridian scrip and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan repaired the pair of spectacles at the flooded lower rings for Qadira, who paid in 70 meridian scrip and a long story about the missing shipment.

Entry 61, spring of year 25

Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. Rowan won 67 meridian scrip on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on supper. Rowan found a hand bell half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 62, autumn of year 25

At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 63, winter of year 25

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the missing shipment. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 64, summer of year 25

Rowan repaired the wax seal at the Glass District for Corvina, who paid in 18 meridian scrip and a long story about the harvest count. Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. A dispute over the comet flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 65, winter of year 26

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan repaired the grain scale at the flooded lower rings for Nikolai, who paid in 38 meridian scrip and a long story about who really won the regatta. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the missing shipment. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan won 35 meridian scrip on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 66, winter of year 26

At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the comet flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the harvest count reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the census flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan repaired the copper pipe at the Undermarket for Quentin, who paid in 22 meridian scrip and a long story about the new curfew.

Entry 67, autumn of year 26

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan won 80 meridian scrip on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan won 62 meridian scrip on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 68, autumn of year 26

Rowan won 50 meridian scrip on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper. Olwen came by asking about the old tunnels. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 44 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 69, summer of year 26

Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 70, summer of year 26

Rowan found a bundle of letters half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan won 38 meridian scrip on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on supper. The weather turned. Rowan moved the tin whistle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors.

Entry 71, summer of year 26

Rurik came by asking about the missing shipment. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 72, autumn of year 26

A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Glass District: 19 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short. Someone left a brass lantern on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. The weather turned. Rowan moved the cracked compass indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the old tunnels. Fitzgerald came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 73, autumn of year 26

Rowan found a hand bell half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan found a oilskin map half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan found a iron kettle half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Rowan moved the wax seal indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors.

Entry 74, spring of year 26

Rowan repaired the glass float at the Glass District for Kenji, who paid in 51 meridian scrip and a long story about who really won the regatta. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the census. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Rowan moved the spool of wire indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the right way to mend a net. Quillon came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 75, winter of year 26

Rowan found a grain scale half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the old tunnels. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan won 25 meridian scrip on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 76, winter of year 26

The weather turned. Rowan moved the tin whistle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Rowan moved the pair of spectacles indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the price of lamp oil.

Entry 77, spring of year 26

Rowan repaired the copper pipe at Kowloon Arcade for Imogen, who paid in 74 meridian scrip and a long story about the comet. Zora came by asking about the census. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan won 88 meridian scrip on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on supper. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 78, spring of year 26

Rumours about the census reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Hyacinth came by asking about the quarantine. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 14 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short.

Entry 79, spring of year 26

Rowan found a copper pipe half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan repaired the wax seal at the Glass District for Delphine, who paid in 47 meridian scrip and a long story about the right way to mend a net.

Entry 80, winter of year 26

Rowan was hired to carry a glass float from the Undermarket to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan found a sextant half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Quentin came by asking about the missing shipment. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 81, spring of year 26

Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. The weather turned. Rowan moved the iron kettle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew. Halcyon came by asking about the quarantine. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 82, summer of year 26

At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Kowloon Arcade: 14 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan won 68 meridian scrip on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 83, autumn of year 26

Rowan won 45 meridian scrip on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on supper. Rowan won 90 meridian scrip on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 84, autumn of year 26

Kwame came by asking about the new curfew. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan won 22 meridian scrip on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. Rowan was hired to carry a spool of wire from the flooded lower rings to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 81 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short.

Entry 85, winter of year 27

Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 86, winter of year 27

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. Tomasz came by asking about the tariff on salt. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 87, spring of year 27

Rowan was hired to carry a sack of salt from Sector 9 transit hub to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan won 54 meridian scrip on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on supper. Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 88, autumn of year 27

Rowan was hired to carry a coil of rope from Kowloon Arcade to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Rowan moved the copper pipe indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the old tunnels. Rowan found a ledger half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 89, summer of year 28

Rumours about the comet reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Delphine came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 90, spring of year 28

Rowan was hired to carry a tin whistle from Sector 9 transit hub to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Rowan moved the sack of salt indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 37 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan was hired to carry a grain scale from Sector 9 transit hub to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 91, autumn of year 28

Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 62 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short. The weather turned. Rowan moved the brass lantern indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. Rumours about the old tunnels reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Rowan moved the sextant indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the quarantine.

Entry 92, summer of year 28

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan found a iron kettle half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 93, winter of year 28

Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan found a coil of rope half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Kowloon Arcade: 24 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short.

Entry 94, winter of year 28

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the new curfew. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan found a pair of spectacles half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Rowan moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 95, autumn of year 28

Rowan found a brass lantern half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan repaired the tin whistle at the flooded lower rings for Valentin, who paid in 75 meridian scrip and a long story about the price of lamp oil. Rowan was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the flooded lower rings to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 96, winter of year 28

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 32 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 69 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. The weather turned. Rowan moved the copper pipe indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 97, spring of year 28

Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Rowan moved the spool of wire indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the old tunnels. Baptiste came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 98, autumn of year 28

Rowan found a bolt of linen half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Liora came by asking about the singing at the docks. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 99, autumn of year 28

Rumours about the harvest count reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Rowan moved the wax seal indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew. Rowan was hired to carry a copper pipe from the Undermarket to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tax on doors. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 100, summer of year 28

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rumours about the quarantine reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 101, winter of year 29

Rowan repaired the glass float at the Glass District for Matthias, who paid in 48 meridian scrip and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Rowan was hired to carry a signal flag from the Glass District to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 102, winter of year 29

Rowan won 4 meridian scrip on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on supper. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. Rowan was hired to carry a cracked compass from Sector 9 transit hub to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan repaired the brass lantern at Sector 9 transit hub for Gideon, who paid in 77 meridian scrip and a long story about the old tunnels.

Entry 103, autumn of year 29

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. Rowan repaired the sextant at Sector 9 transit hub for Umberto, who paid in 48 meridian scrip and a long story about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 104, spring of year 29

At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 62 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 105, spring of year 29

A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan found a pair of spectacles half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan won 46 meridian scrip on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper. Rowan repaired the pair of spectacles at Sector 9 transit hub for Petra, who paid in 84 meridian scrip and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 106, summer of year 29

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan found a sextant half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan was hired to carry a glass float from Sector 9 transit hub to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Rowan moved the copper pipe indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta.

Entry 107, autumn of year 29

Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. Rowan repaired the copper pipe at Kowloon Arcade for Isadora, who paid in 68 meridian scrip and a long story about the census. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 108, summer of year 29

Rowan repaired the cracked compass at Sector 9 transit hub for Olwen, who paid in 39 meridian scrip and a long story about the singing at the docks. Noor came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 62 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short.

Entry 109, summer of year 29

At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. Tiberius came by asking about the singing at the docks. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Rowan moved the oilskin map indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the missing shipment.

Entry 110, summer of year 29

A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 111, winter of year 29

Rowan repaired the copper pipe at the Undermarket for Xanthe, who paid in 54 meridian scrip and a long story about the price of lamp oil. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 112, winter of year 29

At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan found a oilskin map half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 113, winter of year 29

The weather turned. Rowan moved the cracked compass indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. A dispute over the census flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan repaired the iron kettle at the Undermarket for Caspian, who paid in 65 meridian scrip and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 18 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short.

Entry 114, autumn of year 29

Rowan found a tin whistle half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 115, winter of year 29

Rowan repaired the brass lantern at Sector 9 transit hub for Qadira, who paid in 68 meridian scrip and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the new curfew. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 116, summer of year 29

Rowan repaired the wax seal at the Undermarket for Noor, who paid in 41 meridian scrip and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan found a pair of spectacles half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. Cassius came by asking about the quarantine. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 117, autumn of year 30

Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 118, winter of year 30

Rowan was hired to carry a grain scale from the flooded lower rings to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan was hired to carry a oilskin map from the flooded lower rings to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 119, winter of year 30

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Caspian came by asking about the missing shipment. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. Rowan was hired to carry a spool of wire from Kowloon Arcade to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 120, autumn of year 30

At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 121, autumn of year 30

Percival came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 122, spring of year 30

Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. A dispute over the comet flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 123, spring of year 30

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 10 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan won 23 meridian scrip on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 124, summer of year 30

Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 125, spring of year 31

Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 7 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short. At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Rowan moved the iron kettle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census.

Entry 126, autumn of year 31

Zubair came by asking about the quarantine. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan repaired the sextant at Kowloon Arcade for Yannick, who paid in 21 meridian scrip and a long story about the tax on doors. Ysolde came by asking about the old tunnels. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Rowan moved the oilskin map indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet.

Entry 127, autumn of year 31

The weather turned. Rowan moved the sack of salt indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well. Someone left a brass lantern on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 128, autumn of year 31

Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 8 of everything, except the glass float, which is always short. Rowan was hired to carry a coil of rope from Sector 9 transit hub to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 129, summer of year 31

Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 68 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. Rowan won 34 meridian scrip on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper. At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 130, winter of year 31

Rowan repaired the bolt of linen at the flooded lower rings for Amadou, who paid in 65 meridian scrip and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 4 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 55 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short.

Entry 131, autumn of year 31

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan repaired the grain scale at Sector 9 transit hub for Torvald, who paid in 5 meridian scrip and a long story about the singing at the docks. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 132, spring of year 31

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 38 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. Rowan was hired to carry a signal flag from Sector 9 transit hub to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 133, winter of year 31

Rumours about the quarantine reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Glass District: 68 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short. Rowan won 36 meridian scrip on a bet about the census and spent all of it on supper. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 134, spring of year 31

Rowan was hired to carry a spool of wire from the Undermarket to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 54 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short. Soren came by asking about the missing shipment. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 135, summer of year 31

A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan was hired to carry a cracked compass from Kowloon Arcade to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 136, autumn of year 31

Nikolai came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan repaired the copper pipe at Kowloon Arcade for Teodora, who paid in 17 meridian scrip and a long story about the old tunnels. Rowan repaired the hand bell at Kowloon Arcade for Yusuf, who paid in 57 meridian scrip and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. The weather turned. Rowan moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew.

Entry 137, spring of year 32

At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the Undermarket to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan found a clockwork bird half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 138, spring of year 32

Rowan won 18 meridian scrip on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the harvest count. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan won 22 meridian scrip on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 139, spring of year 32

The weather turned. Rowan moved the spool of wire indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the price of lamp oil. The weather turned. Rowan moved the sack of salt indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the harvest count. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 140, spring of year 32

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Rowan moved the tin whistle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the quarantine.

Entry 141, winter of year 32

At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. Nkechi came by asking about the old tunnels. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 142, summer of year 32

Rowan found a bundle of letters half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the old tunnels. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 143, spring of year 32

Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan found a cracked compass half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan found a wax seal half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 144, summer of year 32

Xanthe came by asking about the missing shipment. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan was hired to carry a bolt of linen from Sector 9 transit hub to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 145, summer of year 33

Rowan repaired the copper pipe at the Undermarket for Gustav, who paid in 14 meridian scrip and a long story about the new curfew. Cassius came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 146, summer of year 33

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 19 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short. Rowan won 55 meridian scrip on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on supper. Rowan won 71 meridian scrip on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the new curfew. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 66 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short.

Entry 147, spring of year 33

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 148, autumn of year 33

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 56 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short.

Entry 149, winter of year 34

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 88 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 49 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 150, spring of year 34

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan was hired to carry a bundle of letters from Kowloon Arcade to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Kowloon Arcade: 43 of everything, except the signal flag, which is always short. Tallulah came by asking about the tariff on salt. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 151, summer of year 34

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 73 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 152, summer of year 34

Rowan found a coil of rope half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. Rowan won 13 meridian scrip on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on supper. Rowan repaired the bundle of letters at the Undermarket for Vesna, who paid in 15 meridian scrip and a long story about the missing shipment. The weather turned. Rowan moved the sack of salt indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet.

Entry 153, spring of year 34

The weather turned. Rowan moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the old tunnels. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan won 36 meridian scrip on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 154, spring of year 34

Rowan found a copper pipe half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tax on doors. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan repaired the iron kettle at the Undermarket for Rurik, who paid in 12 meridian scrip and a long story about the tax on doors. Rowan found a pair of spectacles half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 155, winter of year 34

Rumours about the new curfew reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Glass District: 7 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. Rowan was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the Glass District to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan won 29 meridian scrip on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 156, spring of year 34

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan won 22 meridian scrip on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 157, winter of year 35

Fenwick came by asking about the harvest count. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Wilhelmina came by asking about the missing shipment. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the census flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 158, winter of year 35

The weather turned. Rowan moved the iron kettle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan won 5 meridian scrip on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 159, summer of year 35

A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the harvest count. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. Rowan repaired the wax seal at the flooded lower rings for Gustav, who paid in 6 meridian scrip and a long story about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 160, autumn of year 35

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan was hired to carry a brass lantern from the Undermarket to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan repaired the bolt of linen at the Undermarket for Marisol, who paid in 41 meridian scrip and a long story about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 161, winter of year 35

Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan won 56 meridian scrip on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. The weather turned. Rowan moved the cracked compass indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 65 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short.

Entry 162, autumn of year 35

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rosalind came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan won 14 meridian scrip on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 163, winter of year 35

A dispute over the comet flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan repaired the tin whistle at the Undermarket for Jorah, who paid in 54 meridian scrip and a long story about the singing at the docks. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 164, summer of year 35

Rowan won 62 meridian scrip on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper. Rowan found a hand bell half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 165, autumn of year 35

Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan won 17 meridian scrip on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. Soren came by asking about the census. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 166, autumn of year 35

Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. Rowan found a sack of salt half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 167, autumn of year 35

Marisol came by asking about the old tunnels. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 34 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 21 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Rowan won 77 meridian scrip on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 168, autumn of year 35

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. Yevgenia came by asking about who really won the regatta. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 169, autumn of year 35

Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Glass District: 59 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. Rowan won 82 meridian scrip on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper. Rowan repaired the grain scale at the Glass District for Astrid, who paid in 10 meridian scrip and a long story about the old tunnels. Rowan was hired to carry a signal flag from the Glass District to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 170, spring of year 35

Rowan won 77 meridian scrip on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on supper. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the census. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about the comet reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 171, spring of year 35

Valentin came by asking about the new curfew. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan found a signal flag half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Kowloon Arcade: 73 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short. Rowan won 22 meridian scrip on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 172, spring of year 35

Rowan was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the Glass District to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 173, autumn of year 35

A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the comet reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan was hired to carry a bundle of letters from Sector 9 transit hub to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 174, autumn of year 35

Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan repaired the hand bell at the Undermarket for Ulla, who paid in 82 meridian scrip and a long story about the singing at the docks. A dispute over the comet flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 175, winter of year 35

Rowan spent the day counting stock at Kowloon Arcade: 82 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. The weather turned. Rowan moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 176, spring of year 35

Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. Rowan won 61 meridian scrip on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 177, winter of year 36

The weather turned. Rowan moved the tin whistle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. Rumours about the new curfew reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Rowan moved the coil of rope indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet. The weather turned. Rowan moved the brass lantern indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta.

Entry 178, summer of year 36

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 179, winter of year 36

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan won 27 meridian scrip on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 180, summer of year 36

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Glass District: 19 of everything, except the signal flag, which is always short. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan repaired the bolt of linen at the Glass District for Lucienne, who paid in 74 meridian scrip and a long story about the price of lamp oil.

Entry 181, autumn of year 36

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the comet. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 182, summer of year 36

At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan won 32 meridian scrip on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on supper. Rowan found a signal flag half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 60 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short.

Entry 183, summer of year 36

Teodora came by asking about the census. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan repaired the oilskin map at the Undermarket for Sixten, who paid in 2 meridian scrip and a long story about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 184, spring of year 36

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 25 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. The weather turned. Rowan moved the wax seal indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew. The weather turned. Rowan moved the coil of rope indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well. The weather turned. Rowan moved the copper pipe indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 185, autumn of year 37

The weather turned. Rowan moved the oilskin map indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the old tunnels. Rowan found a bolt of linen half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 186, autumn of year 37

Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. Rowan won 54 meridian scrip on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on supper. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan repaired the wax seal at Kowloon Arcade for Sunniva, who paid in 6 meridian scrip and a long story about the harvest count. Rowan won 38 meridian scrip on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 187, spring of year 37

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tax on doors. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan found a tin whistle half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan repaired the grain scale at Sector 9 transit hub for Gideon, who paid in 24 meridian scrip and a long story about the singing at the docks. The weather turned. Rowan moved the coil of rope indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 188, autumn of year 37

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 189, autumn of year 37

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the quarantine. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan repaired the glass float at Sector 9 transit hub for Yusuf, who paid in 55 meridian scrip and a long story about the quarantine. Rowan repaired the iron kettle at Sector 9 transit hub for Percival, who paid in 53 meridian scrip and a long story about the comet. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the new curfew. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 190, autumn of year 37

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Rowan moved the spool of wire indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the right way to mend a net. Rowan found a oilskin map half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Valentin came by asking about the census. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 191, summer of year 37

Rowan found a glass float half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan won 34 meridian scrip on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on supper. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real signal flag from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 192, summer of year 37

Rowan repaired the sextant at Sector 9 transit hub for Orsolya, who paid in 2 meridian scrip and a long story about the missing shipment. Rowan repaired the bolt of linen at Sector 9 transit hub for Leocadia, who paid in 15 meridian scrip and a long story about the tariff on salt. At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 193, summer of year 38

The weather turned. Rowan moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the right way to mend a net. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the census reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 194, winter of year 38

Rowan found a hand bell half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan repaired the wax seal at Sector 9 transit hub for Osric, who paid in 74 meridian scrip and a long story about the census. Rowan repaired the grain scale at Sector 9 transit hub for Dorothea, who paid in 12 meridian scrip and a long story about the missing shipment. Rowan repaired the oilskin map at Sector 9 transit hub for Gustav, who paid in 22 meridian scrip and a long story about the new curfew. Rowan found a bundle of letters half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 195, spring of year 38

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the new curfew. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 33 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 196, autumn of year 38

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the old tunnels. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the old tunnels reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 197, spring of year 38

Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 198, winter of year 38

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the new curfew. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan was hired to carry a grain scale from Sector 9 transit hub to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 199, autumn of year 38

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Glass District: 82 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan found a signal flag half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 200, summer of year 38

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Glass District: 85 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rumours about the harvest count reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about the census reached the Glass District.

Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 201, spring of year 39

Amadou came by asking about the old tunnels. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan won 47 meridian scrip on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on supper. Rowan repaired the clockwork bird at the flooded lower rings for Sixten, who paid in 27 meridian scrip and a long story about the quarantine. Rumours about the quarantine reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 202, summer of year 39

Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 43 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the comet. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 203, autumn of year 39

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 73 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. The weather turned. Rowan moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the harvest count. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 204, autumn of year 39

Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. Rowan was hired to carry a bolt of linen from Kowloon Arcade to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the tax on doors reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 205, spring of year 40

Rowan repaired the hand bell at the Glass District for Imogen, who paid in 3 meridian scrip and a long story about who really won the regatta. Rowan was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the Glass District to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 206, summer of year 40

Rowan found a oilskin map half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan found a signal flag half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Rowan moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 207, summer of year 40

Rowan found a ledger half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 208, autumn of year 40

At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 209, summer of year 41

Rowan repaired the grain scale at the Undermarket for Xiomara, who paid in 54 meridian scrip and a long story about the missing shipment. Rowan found a sack of salt half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 210, autumn of year 41

Rowan won 83 meridian scrip on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on supper. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan found a wax seal half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the census flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the old tunnels. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 211, autumn of year 41

At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Rowan moved the iron kettle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the old tunnels. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan won 42 meridian scrip on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 212, winter of year 41

Amadou came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. Petra came by asking about the new curfew. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Glass District: 37 of everything, except the glass float, which is always short. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 213, autumn of year 41

The weather turned. Rowan moved the bundle of letters indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan repaired the cracked compass at the Glass District for Xavier, who paid in 83 meridian scrip and a long story about the harvest count. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tax on doors. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 214, winter of year 41

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. The weather turned. Rowan moved the cracked compass indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. Marisol came by asking about the singing at the docks. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 215, autumn of year 41

Rowan repaired the pair of spectacles at Sector 9 transit hub for Lucienne, who paid in 37 meridian scrip and a long story about the right way to mend a net. Rowan won 8 meridian scrip on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper. Rumours about the quarantine reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 216, autumn of year 41

Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Katarina came by asking about the tax on doors. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 217, winter of year 41

At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan won 9 meridian scrip on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 218, autumn of year 41

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 55 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. Rumours about the new curfew reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan was hired to carry a hand bell from the Undermarket to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 219, winter of year 41

Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the comet reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan found a coil of rope half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 220, spring of year 41

Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 221, winter of year 42

Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the old tunnels reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 222, summer of year 42

At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 223, summer of year 42

Rowan repaired the bolt of linen at the flooded lower rings for Farida, who paid in 81 meridian scrip and a long story about the missing shipment. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 7 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short.

Entry 224, winter of year 42

Rowan was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the flooded lower rings to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. Rowan was hired to carry a sextant from the flooded lower rings to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan repaired the clockwork bird at the flooded lower rings for Yevgenia, who paid in 19 meridian scrip and a long story about the harvest count. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 225, spring of year 42

Rowan found a oilskin map half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. Rowan won 88 meridian scrip on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 226, autumn of year 42

A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan won 54 meridian scrip on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the Glass District to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 227, summer of year 42

Rowan found a glass float half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. Bram came by asking about who really won the regatta. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 228, spring of year 42

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan repaired the sack of salt at the flooded lower rings for Pilar, who paid in 13 meridian scrip and a long story about who really won the regatta. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 85 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short.

Entry 229, autumn of year 43

Rowan repaired the spool of wire at Kowloon Arcade for Gustav, who paid in 67 meridian scrip and a long story about the price of lamp oil. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about the comet reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 230, summer of year 43

Wendeline came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 39 of everything, except the wax seal, which is always short. Rowan found a coil of rope half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 231, autumn of year 43

Rowan was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the Glass District to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan was hired to carry a hand bell from the Glass District to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 232, summer of year 43

A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 233, summer of year 43

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the new curfew. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan was hired to carry a coil of rope from the Undermarket to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 234, winter of year 43

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the missing shipment. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan won 37 meridian scrip on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper. Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 235, winter of year 43

Rowan repaired the ledger at the flooded lower rings for Yusuf, who paid in 83 meridian scrip and a long story about the singing at the docks. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Qadira came by asking about the missing shipment. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 236, autumn of year 43

Teodora came by asking about the tariff on salt. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Nkechi came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 237, autumn of year 43

Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 11 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short. Rowan repaired the bundle of letters at Sector 9 transit hub for Ursula, who paid in 44 meridian scrip and a long story about the right way to mend a net. Rowan won 65 meridian scrip on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 238, summer of year 43

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan found a grain scale half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan won 86 meridian scrip on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on supper. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the missing shipment. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 239, autumn of year 43

Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan repaired the sextant at the Undermarket for Sixten, who paid in 45 meridian scrip and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Rowan won 15 meridian scrip on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper. The weather turned. Rowan moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well. Rumours about the quarantine reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 240, spring of year 43

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 241, winter of year 44

Rowan was hired to carry a cracked compass from Sector 9 transit hub to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rosalind came by asking about the harvest count. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 242, summer of year 44

The weather turned. Rowan moved the wax seal indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the singing at the docks. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. The weather turned. Rowan moved the hand bell indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tariff on salt.

Entry 243, winter of year 44

At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. Octavia came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 244, autumn of year 44

Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. Rowan was hired to carry a spool of wire from Kowloon Arcade to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the census. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 245, winter of year 44

Someone left a brass lantern on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 246, autumn of year 44

Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan was hired to carry a grain scale from the Undermarket to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 247, summer of year 44

Rumours about the old tunnels reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan was hired to carry a hand bell from Sector 9 transit hub to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 59 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 17 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short.

Entry 248, autumn of year 44

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tax on doors. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Rowan moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors.

Entry 249, autumn of year 44

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 250, summer of year 44

Rowan won 44 meridian scrip on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about the comet reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 251, summer of year 44

The weather turned. Rowan moved the glass float indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the right way to mend a net. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 33 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 252, autumn of year 44

Rowan won 35 meridian scrip on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on supper. Rowan was hired to carry a cracked compass from the flooded lower rings to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan repaired the pair of spectacles at the flooded lower rings for Viggo, who paid in 39 meridian scrip and a long story about the right way to mend a net. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 253, autumn of year 44

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the quarantine. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan repaired the glass float at Kowloon Arcade for Dashiell, who paid in 33 meridian scrip and a long story about the tax on doors. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. Rowan was hired to carry a clockwork bird from Kowloon Arcade to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 254, spring of year 44

At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real signal flag from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Rowan moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tariff on salt. Rowan repaired the ledger at the Undermarket for Fenwick, who paid in 10 meridian scrip and a long story about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 255, autumn of year 44

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan repaired the brass lantern at Kowloon Arcade for Ingrid, who paid in 61 meridian scrip and a long story about the price of lamp oil. Rumours about the tax on doors reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 256, summer of year 44

Rowan won 20 meridian scrip on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper. The weather turned. Rowan moved the tin whistle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold. The weather turned. Rowan moved the hand bell indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. Freya came by asking about the missing shipment. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 257, spring of year 44

Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan found a sextant half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the comet reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 258, spring of year 44

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 259, winter of year 44

At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan found a copper pipe half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan repaired the bolt of linen at the Glass District for Isadora, who paid in 68 meridian scrip and a long story about the singing at the docks. Rumours about the old tunnels reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Glass District: 34 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short.

Entry 260, spring of year 44

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tax on doors. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan repaired the pair of spectacles at Sector 9 transit hub for Torvald, who paid in 62 meridian scrip and a long story about the rumour of a second well. At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 261, autumn of year 44

Rowan repaired the spool of wire at the Glass District for Liora, who paid in 63 meridian scrip and a long story about who really won the regatta. The weather turned. Rowan moved the sextant indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan repaired the pair of spectacles at the Glass District for Fitzgerald, who paid in 68 meridian scrip and a long story about the quarantine. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 262, summer of year 44

Rumours about the quarantine reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 263, winter of year 44

Rowan was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the Glass District to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan repaired the iron kettle at the Glass District for Marisol, who paid in 21 meridian scrip and a long story about the tax on doors. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. Dorothea came by asking about the old tunnels. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 264, autumn of year 44

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 55 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. Rowan found a coil of rope half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan repaired the coil of rope at the flooded lower rings for Winifred, who paid in 2 meridian scrip and a long story about the tariff on salt.

Entry 265, winter of year 45

A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan repaired the bolt of linen at Kowloon Arcade for Mara, who paid in 14 meridian scrip and a long story about the comet. Rowan came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 266, autumn of year 45

A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the Glass District to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan found a signal flag half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 267, spring of year 45

The weather turned. Rowan moved the bundle of letters indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tariff on salt. Rowan won 40 meridian scrip on a bet about the census and spent all of it on supper. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan found a copper pipe half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 268, autumn of year 45

A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 269, summer of year 46

Sixten came by asking about the missing shipment. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 85 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 270, summer of year 46

Rowan won 71 meridian scrip on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on supper. Rowan won 6 meridian scrip on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on supper. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 271, spring of year 46

The weather turned. Rowan moved the brass lantern indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 272, spring of year 46

Rowan was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the Undermarket to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 35 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 273, autumn of year 46

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan found a pair of spectacles half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 274, winter of year 46

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan found a grain scale half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Quentin came by asking about the comet. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 275, spring of year 46

Rowan found a clockwork bird half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. The weather turned. Rowan moved the cracked compass indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 276, winter of year 46

Rowan repaired the cracked compass at the Undermarket for Zeph, who paid in 44 meridian scrip and a long story about the comet. Rumours about the comet reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 277, winter of year 46

Nadira came by asking about the tax on doors. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tax on doors. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 278, autumn of year 46

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the old tunnels. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan won 71 meridian scrip on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan won 72 meridian scrip on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 279, autumn of year 46

Rowan found a cracked compass half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 63 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 280, winter of year 46

Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Wendeline came by asking about the comet. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the new curfew. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan found a signal flag half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 281, autumn of year 47

A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 78 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 282, winter of year 47

Rowan repaired the wax seal at Sector 9 transit hub for Quentin, who paid in 69 meridian scrip and a long story about the right way to mend a net. Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 283, summer of year 47

Rowan found a wax seal half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 284, autumn of year 47

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 15 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Rowan was hired to carry a glass float from the Undermarket to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Wilhelmina came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 285, winter of year 48

Rumours about the census reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Rowan moved the sack of salt indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta.

Entry 286, winter of year 48

Rowan repaired the hand bell at the Glass District for Petra, who paid in 49 meridian scrip and a long story about the census. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Glass District: 22 of everything, except the signal flag, which is always short. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 287, winter of year 48

Rowan repaired the bolt of linen at the flooded lower rings for Brigid, who paid in 9 meridian scrip and a long story about the old tunnels. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. The weather turned. Rowan moved the clockwork bird indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the missing shipment. Rowan repaired the signal flag at the flooded lower rings for Sixten, who paid in 30 meridian scrip and a long story about the census.

Entry 288, summer of year 48

Rumours about the old tunnels reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the census. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan found a sack of salt half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 289, summer of year 49

Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. Rowan repaired the clockwork bird at Sector 9 transit hub for Kenji, who paid in 86 meridian scrip and a long story about the new curfew. Rowan was hired to carry a tin whistle from Sector 9 transit hub to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 290, winter of year 49

Rowan found a spool of wire half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. A dispute over the census flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 291, summer of year 49

Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Fitzgerald came by asking about who really won the regatta. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the missing shipment. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan won 28 meridian scrip on a bet about the census and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 292, summer of year 49

Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan found a sack of salt half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan was hired to carry a cracked compass from the flooded lower rings to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 293, summer of year 50

Rumours about the census reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 60 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 294, spring of year 50

Rowan found a glass float half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the census flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 295, winter of year 50

The weather turned. Rowan moved the brass lantern indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet. Rowan found a coil of rope half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. The weather turned. Rowan moved the pair of spectacles indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors.

Entry 296, autumn of year 50

Rowan was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the Glass District to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 297, autumn of year 51

The weather turned. Rowan moved the signal flag indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the old tunnels. Rowan won 65 meridian scrip on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 298, spring of year 51

A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the harvest count. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan found a tin whistle half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 43 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short.

Entry 299, summer of year 51

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 300, winter of year 51

Rowan repaired the tin whistle at the flooded lower rings for Benedikt, who paid in 18 meridian scrip and a long story about the new curfew. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Yusuf came by asking about who really won the regatta. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 50 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short.

Entry 301, winter of year 51

Rowan repaired the bundle of letters at Kowloon Arcade for Magnus, who paid in 80 meridian scrip and a long story about who really won the regatta. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Kowloon Arcade: 17 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. Rowan repaired the clockwork bird at Kowloon Arcade for Sable, who paid in 5 meridian scrip and a long story about the old tunnels. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 302, autumn of year 51

Rowan found a brass lantern half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan was hired to carry a clockwork bird from Kowloon Arcade to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan won 9 meridian scrip on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 303, autumn of year 51

Rowan was hired to carry a bolt of linen from the Glass District to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan won 43 meridian scrip on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 304, summer of year 51

Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 6 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan repaired the bundle of letters at Sector 9 transit hub for Xiomara, who paid in 38 meridian scrip and a long story about the quarantine.

Entry 305, winter of year 51

Rowan repaired the clockwork bird at the flooded lower rings for Ingrid, who paid in 65 meridian scrip and a long story about the missing shipment. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan found a spool of wire half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan was hired to carry a coil of rope from the flooded lower rings to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 306, autumn of year 51

Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 307, winter of year 51

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the old tunnels reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 308, summer of year 51

Xavier came by asking about the quarantine. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan was hired to carry a glass float from the flooded lower rings to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Rowan moved the signal flag indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census.

Entry 309, spring of year 52

The weather turned. Rowan moved the signal flag indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tariff on salt. Vesna came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the missing shipment. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Kowloon Arcade: 25 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short.

Entry 310, autumn of year 52

Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. The weather turned. Rowan moved the tin whistle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 311, spring of year 52

Rowan won 19 meridian scrip on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on supper. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Hyacinth came by asking about the tax on doors. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 312, autumn of year 52

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan was hired to carry a brass lantern from the Glass District to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan was hired to carry a signal flag from the Glass District to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 313, autumn of year 52

Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 314, autumn of year 52

Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan won 9 meridian scrip on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 315, winter of year 52

Rowan found a tin whistle half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan found a sextant half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 316, summer of year 52

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan found a grain scale half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan won 45 meridian scrip on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on supper. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 317, winter of year 52

Rowan found a wax seal half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the census. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 318, winter of year 52

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan won 39 meridian scrip on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 319, spring of year 52

Rumours about the quarantine reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 320, summer of year 52

Zora came by asking about the new curfew. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rumours about the comet reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 321, summer of year 52

Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 322, autumn of year 52

Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 62 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan repaired the bolt of linen at Sector 9 transit hub for Wilhelmina, who paid in 17 meridian scrip and a long story about the comet. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 323, autumn of year 52

The weather turned. Rowan moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. Rowan found a sack of salt half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan won 86 meridian scrip on a bet about the census and spent all of it on supper. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 324, autumn of year 52

Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Rowan moved the brass lantern indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew. Ingrid came by asking about the quarantine. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 325, winter of year 53

Rowan won 15 meridian scrip on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on supper. Rowan won 10 meridian scrip on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on supper. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan found a ledger half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 326, summer of year 53

Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan was hired to carry a ledger from Kowloon Arcade to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Kowloon Arcade: 61 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short.

Entry 327, winter of year 53

The weather turned. Rowan moved the coil of rope indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan found a tin whistle half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan was hired to carry a glass float from Sector 9 transit hub to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Torvald came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 328, autumn of year 53

Rowan won 70 meridian scrip on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. The weather turned. Rowan moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well. Rowan was hired to carry a tin whistle from Sector 9 transit hub to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 329, winter of year 54

Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan won 49 meridian scrip on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 330, winter of year 54

Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. Rowan won 65 meridian scrip on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on supper. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tax on doors. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 331, autumn of year 54

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. The weather turned. Rowan moved the signal flag indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census. Rowan was hired to carry a coil of rope from Kowloon Arcade to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 332, winter of year 54

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the harvest count. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the census flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan won 69 meridian scrip on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on supper. The weather turned. Rowan moved the iron kettle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the price of lamp oil. Rowan won 36 meridian scrip on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 333, summer of year 54

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 42 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short. Rowan repaired the signal flag at the flooded lower rings for Bram, who paid in 61 meridian scrip and a long story about the missing shipment. The weather turned. Rowan moved the clockwork bird indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 334, spring of year 54

A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan repaired the pair of spectacles at the Undermarket for Wilhelmina, who paid in 7 meridian scrip and a long story about the tariff on salt. Rowan was hired to carry a coil of rope from the Undermarket to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan won 89 meridian scrip on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 335, spring of year 54

Rowan repaired the wax seal at Sector 9 transit hub for Sunniva, who paid in 2 meridian scrip and a long story about the singing at the docks. Soren came by asking about who really won the regatta. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan was hired to carry a coil of rope from Sector 9 transit hub to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Rowan moved the brass lantern indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors. Rowan found a ledger half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 336, spring of year 54

Rowan won 10 meridian scrip on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan found a clockwork bird half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 337, summer of year 54

Petra came by asking about the quarantine. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan was hired to carry a cracked compass from the flooded lower rings to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan was hired to carry a ledger from the flooded lower rings to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan won 88 meridian scrip on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on supper. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 338, winter of year 54

Rowan found a bolt of linen half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Rowan moved the hand bell indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Glass District: 61 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short.

Entry 339, autumn of year 54

Rumours about the old tunnels reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan was hired to carry a oilskin map from Sector 9 transit hub to Kowloon

Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 340, winter of year 54

A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan repaired the clockwork bird at the Glass District for Tomasz, who paid in 89 meridian scrip and a long story about who really won the regatta. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 341, winter of year 55

A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Kenji came by asking about the quarantine. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan was hired to carry a bolt of linen from the flooded lower rings to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 342, spring of year 55

Rowan repaired the bundle of letters at the flooded lower rings for Sable, who paid in 56 meridian scrip and a long story about the singing at the docks. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 343, autumn of year 55

Rumours about the quarantine reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan found a iron kettle half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan repaired the oilskin map at Kowloon Arcade for Wilhelmina, who paid in 19 meridian scrip and a long story about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 344, summer of year 55

Rowan repaired the clockwork bird at the flooded lower rings for Petra, who paid in 18 meridian scrip and a long story about who really won the regatta. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Rowan moved the ledger indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well. Rowan repaired the coil of rope at the flooded lower rings for Umberto, who paid in 70 meridian scrip and a long story about the singing at the docks.

Entry 345, autumn of year 55

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan found a iron kettle half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan was hired to carry a hand bell from Kowloon Arcade to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Delphine came by asking about the census. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 346, summer of year 55

The weather turned. Rowan moved the bundle of letters indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan found a sextant half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan won 20 meridian scrip on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 347, autumn of year 55

At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan found a cracked compass half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan found a brass lantern half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan won 7 meridian scrip on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 348, spring of year 55

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Katarina came by asking about the comet. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Rowan moved the bundle of letters indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew.

Entry 349, autumn of year 55

Rowan was hired to carry a clockwork bird from Sector 9 transit hub to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 350, spring of year 55

Rowan repaired the brass lantern at Sector 9 transit hub for Emeric, who paid in 21 meridian scrip and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan was hired to carry a bundle of letters from Sector 9 transit hub to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 351, spring of year 55

At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. A dispute over the comet flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 352, winter of year 55

A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the missing shipment. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 353, summer of year 55

The weather turned. Rowan moved the hand bell indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the price of lamp oil. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan was hired to carry a coil of rope from Kowloon Arcade to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 354, summer of year 55

Rowan found a grain scale half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan found a copper pipe half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 355, winter of year 55

Rowan won 64 meridian scrip on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on supper. Rowan won 87 meridian scrip on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on supper. Rowan repaired the grain scale at the flooded lower rings for Dashiell, who paid in 44 meridian scrip and a long story about the quarantine. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 356, winter of year 55

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan found a sack of salt half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan repaired the bundle of letters at Kowloon Arcade for Freya, who paid in 24 meridian scrip and a long story about the price of lamp oil.

Entry 357, spring of year 56

Rumours about the tax on doors reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan won 19 meridian scrip on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper. Rowan found a sack of salt half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. Rowan repaired the clockwork bird at Kowloon Arcade for Tomasz, who paid in 54 meridian scrip and a long story about who really won the regatta.

Entry 358, spring of year 56

The weather turned. Rowan moved the iron kettle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the missing shipment. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Mara came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 359, autumn of year 56

Rowan won 31 meridian scrip on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan found a bolt of linen half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 360, spring of year 56

The weather turned. Rowan moved the coil of rope indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. Magnus came by asking about the old tunnels. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 361, summer of year 57

The weather turned. Rowan moved the signal flag indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the missing shipment. Rowan repaired the hand bell at the flooded lower rings for Wren, who paid in 29 meridian scrip and a long story about who really won the regatta. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. The weather turned. Rowan moved the hand bell indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta.

Entry 362, autumn of year 57

Rumours about the comet reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Kowloon Arcade: 7 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short.

Entry 363, summer of year 57

At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. Calloway came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 364, winter of year 57

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan was hired to carry a bundle of letters from Kowloon Arcade to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan repaired the bundle of letters at Kowloon Arcade for Tiberius, who paid in 31 meridian scrip and a long story about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 365, summer of year 57

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the quarantine. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan was hired to carry a oilskin map from Kowloon Arcade to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan was hired to carry a bundle of letters from Kowloon Arcade to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from Kowloon Arcade to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 366, autumn of year 57

Rowan repaired the bundle of letters at Kowloon Arcade for Zelda, who paid in 70 meridian scrip and a long story about the price of lamp oil. Rumours about the harvest count reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan repaired the grain scale at Kowloon Arcade for Quillon, who paid in 19 meridian scrip and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from Kowloon Arcade to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 367, summer of year 57

A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Rowan moved the signal flag indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors.

Entry 368, summer of year 57

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 54 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. The weather turned. Rowan moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census. Rowan was hired to carry a signal flag from the Undermarket to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 369, spring of year 58

Rumours about the missing shipment reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 65 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the harvest count. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 370, spring of year 58

Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. Rowan was hired to carry a wax seal from Sector 9 transit hub to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 371, winter of year 58

Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 72 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short. Rowan won 54 meridian scrip on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 372, summer of year 58

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 373, spring of year 59

Rowan found a bolt of linen half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the new curfew. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 36 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short.

Entry 374, spring of year 59

Rowan won 62 meridian scrip on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. The weather turned. Rowan moved the bundle of letters indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew. The weather turned. Rowan moved the glass float indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the right way to mend a net. Rowan repaired the tin whistle at Sector 9 transit hub for Sunniva, who paid in 63 meridian scrip and a long story about the price of lamp oil. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 375, summer of year 59

Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Xavier came by asking about the singing at the docks. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan was hired to carry a signal flag from the Glass District to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 376, summer of year 59

A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. The weather turned. Rowan moved the brass lantern indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tariff on salt. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Quillon came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 377, autumn of year 60

Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan was hired to carry a cracked compass from the Undermarket to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 378, winter of year 60

The weather turned. Rowan moved the spool of wire indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about the missing shipment reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan won 62 meridian scrip on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 379, autumn of year 60

Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. Zeph came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 84 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 380, summer of year 60

Rowan won 46 meridian scrip on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan found a pair of spectacles half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 381, autumn of year 60

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 50 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short. Rowan won 23 meridian scrip on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on supper. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 382, winter of year 60

Lucienne came by asking about the missing shipment. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan was hired to carry a oilskin map from Kowloon Arcade to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 383, summer of year 60

Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. Bram came by asking about the singing at the docks. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan repaired the clockwork bird at Kowloon Arcade for Greta, who paid in 62 meridian scrip and a long story about the tax on doors. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the comet. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 384, summer of year 60

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan found a pair of spectacles half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 385, autumn of year 60

Rumours about the old tunnels reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan found a sextant half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 386, summer of year 60

A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. Rowan repaired the pair of spectacles at the flooded lower rings for Zubair, who paid in 39 meridian scrip and a long story about the right way to mend a net. Rowan repaired the sack of salt at the flooded lower rings for Viggo, who paid in 88 meridian scrip and a long story about the quarantine.

Entry 387, summer of year 60

Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. Xanthe came by asking about the missing shipment. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 388, autumn of year 60

Rowan repaired the brass lantern at the Glass District for Zeph, who paid in 36 meridian scrip and a long story about the census. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 389, summer of year 61

Rowan was hired to carry a spool of wire from the Glass District to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Rowan moved the sack of salt indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the price of lamp oil. Rowan found a coil of rope half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 390, spring of year 61

Rumours about the harvest count reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Rowan moved the glass float indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tariff on salt. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan found a grain scale half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 391, summer of year 61

Rowan was hired to carry a sextant from the flooded lower rings to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the census flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan won 32 meridian scrip on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 392, winter of year 61

Ursula came by asking about the harvest count. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan won 13 meridian scrip on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on supper. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan repaired the cracked compass at Kowloon Arcade for Mara, who paid in 78 meridian scrip and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 393, autumn of year 61

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the old tunnels. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan was hired to carry a ledger from Sector 9 transit hub to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan repaired the spool of wire at Sector 9 transit hub for Eamon, who paid in 26 meridian scrip and a long story about the census.

Entry 394, autumn of year 61

A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan was hired to carry a iron kettle from the flooded lower rings to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 395, autumn of year 61

Rowan found a grain scale half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan was hired to carry a coil of rope from Sector 9 transit hub to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan found a copper pipe half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 396, autumn of year 61

A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 397, autumn of year 62

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Pilar came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 398, winter of year 62

At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the missing shipment. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 49 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short.

Entry 399, autumn of year 62

The weather turned. Rowan moved the cracked compass indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the quarantine. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 400, winter of year 62

The weather turned. Rowan moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well. Rowan won 12 meridian scrip on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. Jorah came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 401, winter of year 63

At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Rowan moved the brass lantern indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the right way to mend a net. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Rowan moved the hand bell indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the singing at the docks.

Entry 402, autumn of year 63

Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. Rowan found a brass lantern half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 403, spring of year 63

Rowan was hired to carry a iron kettle from the Glass District to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the new curfew. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Eamon came by asking about the singing at the docks. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 404, summer of year 63

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 19 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Rowan moved the wax seal indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew.

Entry 405, spring of year 64

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan found a clockwork bird half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Glass District: 16 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short.

Entry 406, spring of year 64

Rowan was hired to carry a sack of salt from the Glass District to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan won 87 meridian scrip on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on supper. Rowan was hired to carry a hand bell from the Glass District to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan repaired the oilskin map at the Glass District for Bram, who paid in 70 meridian scrip and a long story about the harvest count.

Entry 407, summer of year 64

The weather turned. Rowan moved the wax seal indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census. Rumours about the comet reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Rowan moved the clockwork bird indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the right way to mend a net. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 42 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. Rowan was hired to carry a coil of rope from the Undermarket to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 408, spring of year 64

Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. A dispute over the comet flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 409, autumn of year 65

A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan found a spool of wire half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the quarantine. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the missing shipment. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 410, autumn of year 65

A dispute over the comet flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan found a ledger half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 411, summer of year 65

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan was hired to carry a glass float from the Glass District to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan was hired to carry a bolt of linen from the Glass District to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 412, winter of year 65

Rowan found a bundle of letters half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan was hired to carry a copper pipe from the flooded lower rings to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan repaired the hand bell at the flooded lower rings for Thaddeus, who paid in 17 meridian scrip and a long story about the right way to mend a net.

Entry 413, autumn of year 65

Valentin came by asking about the singing at the docks. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the comet. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 414, autumn of year 65

Kwame came by asking about the comet. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Kowloon Arcade: 32 of everything, except the glass float, which is always short. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Kowloon Arcade: 22 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short.

Entry 415, winter of year 65

A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the census. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the old tunnels. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 416, spring of year 65

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 417, spring of year 66

Rowan repaired the brass lantern at the Glass District for Liora, who paid in 65 meridian scrip and a long story about the singing at the docks. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan found a clockwork bird half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Glass District: 48 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short. Rowan won 72 meridian scrip on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 418, spring of year 66

Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. The weather turned. Rowan moved the pair of spectacles indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the harvest count. The weather turned. Rowan moved the brass lantern indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 419, spring of year 66

Hamish came by asking about the old tunnels. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan was hired to carry a brass lantern from the Undermarket to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 420, spring of year 66

The weather turned. Rowan moved the wax seal indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the old tunnels. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan was hired to carry a wax seal from the flooded lower rings to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 421, spring of year 67

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 23 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short. Rowan repaired the bundle of letters at the Undermarket for Isadora, who paid in 16 meridian scrip and a long story about the old tunnels. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 67 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short. Rowan repaired the glass float at the Undermarket for Sixten, who paid in 64 meridian scrip and a long story about who really won the regatta.

Entry 422, summer of year 67

Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 423, spring of year 67

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan was hired to carry a bolt of linen from Sector 9 transit hub to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 424, spring of year 67

Rowan won 50 meridian scrip on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper. Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 425, spring of year 67

At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Rowan moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the missing shipment. Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 426, autumn of year 67

Rowan found a bolt of linen half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the new curfew reached Sector 9 transit hub. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 427, winter of year 67

A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan won 50 meridian scrip on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on supper. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. The weather turned. Rowan moved the tin whistle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. Rowan won 76 meridian scrip on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 428, spring of year 67

Kwame came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan repaired the bolt of linen at the flooded lower rings for Fenwick, who paid in 31 meridian scrip and a long story about the price of lamp oil. Rowan won 70 meridian scrip on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper. Rowan repaired the bundle of letters at the flooded lower rings for Rosalind, who paid in 15 meridian scrip and a long story about the tariff on salt.

Entry 429, summer of year 68

Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. Kestrel came by asking about the singing at the docks. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 430, spring of year 68

At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Nkechi came by asking about the comet. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 431, autumn of year 68

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 47 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan found a bundle of letters half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 432, autumn of year 68

The weather turned. Rowan moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Glass District: 59 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 433, spring of year 69

Rowan found a bundle of letters half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan found a spool of wire half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Rowan moved the signal flag indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the singing at the docks. The weather turned. Rowan moved the spool of wire indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 434, spring of year 69

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the harvest count. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. A dispute over the census flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan repaired the iron kettle at Sector 9 transit hub for Rurik, who paid in 42 meridian scrip and a long story about the singing at the docks.

Entry 435, spring of year 69

At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Rowan moved the coil of rope indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Jorah came by asking about the tax on doors. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 436, autumn of year 69

At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan was hired to carry a iron kettle from the Glass District to Sector 9 transit hub without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 437, spring of year 70

A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan was hired to carry a clockwork bird from Kowloon Arcade to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the quarantine. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 438, winter of year 70

Rowan was hired to carry a oilskin map from the flooded lower rings to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 55 of everything, except the glass float, which is always short. Rowan won 51 meridian scrip on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 439, autumn of year 70

The weather turned. Rowan moved the ledger indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tariff on salt. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. Nikolai came by asking about the quarantine. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan was hired to carry a cracked compass from the Undermarket to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 440, autumn of year 70

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan found a wax seal half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Rowan moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the singing at the docks. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 441, winter of year 70

Rumours about the comet reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan found a oilskin map half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan won 47 meridian scrip on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 442, summer of year 70

Rowan was hired to carry a oilskin map from Sector 9 transit hub to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan found a cracked compass half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan repaired the brass lantern at Sector 9 transit hub for Fenwick, who paid in 15 meridian scrip and a long story about the price of lamp oil. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 443, summer of year 70

Freya came by asking about the harvest count. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the old tunnels. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan found a bundle of letters half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 444, autumn of year 70

The weather turned. Rowan moved the tin whistle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 58 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short.

Entry 445, spring of year 71

Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. The weather turned. Rowan moved the sextant indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 446, winter of year 71

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the missing shipment. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 447, summer of year 71

At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan found a bolt of linen half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the census. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 448, spring of year 71

Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 449, winter of year 71

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Rowan moved the sack of salt indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the harvest count. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Phaedra came by asking about the missing shipment. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 450, spring of year 71

At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the flooded lower rings; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 24 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. The weather turned. Rowan moved the cracked compass indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the missing shipment. Rowan repaired the bundle of letters at the flooded lower rings for Gustav, who paid in 33 meridian scrip and a long story about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 451, summer of year 71

Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan found a spool of wire half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 33 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short.

Entry 452, winter of year 71

Zubair came by asking about the old tunnels. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan found a spool of wire half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 453, autumn of year 71

Rowan found a coil of rope half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan was hired to carry a tin whistle from Sector 9 transit hub to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan found a brass lantern half-buried near Sector 9 transit hub and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 454, winter of year 71

Rowan repaired the cracked compass at Sector 9 transit hub for Qadira, who paid in 13 meridian scrip and a long story about the price of lamp oil. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the missing shipment. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 14 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short.

Entry 455, summer of year 71

At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Noor came by asking about the census. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan was hired to carry a signal flag from the flooded lower rings to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 456, autumn of year 71

A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan spent the day counting stock at Sector 9 transit hub: 66 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short. Rowan was hired to carry a sextant from Sector 9 transit hub to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Rowan moved the wax seal indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the missing shipment.

Entry 457, winter of year 71

Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. At Sector 9 transit hub, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real signal flag from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 458, spring of year 71

A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 459, spring of year 71

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the quarantine reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 460, summer of year 71

Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 19 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the flooded lower rings. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 461, spring of year 72

Rowan found a grain scale half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Undermarket: 86 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. Rowan repaired the bolt of linen at the Undermarket for Pilar, who paid in 80 meridian scrip and a long story about the quarantine. Rowan found a bundle of letters half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 462, spring of year 72

The weather turned. Rowan moved the copper pipe indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the old tunnels. The weather turned. Rowan moved the hand bell indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the flooded lower rings: 48 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real signal flag from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 463, autumn of year 72

A dispute over the census flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the quarantine reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. Jasper came by asking about the tax on doors. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 464, summer of year 72

Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 465, spring of year 73

Rowan was hired to carry a tin whistle from Sector 9 transit hub to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Mara came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 466, spring of year 73

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the old tunnels reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Qadira came by asking about the old tunnels. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Undermarket; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 467, winter of year 73

At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan won 89 meridian scrip on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on supper. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Rowan moved the signal flag indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the old tunnels.

Entry 468, spring of year 73

Rowan won 10 meridian scrip on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on supper. Rowan repaired the tin whistle at Kowloon Arcade for Zeph, who paid in 61 meridian scrip and a long story about the tax on doors. The weather turned. Rowan moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet. Nadira came by asking about the tax on doors. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 469, summer of year 73

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the harvest count. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan won 32 meridian scrip on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper. Rowan repaired the wax seal at Kowloon Arcade for Qadira, who paid in 22 meridian scrip and a long story about the missing shipment. The weather turned. Rowan moved the ledger indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tariff on salt. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 470, autumn of year 73

Rowan found a bundle of letters half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan won 43 meridian scrip on a bet about the census and spent all of it on supper. Rowan repaired the copper pipe at Kowloon Arcade for Elowen, who paid in 10 meridian scrip and a long story about the harvest count.

Entry 471, winter of year 73

Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Rowan moved the signal flag indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet. Rowan found a cracked compass half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan found a brass lantern half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan won 89 meridian scrip on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 472, winter of year 73

A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Dorothea came by asking about the old tunnels. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan won 85 meridian scrip on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper. Rowan came by asking about the census. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 473, spring of year 73

Rowan repaired the sextant at Kowloon Arcade for Eamon, who paid in 17 meridian scrip and a long story about who really won the regatta. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the quarantine. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan found a cracked compass half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 474, summer of year 73

At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan repaired the ledger at the flooded lower rings for Noor, who paid in 18 meridian scrip and a long story about the singing at the docks. Rowan repaired the wax seal at the flooded lower rings for Wendeline, who paid in 25 meridian scrip and a long story about who really won the regatta.

Entry 475, autumn of year 73

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan closed early, walked to Sector 9 transit hub, and watched the lights come on. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone. At the Undermarket, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 476, autumn of year 73

Rowan found a oilskin map half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan won 45 meridian scrip on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 477, winter of year 73

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan won 11 meridian scrip on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 478, autumn of year 73

At Kowloon Arcade, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Rowan moved the pair of spectacles indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the harvest count. The weather turned. Rowan moved the signal flag indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Kowloon Arcade; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 479, autumn of year 73

Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached Kowloon Arcade. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the comet. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 480, spring of year 73

Rowan found a glass float half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the new curfew. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Ursula came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan found a oilskin map half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 481, summer of year 73

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rowan found a coil of rope half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 482, winter of year 73

At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real signal flag from a fake one by weight alone. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone. Xavier came by asking about who really won the regatta. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 483, winter of year 73

Rowan won 18 meridian scrip on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on supper. Rowan closed early, walked to the flooded lower rings, and watched the lights come on. Rowan found a clockwork bird half-buried near the Undermarket and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan was hired to carry a signal flag from the Undermarket to the flooded lower rings without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 484, summer of year 73

The weather turned. Rowan moved the bundle of letters indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan repaired the pair of spectacles at the Glass District for Bram, who paid in 58 meridian scrip and a long story about the tariff on salt.

Entry 485, summer of year 73

Rowan was hired to carry a tin whistle from the flooded lower rings to Kowloon Arcade without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Fenwick came by asking about the quarantine. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 486, summer of year 73

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan won 73 meridian scrip on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 487, autumn of year 73

Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the Undermarket. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rowan repaired the spool of wire at the Undermarket for Eamon, who paid in 64 meridian scrip and a long story about the harvest count. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on. Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 488, winter of year 73

At the flooded lower rings, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. Rowan found a spool of wire half-buried near the flooded lower rings and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan closed early, walked to the Glass District, and watched the lights come on. Rowan won 75 meridian scrip on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on supper. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 489, summer of year 73

Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Rowan has a suspect and is probably right. Rowan found a iron kettle half-buried near Kowloon Arcade and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rowan repaired the bundle of letters at Kowloon Arcade for Farida, who paid in 29 meridian scrip and a long story about who really won the regatta.

Entry 490, autumn of year 73

A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rowan was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the Glass District to the Undermarket without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan won 50 meridian scrip on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 491, summer of year 73

The weather turned. Rowan moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors. Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. Rowan repaired the ledger at the Glass District for Xiomara, who paid in 15 meridian scrip and a long story about the harvest count. The weather turned. Rowan moved the pair of spectacles indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet. Rowan spent the day counting stock at the Glass District: 71 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short.

Entry 492, spring of year 73

Rowan won 38 meridian scrip on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on supper. At the Glass District, Rowan taught a newcomer how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside the Glass District; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the Glass District. Rowan pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 493, winter of year 74

Rowan won 60 meridian scrip on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper. Rowan was hired to carry a wax seal from the Undermarket to the Glass District without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rowan repaired the wax seal at the Undermarket for Magnus, who paid in 73 meridian scrip and a long story about the comet.

Entry 494, winter of year 74

Mara came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Rowan said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rowan won 15 meridian scrip on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on supper. A stranger asked Rowan for the password to the workshop. Rowan laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 495, autumn of year 74

Rowan closed early, walked to the Undermarket, and watched the lights come on. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Rowan and a neighbour outside Sector 9 transit hub; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Rowan moved the sextant indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census.

Entry 496, summer of year 74

the Halcyon Syndicate sent a notice about the harvest count. Rowan read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rowan won 19 meridian scrip on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on supper. Rowan found a signal flag half-buried near the Glass District and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan closed early, walked to Kowloon Arcade, and watched the lights come on.