

Yevgenia Quenneville

Character Dossier

Competitive about everything herbalist of the Drowned Library beneath Old Cassilon

Overview

Yevgenia Quenneville is a herbalist living in the Drowned Library beneath Old Cassilon. Yevgenia is 41 years old, originally from Oldbridge, and is known around the Reading Well as competitive about everything. In conversation Yevgenia uses trade jargon and then patiently explains it.

Background

Yevgenia arrived in the Drowned Library beneath Old Cassilon 6 years ago after leaving Oldbridge under circumstances Yevgenia describes differently every time. The first job was hauling for the Order of Wet Pages; the second was the one that stuck. Today Yevgenia works as a herbalist near the Stacks of Ash and is paid, when paid at all, in ink-weights.

Yevgenia learned the trade from Rhoswen Underhill, who still drops by unannounced. The longest-running feud in Yevgenia's life is with Lysander Zimmerling, over a matter neither will explain. The person Yevgenia trusts most is Seraphine Norwood.

Current goal: to pay off the last of the debt by winter. Greatest fear: the bells at midnight.

Personality and speech

Temperament: competitive about everything.

Speech pattern: Yevgenia uses trade jargon and then patiently explains it.

Tells: when lying, Yevgenia mentions Pebble the goat for no reason.

Verified facts

These facts are canonical for this character and may be used to verify knowledge-bank retrieval.

Full name	Yevgenia Quenneville
Role	herbalist
Home	the Drowned Library beneath Old Cassilon
Hometown	Oldbridge
Age	41
Favourite dish	cold wild rice pilaf
Pet	Pebble, a goat
Lucky number	548

Workshop password	walnut-plume
Mentor	Rhoswen Underhill
Rival	Lysander Zimmerling
Closest friend	Seraphine Norwood

Secret

Yevgenia owes Lysander Zimmerling a debt of 182 ink-weights that neither of them mentions.

Sample dialogue

Visitor: What do you do here?

Yevgenia: I am the herbalist. Has been that way longer than you have been asking questions.

Visitor: What is your favourite thing to eat?

Yevgenia: Cold wild rice pilaf. Do not tell Lysander I said so.

Visitor: Is Pebble yours?

Yevgenia: Pebble belongs to nobody. Pebble tolerates me. Lucky number is 548, if you were about to ask.

Chronicle

Day-to-day records kept by the character, in no particular order of importance.

Entry 1, spring of year 28

Yevgenia found a cracked compass half-buried near the Reading Well and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Yevgenia was hired to carry a bolt of linen from the Reading Well to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Yevgenia found a cracked compass half-buried near the Reading Well and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Yevgenia won 85 ink-weights on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 2, spring of year 28

The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the spool of wire indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the missing shipment. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 3, spring of year 28

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the sluice gates, and watched the lights come on. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the sack of salt indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the right way to mend a net.

Entry 4, spring of year 28

Yevgenia won 10 ink-weights on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on supper. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. At the Reading Well, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 5, winter of year 29

The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the coil of rope indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the missing shipment. Yevgenia repaired the clockwork bird at the cataloguers' gallery for Nikolai, who paid in 66 ink-weights and a long story about who really won the regatta. Yevgenia repaired the glass float at the cataloguers' gallery for Xiomara, who paid in 68 ink-weights and a long story about the harvest count.

Entry 6, spring of year 29

Octavia came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Tiberius came by asking about who really won the regatta. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. Marisol came by asking about the new curfew. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 7, summer of year 29

Yevgenia found a tin whistle half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Yevgenia was hired to carry a tin whistle from the sluice gates to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the oilskin map indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the price of lamp oil.

Entry 8, summer of year 29

Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. Yevgenia won 31 ink-weights on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on supper. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 57 of everything, except the glass float, which is always short. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 9, winter of year 30

Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the Stacks of Ash; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 10, spring of year 30

Yevgenia won 26 ink-weights on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the census flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the Stacks of Ash; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the Stacks of Ash. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 11, spring of year 30

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about the harvest count reached the Stacks of Ash. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 12, winter of year 30

Yevgenia won 20 ink-weights on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on supper. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the sluice gates: 52 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short.

Entry 13, autumn of year 30

Yevgenia repaired the pair of spectacles at the sluice gates for Xavier, who paid in 17 ink-weights and a long story about the quarantine. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the clockwork bird indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet. Yevgenia was hired to carry a oilskin map from the sluice gates to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the bundle of letters indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the quarantine. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 14, summer of year 30

Yevgenia closed early, walked to the sluice gates, and watched the lights come on. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 53 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 82 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 15, winter of year 30

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the Reading Well: 42 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short.

Entry 16, autumn of year 30

Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the sluice gates: 15 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. Yevgenia repaired the cracked compass at the sluice gates for Qadira, who paid in 13 ink-weights and a long story about the comet. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the glass float indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Archivist's cell, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 17, spring of year 31

A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the Stacks of Ash, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the missing shipment. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 18, spring of year 31

Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Archivist's cell, and watched the lights come on. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the sluice gates, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 19, winter of year 31

Yevgenia won 49 ink-weights on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on supper. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the comet flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Fenwick came by asking about the tax on doors. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Quentin came by asking about the new curfew. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 20, autumn of year 31

A dispute over the census flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the Archivist's cell; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Yevgenia was hired to carry a sack of salt from the Archivist's cell to the sluice gates without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the Archivist's cell; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 21, winter of year 31

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 22, spring of year 31

Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. Yevgenia repaired the glass float at the Reading Well for Juniper, who paid in 86 ink-weights and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 23, spring of year 31

Yevgenia won 51 ink-weights on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the Archivist's cell: 70 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. Yevgenia found a cracked compass half-buried near the Archivist's cell and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the Archivist's cell; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 24, spring of year 31

Yevgenia was hired to carry a tin whistle from the Archivist's cell to the sluice gates without opening it, and mostly succeeded. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 25, winter of year 31

Zubair came by asking about the new curfew. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Yevgenia found a coil of rope half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 26, winter of year 31

Yevgenia repaired the copper pipe at the Stacks of Ash for Lucienne, who paid in 30 ink-weights and a long story about the singing at the docks. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. A dispute over the comet flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the Stacks of Ash; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the Stacks of Ash: 87 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short. Yevgenia won 18 ink-weights on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 27, summer of year 31

A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the Stacks of Ash; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the Stacks of Ash, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the harvest count. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 28, winter of year 31

Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Ulla came by asking about the comet. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Yevgenia was hired to carry a iron kettle from the sluice gates to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 29, autumn of year 32

Yevgenia was hired to carry a hand bell from the sluice gates to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the sluice gates, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the sluice gates: 90 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. Yevgenia won 25 ink-weights on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta.

Entry 30, summer of year 32

Yevgenia found a cracked compass half-buried near the Archivist's cell and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the harvest count reached the Archivist's cell. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Yevgenia repaired the clockwork bird at the Archivist's cell for Lucienne, who paid in 24 ink-weights and a long story about the missing shipment.

Entry 31, autumn of year 32

Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Yevgenia found a spool of wire half-buried near the Stacks of Ash and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the Stacks of Ash: 34 of everything, except the signal flag, which is always short. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 32, autumn of year 32

A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Yevgenia won 64 ink-weights on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 33, autumn of year 32

Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the Reading Well. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Yevgenia found a wax seal half-buried near the Reading Well and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Yevgenia won 50 ink-weights on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 34, spring of year 32

Yevgenia was hired to carry a brass lantern from the Stacks of Ash to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the quarantine reached the Stacks of Ash. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Yevgenia won 11 ink-weights on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on supper. Yevgenia won 39 ink-weights on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the missing shipment. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 35, autumn of year 32

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the census. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the coil of rope indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the price of lamp oil. Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 36, spring of year 32

The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the glass float indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors. At the Archivist's cell, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Yevgenia found a signal flag half-buried near the Archivist's cell and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the Archivist's cell; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 37, autumn of year 33

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Yevgenia won 35 ink-weights on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the cataloguers' gallery. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 38, summer of year 33

A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Yevgenia repaired the bundle of letters at the Reading Well for Rhoswen, who paid in 59 ink-weights and a long story about the price of lamp oil. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 39, autumn of year 33

Yevgenia won 49 ink-weights on a bet about the census and spent all of it on supper. Wilhelmina came by asking about the singing at the docks. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. Yevgenia was hired to carry a copper pipe from the Reading Well to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Yevgenia repaired the glass float at the Reading Well for Calloway, who paid in 79 ink-weights and a long story about the old tunnels.

Entry 40, spring of year 33

Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the Reading Well: 63 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short. Yevgenia repaired the grain scale at the Reading Well for Dorothea, who paid in 43 ink-weights and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Rumours about the new curfew reached the Reading Well. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 41, winter of year 33

Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 6 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Ursula came by asking about who really won the regatta. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Yevgenia won 30 ink-weights on a bet about the census and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 42, spring of year 33

Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 35 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. Rumours about the new curfew reached the cataloguers' gallery. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the old tunnels. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Yevgenia won 51 ink-weights on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 43, spring of year 33

At the cataloguers' gallery, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 75 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. Hamish came by asking about the new curfew. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 44, spring of year 33

Emeric came by asking about the quarantine. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Yevgenia was hired to carry a cracked compass from the Reading Well to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the Reading Well, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Yevgenia was hired to carry a copper pipe from the Reading Well to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 45, winter of year 33

Yevgenia was hired to carry a copper pipe from the sluice gates to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Yevgenia was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the sluice gates to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Yevgenia was hired to carry a grain scale from the sluice gates to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 46, summer of year 33

Yevgenia won 67 ink-weights on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the Stacks of Ash: 55 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. Quillon came by asking about the missing shipment. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the cataloguers' gallery, and watched the lights come on. Yevgenia won 4 ink-weights on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 47, summer of year 33

Yevgenia was hired to carry a ledger from the cataloguers' gallery to the sluice gates without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the ledger indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tariff on salt. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the harvest count. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 48, spring of year 33

Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. Yevgenia won 21 ink-weights on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on supper. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the signal flag indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the right way to mend a net.

Entry 49, autumn of year 34

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the sack of salt indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the right way to mend a net. Rumours about the old tunnels reached the Reading Well. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 50, spring of year 34

A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 51, autumn of year 34

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. At the cataloguers' gallery, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the new curfew reached the cataloguers' gallery. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the oilskin map indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the singing at the docks.

Entry 52, summer of year 34

A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the Archivist's cell; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Yevgenia won 41 ink-weights on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on supper. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 53, autumn of year 34

Yevgenia won 3 ink-weights on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the comet flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Yevgenia won 66 ink-weights on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 54, winter of year 34

Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Yevgenia found a grain scale half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Petra came by asking about the quarantine. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 55, spring of year 34

At the cataloguers' gallery, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone. Hyacinth came by asking about the tax on doors. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the cataloguers' gallery. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 56, winter of year 34

Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the sluice gates. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. Yevgenia was hired to carry a copper pipe from the sluice gates to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Yevgenia repaired the ledger at the sluice gates for Bram, who paid in 33 ink-weights and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. At the sluice gates, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 57, autumn of year 35

The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet. Rumours about the old tunnels reached the Stacks of Ash. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the bundle of letters indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the price of lamp oil.

Entry 58, autumn of year 35

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. Yevgenia was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the Reading Well to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Yevgenia found a sextant half-buried near the Reading Well and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 59, spring of year 35

Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the cataloguers' gallery. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Yevgenia found a brass lantern half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 79 of everything, except the signal flag, which is always short. Rumours about the new curfew reached the cataloguers' gallery. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Yevgenia was hired to carry a signal flag from the cataloguers' gallery to the sluice gates without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 60, spring of year 35

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the ledger indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the price of lamp oil. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the cracked compass indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 61, autumn of year 35

At the cataloguers' gallery, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Hyacinth came by asking about the new curfew. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Yevgenia repaired the sack of salt at the cataloguers' gallery for Marisol, who paid in 52 ink-weights and a long story about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 62, spring of year 35

At the Stacks of Ash, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the Stacks of Ash; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Someone left a brass lantern on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 63, summer of year 35

Yevgenia repaired the spool of wire at the cataloguers' gallery for Percival, who paid in 45 ink-weights and a long story about the harvest count. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the cracked compass indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tariff on salt. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the missing shipment. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. Yevgenia repaired the iron kettle at the cataloguers' gallery for Nikolai, who paid in 80 ink-weights and a long story about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 64, autumn of year 35

A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. Greta came by asking about the old tunnels. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Yevgenia was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the Archivist's cell to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the Archivist's cell, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 65, autumn of year 35

Ignatius came by asking about the tariff on salt. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 66, summer of year 35

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. At the cataloguers' gallery, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the census flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Yevgenia was hired to carry a hand bell from the cataloguers' gallery to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 67, summer of year 35

A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. Yevgenia found a glass float half-buried near the Stacks of Ash and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 68, spring of year 35

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the missing shipment. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Yevgenia repaired the clockwork bird at the Reading Well for Ingrid, who paid in 72 ink-weights and a long story about who really won the regatta. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the tax on doors. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 69, summer of year 35

The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the oilskin map indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet. Nkechi came by asking about the old tunnels. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Yevgenia repaired the wax seal at the sluice gates for Osric, who paid in 49 ink-weights and a long story about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 70, summer of year 35

Yevgenia found a sack of salt half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the comet flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the sluice gates, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. At the sluice gates, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 71, autumn of year 35

At the cataloguers' gallery, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the bundle of letters indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the singing at the docks. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the sextant indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the cataloguers' gallery. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 72, autumn of year 35

Mara came by asking about the quarantine. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about the old tunnels reached the cataloguers' gallery. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Yevgenia won 28 ink-weights on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 73, winter of year 36

Rumours about the census reached the sluice gates. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Yevgenia repaired the tin whistle at the sluice gates for Halcyon, who paid in 11 ink-weights and a long story about who really won the regatta. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the cataloguers' gallery, and watched the lights come on. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the cataloguers' gallery, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 74, autumn of year 36

A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Yevgenia repaired the hand bell at the cataloguers' gallery for Rosalind, who paid in 68 ink-weights and a long story about the harvest count. At the cataloguers' gallery, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. Yevgenia repaired the tin whistle at the cataloguers' gallery for Astrid, who paid in 39 ink-weights and a long story about the rumour of a second well. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 75, autumn of year 36

Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. Yevgenia found a brass lantern half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rowan came by asking about the new curfew. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 76, summer of year 36

The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the hand bell indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the price of lamp oil. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Yevgenia found a cracked compass half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 77, spring of year 37

Zora came by asking about the missing shipment. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Yevgenia was hired to carry a spool of wire from the cataloguers' gallery to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 78, autumn of year 37

Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the signal flag indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the price of lamp oil. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 79, autumn of year 37

A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the Stacks of Ash; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. At the Stacks of Ash, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 80, autumn of year 37

Isadora came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. Yevgenia won 3 ink-weights on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 81, autumn of year 37

Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the sluice gates. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 82, winter of year 37

Yevgenia found a wax seal half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the new curfew. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Yevgenia was hired to carry a hand bell from the sluice gates to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 83, autumn of year 37

A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Yevgenia repaired the pair of spectacles at the cataloguers' gallery for Seraphine, who paid in 56 ink-weights and a long story about the census. Yevgenia won 41 ink-weights on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 84, spring of year 37

A dispute over the comet flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about the comet reached the sluice gates. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 85, autumn of year 37

A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over the comet flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 86, spring of year 37

A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the Stacks of Ash; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Emeric came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the Stacks of Ash. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the Stacks of Ash. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 87, autumn of year 37

Rumours about the comet reached the Reading Well. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Halcyon came by asking about the singing at the docks. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Yevgenia was hired to carry a coil of rope from the Reading Well to the sluice gates without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the harvest count reached the Reading Well. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 88, autumn of year 37

Yevgenia was hired to carry a ledger from the sluice gates to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Yevgenia found a coil of rope half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 89, summer of year 38

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the clockwork bird indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the singing at the docks. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the cataloguers' gallery. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. Yevgenia won 23 ink-weights on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 90, spring of year 38

Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. Zubair came by asking about the singing at the docks. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the oilskin map indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew. Nkechi came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the wax seal indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the price of lamp oil.

Entry 91, spring of year 38

The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census. Yevgenia repaired the glass float at the Reading Well for Quillon, who paid in 35 ink-weights and a long story about the missing shipment. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 92, summer of year 38

Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 63 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short. Wilhelmina came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. Rumours about the comet reached the cataloguers' gallery. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 93, spring of year 39

Rumours about the harvest count reached the sluice gates. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the sluice gates. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 94, summer of year 39

Yevgenia repaired the brass lantern at the Stacks of Ash for Mara, who paid in 23 ink-weights and a long story about the quarantine. Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 95, autumn of year 39

Yevgenia won 30 ink-weights on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the Stacks of Ash: 80 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. Yevgenia found a signal flag half-buried near the Stacks of Ash and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Yevgenia found a hand bell half-buried near the Stacks of Ash and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the brass lantern indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 96, autumn of year 39

At the Archivist's cell, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the Archivist's cell: 30 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 97, autumn of year 40

Yevgenia repaired the copper pipe at the Archivist's cell for Hollis, who paid in 81 ink-weights and a long story about who really won the regatta. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the new curfew. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the census. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Yevgenia repaired the bolt of linen at the Archivist's cell for Yusuf, who paid in 6 ink-weights and a long story about the right way to mend a net.

Entry 98, autumn of year 40

Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. Yevgenia found a brass lantern half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the sluice gates: 78 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short.

Entry 99, summer of year 40

Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the Archivist's cell: 36 of everything, except the glass float, which is always short. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Yevgenia found a oilskin map half-buried near the Archivist's cell and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Ravi came by asking about the comet. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 100, spring of year 40

A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the Reading Well; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Yevgenia was hired to carry a sextant from the Reading Well to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the Reading Well: 32 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short.

Entry 101, winter of year 41

Yevgenia was hired to carry a coil of rope from the cataloguers' gallery to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Yevgenia won 51 ink-weights on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 102, summer of year 41

Yevgenia won 45 ink-weights on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on supper. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the coil of rope indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors. Yevgenia won 81 ink-weights on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on supper. Yevgenia won 35 ink-weights on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on supper. Yevgenia closed early, walked to the cataloguers' gallery, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 103, summer of year 41

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the old tunnels. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Yevgenia found a cracked compass half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Yevgenia found a clockwork bird half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the signal flag indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the old tunnels.

Entry 104, autumn of year 41

Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the sluice gates. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Yevgenia found a iron kettle half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the census flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 105, spring of year 42

Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the Archivist's cell: 61 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. Yevgenia repaired the hand bell at the Archivist's cell for Nikolai, who paid in 73 ink-weights and a long story about the harvest count. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the Archivist's cell: 2 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short.

Entry 106, autumn of year 42

Someone left a brass lantern on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right. Yevgenia repaired the bolt of linen at the Stacks of Ash for Cassius, who paid in 55 ink-weights and a long story about the census. Yevgenia found a tin whistle half-buried near the Stacks of Ash and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Yevgenia found a glass float half-buried near the Stacks of Ash and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 107, spring of year 42

Rumours about the tax on doors reached the cataloguers' gallery. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 46 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. Yevgenia found a tin whistle half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Leocadia came by asking about the tariff on salt. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 108, spring of year 42

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. Yevgenia was hired to carry a tin whistle from the Reading Well to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Yevgenia repaired the hand bell at the Reading Well for Nkechi, who paid in 36 ink-weights and a long story about the price of lamp oil. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the cracked compass indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. Yevgenia repaired the bundle of letters at the Reading Well for Sable, who paid in 59 ink-weights and a long story about the right way to mend a net.

Entry 109, autumn of year 43

Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Yevgenia was hired to carry a tin whistle from the sluice gates to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 110, winter of year 43

Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the Reading Well. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about the comet reached the Reading Well. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 111, winter of year 43

Yevgenia closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Yevgenia repaired the bolt of linen at the Archivist's cell for Qadira, who paid in 69 ink-weights and a long story about the comet. Rumours about the quarantine reached the Archivist's cell. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Yevgenia won 29 ink-weights on a bet about the census and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 112, autumn of year 43

A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Yevgenia found a glass float half-buried near the Reading Well and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 113, autumn of year 43

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the comet. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Yevgenia was hired to carry a wax seal from the Archivist's cell to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 114, spring of year 43

A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the Archivist's cell; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the Archivist's cell. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Yevgenia repaired the coil of rope at the Archivist's cell for Olwen, who paid in 63 ink-weights and a long story about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 115, spring of year 43

A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Yevgenia and a neighbour outside the Stacks of Ash; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the ledger indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. Yevgenia won 41 ink-weights on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on supper. Yevgenia found a grain scale half-buried near the Stacks of Ash and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Gustav came by asking about the harvest count. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 116, autumn of year 43

At the sluice gates, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. Sunniva came by asking about the new curfew. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. Yevgenia repaired the bolt of linen at the sluice gates for Corvina, who paid in 19 ink-weights and a long story about the old tunnels. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Yevgenia has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 117, spring of year 44

The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the sack of salt indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the harvest count. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the sluice gates: 87 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the sluice gates: 70 of everything, except the wax seal, which is always short. A stranger asked Yevgenia for the password to the workshop. Yevgenia laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Pilar came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 118, summer of year 44

Yevgenia was hired to carry a signal flag from the Archivist's cell to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Yevgenia was hired to carry a sack of salt from the Archivist's cell to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Yevgenia won 49 ink-weights on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 119, spring of year 44

Yevgenia was hired to carry a sextant from the sluice gates to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the sluice gates: 61 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Yevgenia repaired the brass lantern at the sluice gates for Wilhelmina, who paid in 2 ink-weights and a long story about the harvest count. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the harvest count. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 120, spring of year 44

Rosalind came by asking about the harvest count. Yevgenia said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Yevgenia moved the brass lantern indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the price of lamp oil. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Yevgenia read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 121, spring of year 45

Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 35 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short. Yevgenia found a spool of wire half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Yevgenia found a copper pipe half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Yevgenia spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 83 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short. At the cataloguers' gallery, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 122, winter of year 45

Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the sluice gates. Yevgenia pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the sluice gates, Yevgenia taught a newcomer how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Yevgenia was hired to carry a grain scale from the sluice gates to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded.