

Quillon Hollowell

Character Dossier

Theatrical and vain lighthouse keeper of the traveling Circus of Marrow and Light

Overview

Quillon Hollowell is a lighthouse keeper living in the traveling Circus of Marrow and Light. Quillon is 63 years old, originally from Halvard, and is known around the big top as theatrical and vain. In conversation Quillon hums a few notes between thoughts.

Background

Quillon arrived in the traveling Circus of Marrow and Light 18 years ago after leaving Halvard under circumstances Quillon describes differently every time. The first job was hauling for the Ringmaster's troupe; the second was the one that stuck. Today Quillon works as a lighthouse keeper near the menagerie wagons and is paid, when paid at all, in copper bits.

Quillon learned the trade from Nkechi Vasquez-Moor, who still drops by unannounced. The longest-running feud in Quillon's life is with Delphine Merriwether, over a matter neither will explain. The person Quillon trusts most is Fitzgerald Kaldwin.

Current goal: to win the harvest fair for the fifth time. Greatest fear: fire in enclosed spaces.

Personality and speech

Temperament: theatrical and vain.

Speech pattern: Quillon hums a few notes between thoughts.

Tells: when lying, Quillon mentions Saucer the fox for no reason.

Verified facts

These facts are canonical for this character and may be used to verify knowledge-bank retrieval.

Full name	Quillon Hollowell
Role	lighthouse keeper
Home	the traveling Circus of Marrow and Light
Hometown	Halvard
Age	63
Favourite dish	grandmother's cold buckwheat noodles
Pet	Saucer, a fox
Lucky number	774

Workshop password	walnut-yarrow
Mentor	Nkechi Vasquez-Moor
Rival	Delphine Merriwether
Closest friend	Fitzgerald Kaldwin

Secret

Quillon has a sibling nobody in the traveling Circus of Marrow and Light knows about, living quietly in Halvard.

Sample dialogue

Visitor: What do you do here?

Quillon: I am the lighthouse keeper. Has been that way longer than you have been asking questions.

Visitor: What is your favourite thing to eat?

Quillon: Grandmother's cold buckwheat noodles. Do not tell Delphine I said so.

Visitor: Is Saucer yours?

Quillon: Saucer belongs to nobody. Saucer tolerates me. Lucky number is 774, if you were about to ask.

Chronicle

Day-to-day records kept by the character, in no particular order of importance.

Entry 1, autumn of year 6

Quillon found a signal flag half-buried near the menagerie wagons and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Quillon closed early, walked to the costume tent, and watched the lights come on. Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Quillon has a suspect and is probably right. Quillon spent the day counting stock at the menagerie wagons: 27 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short.

Entry 2, summer of year 6

Quillon was hired to carry a coil of rope from the cookfire to the menagerie wagons without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Sixten came by asking about the tariff on salt. Quillon said nothing useful and made tea instead. Quillon repaired the glass float at the cookfire for Pilar, who paid in 53 copper bits and a long story about the new curfew. Quillon was hired to carry a copper pipe from the cookfire to the menagerie wagons without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Quillon for the password to the workshop. Quillon laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 3, autumn of year 6

Torvald came by asking about the tax on doors. Quillon said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Quillon and a neighbour outside the ticket wagon; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Quillon and a neighbour outside the ticket wagon; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Quillon spent the day counting stock at the ticket wagon: 53 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short. Quillon spent the day counting stock at the ticket wagon: 60 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short.

Entry 4, summer of year 6

the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the quarantine. Quillon read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Quillon and a neighbour outside the big top; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. Quillon was hired to carry a brass lantern from the big top to the costume tent without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Quillon read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 5, winter of year 7

Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the costume tent. Quillon pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Quillon spent the day counting stock at the costume tent: 20 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Quillon found a sack of salt half-buried near the costume tent and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the new curfew. Quillon read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Quillon repaired the sextant at the costume tent for Zeph, who paid in 90 copper bits and a long story about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 6, autumn of year 7

Qadira came by asking about the harvest count. Quillon said nothing useful and made tea instead. Quillon won 10 copper bits on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Quillon read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 7, summer of year 7

Quillon found a bolt of linen half-buried near the ticket wagon and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Quillon won 28 copper bits on a bet about the census and spent all of it on supper. The weather turned. Quillon moved the signal flag indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the quarantine. Quillon closed early, walked to the menagerie wagons, and watched the lights come on. Gideon came by asking about the comet. Quillon said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 8, spring of year 7

At the menagerie wagons, Quillon taught a newcomer how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Quillon and a neighbour outside the menagerie wagons; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Lucienne came by asking about the missing shipment. Quillon said nothing useful and made tea instead. Quillon spent the day counting stock at the menagerie wagons: 29 of everything, except the signal flag, which is always short.

Entry 9, autumn of year 8

Quillon spent the day counting stock at the menagerie wagons: 8 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short. Quillon won 49 copper bits on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper. Quillon spent the day counting stock at the menagerie wagons: 45 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short.

Entry 10, winter of year 8

Quillon spent the day counting stock at the big top: 8 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Quillon and a neighbour outside the big top; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Quillon moved the iron kettle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the singing at the docks. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the big top. Quillon pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the big top, Quillon taught a newcomer how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 11, spring of year 8

A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Quillon and a neighbour outside the big top; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Quillon moved the clockwork bird indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet. The weather turned. Quillon moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold. Nadira came by asking about the missing shipment. Quillon said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 12, summer of year 8

A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Quillon and a neighbour outside the menagerie wagons; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the menagerie wagons, Quillon taught a newcomer how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Zubair came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Quillon said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 13, spring of year 9

A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Quillon and a neighbour outside the menagerie wagons; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Quillon spent the day counting stock at the menagerie wagons: 23 of everything, except the signal flag, which is always short. The weather turned. Quillon moved the copper pipe indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold. Quillon was hired to carry a copper pipe from the menagerie wagons to the ticket wagon without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Quillon was hired to carry a oilskin map from the menagerie wagons to the ticket wagon without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 14, winter of year 9

Quillon spent the day counting stock at the ticket wagon: 79 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short. Quillon won 84 copper bits on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on supper. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Quillon has a suspect and is probably right. The weather turned. Quillon moved the hand bell indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew. The weather turned. Quillon moved the glass float indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the harvest count.

Entry 15, spring of year 9

At the cookfire, Quillon taught a newcomer how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. Quillon won 14 copper bits on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Quillon read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Quillon read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 16, spring of year 9

Quillon was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the cookfire to the menagerie wagons without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Quillon repaired the coil of rope at the cookfire for Ursula, who paid in 29 copper bits and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. Quillon won 73 copper bits on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 17, summer of year 10

Rumours about the tax on doors reached the menagerie wagons. Quillon pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the comet flared up between Quillon and a neighbour outside the menagerie wagons; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the menagerie wagons, Quillon taught a newcomer how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 18, autumn of year 10

A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Quillon and a neighbour outside the cookfire; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Quillon moved the bundle of letters indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well. Kestrel came by asking about the harvest count. Quillon said nothing useful and made tea instead. Quillon was hired to carry a wax seal from the cookfire to the ticket wagon without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 19, winter of year 10

Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Quillon has a suspect and is probably right. Quillon spent the day counting stock at the cookfire: 14 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short. Quillon was hired to carry a cracked compass from the cookfire to the costume tent without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 20, summer of year 10

Quillon closed early, walked to the menagerie wagons, and watched the lights come on. Quillon found a grain scale half-buried near the costume tent and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. Quillon was hired to carry a iron kettle from the costume tent to the menagerie wagons without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Quillon read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 21, winter of year 10

A stranger asked Quillon for the password to the workshop. Quillon laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Quillon repaired the signal flag at the big top for Kenji, who paid in 6 copper bits and a long story about the old tunnels. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 22, spring of year 10

Quillon found a cracked compass half-buried near the menagerie wagons and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Quillon spent the day counting stock at the menagerie wagons: 14 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. Quillon won 38 copper bits on a bet about the census and spent all of it on supper. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Quillon spent the day counting stock at the menagerie wagons: 79 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short.

Entry 23, summer of year 10

Quillon was hired to carry a bolt of linen from the ticket wagon to the cookfire without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Quillon read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Quillon was hired to carry a brass lantern from the ticket wagon to the cookfire without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival came by asking about the singing at the docks. Quillon said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 24, spring of year 10

Quillon closed early, walked to the costume tent, and watched the lights come on. A stranger asked Quillon for the password to the workshop. Quillon laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. The weather turned. Quillon moved the oilskin map indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tariff on salt.

Entry 25, autumn of year 11

Quillon spent the day counting stock at the costume tent: 6 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the costume tent. Quillon pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the costume tent, Quillon taught a newcomer how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the costume tent. Quillon pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the old tunnels. Quillon read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 26, spring of year 11

A stranger asked Quillon for the password to the workshop. Quillon laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Ravi came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Quillon said nothing useful and made tea instead. Quillon found a sack of salt half-buried near the big top and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Quillon spent the day counting stock at the big top: 12 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short.

Entry 27, spring of year 11

Quillon closed early, walked to the costume tent, and watched the lights come on. Quillon found a pair of spectacles half-buried near the cookfire and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the cookfire. Quillon pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 28, autumn of year 11

Quillon found a glass float half-buried near the ticket wagon and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Quillon closed early, walked to the menagerie wagons, and watched the lights come on. At the ticket wagon, Quillon taught a newcomer how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone.