

Dashiell Ravensworth

Character Dossier

Playful, with a cruel streak they regret tattooist of Kepler Station, a mining outpost orbiting the gas giant Oryn

Overview

Dashiell Ravensworth is a tattooist living in Kepler Station, a mining outpost orbiting the gas giant Oryn. Dashiell is 59 years old, originally from Two Rivers, and is known around Ring Deck 4 as playful, with a cruel streak they regret. In conversation Dashiell hums a few notes between thoughts.

Background

Dashiell arrived in Kepler Station, a mining outpost orbiting the gas giant Oryn 18 years ago after leaving Two Rivers under circumstances Dashiell describes differently every time. The first job was hauling for the Oryn Extraction Consortium; the second was the one that stuck. Today Dashiell works as a tattooist near the hydroponics bay and is paid, when paid at all, in station credits.

Dashiell learned the trade from Wendeline Larkspur, who still drops by unannounced. The longest-running feud in Dashiell's life is with Quentin Norwood, over a matter neither will explain. The person Dashiell trusts most is Xiomara Ironside.

Current goal: to prove the old tunnels are real. Greatest fear: a knock at the door after dark.

Personality and speech

Temperament: playful, with a cruel streak they regret.

Speech pattern: Dashiell hums a few notes between thoughts.

Tells: when lying, Dashiell mentions Yolk the lizard for no reason.

Verified facts

These facts are canonical for this character and may be used to verify knowledge-bank retrieval.

Full name	Dashiell Ravensworth
Role	tattooist
Home	Kepler Station, a mining outpost orbiting the gas giant Oryn
Hometown	Two Rivers
Age	59
Favourite dish	grandmother's sour cherry soup
Pet	Yolk, a lizard
Lucky number	595

Workshop password	fern-walnut
Mentor	Wendeline Larkspur
Rival	Quentin Norwood
Closest friend	Xiomara Ironside

Secret

Dashiell was the one who let the animals loose during the festival three years ago.

Sample dialogue

Visitor: What do you do here?

Dashiell: I am the tattooist. Has been that way longer than you have been asking questions.

Visitor: What is your favourite thing to eat?

Dashiell: Grandmother's sour cherry soup. Do not tell Quentin I said so.

Visitor: Is Yolk yours?

Dashiell: Yolk belongs to nobody. Yolk tolerates me. Lucky number is 595, if you were about to ask.

Chronicle

Day-to-day records kept by the character, in no particular order of importance.

Entry 1, spring of year 13

A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Dashiell was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from Dockmaster's Row to the ore refinery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Dashiell was hired to carry a bundle of letters from Dockmaster's Row to the ore refinery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. Dashiell closed early, walked to the ore refinery, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 2, autumn of year 13

A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Dashiell found a clockwork bird half-buried near Ring Deck 4 and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Ring Deck 4; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 3, winter of year 13

Dashiell won 53 station credits on a bet about the census and spent all of it on supper. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the comet. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Dashiell closed early, walked to the ore refinery, and watched the lights come on. At the observation lounge, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the observation lounge: 13 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short.

Entry 4, winter of year 13

Dashiell found a bolt of linen half-buried near Ring Deck 4 and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Dashiell was hired to carry a spool of wire from Ring Deck 4 to the observation lounge without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Dashiell was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from Ring Deck 4 to the observation lounge without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 5, autumn of year 13

Zeph came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell closed early, walked to Dockmaster's Row, and watched the lights come on. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the tax on doors. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 6, summer of year 13

Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. Vesna came by asking about the census. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell won 53 station credits on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on supper. Xiomara came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 7, autumn of year 13

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the ore refinery: 19 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short. Dashiell repaired the tin whistle at the ore refinery for Rosalind, who paid in 12 station credits and a long story about the old tunnels. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the ore refinery. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Dashiell repaired the sack of salt at the ore refinery for Cassius, who paid in 50 station credits and a long story about the quarantine.

Entry 8, summer of year 13

the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Dashiell closed early, walked to Ring Deck 4, and watched the lights come on. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 9, autumn of year 14

Dashiell was hired to carry a glass float from Dockmaster's Row to Ring Deck 4 without opening it, and mostly succeeded. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. Dashiell closed early, walked to Ring Deck 4, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 10, winter of year 14

The weather turned. Dashiell moved the cracked compass indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the singing at the docks. Dashiell found a hand bell half-buried near Dockmaster's Row and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Dockmaster's Row; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Dashiell was hired to carry a grain scale from Dockmaster's Row to the observation lounge without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 11, autumn of year 14

Dashiell closed early, walked to Dockmaster's Row, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the census reached the observation lounge. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the observation lounge, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the sack of salt indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the harvest count.

Entry 12, winter of year 14

Seraphine came by asking about the singing at the docks. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell found a signal flag half-buried near the observation lounge and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. Dashiell was hired to carry a sextant from the observation lounge to Ring Deck 4 without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Dashiell was hired to carry a brass lantern from the observation lounge to Ring Deck 4 without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 13, winter of year 15

Dashiell repaired the signal flag at Ring Deck 4 for Yusuf, who paid in 13 station credits and a long story about the price of lamp oil. Rumours about the census reached Ring Deck 4. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about the comet reached Ring Deck 4. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 14, autumn of year 15

A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the ore refinery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. Dashiell repaired the cracked compass at the ore refinery for Katarina, who paid in 47 station credits and a long story about the new curfew. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Dashiell found a cracked compass half-buried near the ore refinery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 15, summer of year 15

At the ore refinery, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the ore refinery: 71 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. At the ore refinery, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the ore refinery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 16, spring of year 15

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. Dashiell found a spool of wire half-buried near the observation lounge and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the hand bell indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the right way to mend a net. Dashiell repaired the clockwork bird at the observation lounge for Qadira, who paid in 19 station credits and a long story about the census. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 17, summer of year 15

Dashiell closed early, walked to the ore refinery, and watched the lights come on. Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the bundle of letters indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the missing shipment.

Entry 18, spring of year 15

The weather turned. Dashiell moved the hand bell indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the singing at the docks. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold. At Dockmaster's Row, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone. At Dockmaster's Row, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 19, spring of year 15

Dashiell spent the day counting stock at Dockmaster's Row: 54 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. Dashiell repaired the grain scale at Dockmaster's Row for Viggo, who paid in 31 station credits and a long story about the singing at the docks.

Entry 20, autumn of year 15

the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the comet. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Dashiell was hired to carry a cracked compass from Dockmaster's Row to the observation lounge without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Dockmaster's Row; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 21, autumn of year 15

A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Dashiell closed early, walked to the observation lounge, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the missing shipment reached Ring Deck 4. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 22, autumn of year 15

At the ore refinery, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the comet flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the ore refinery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the ore refinery. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 23, winter of year 15

A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Thaddeus came by asking about the quarantine. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell found a wax seal half-buried near the hydroponics bay and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Dashiell repaired the bundle of letters at the hydroponics bay for Winifred, who paid in 74 station credits and a long story about who really won the regatta.

Entry 24, summer of year 15

Dashiell was hired to carry a bundle of letters from Dockmaster's Row to the hydroponics bay without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Dashiell was hired to carry a hand bell from Dockmaster's Row to the hydroponics bay without opening it, and mostly succeeded. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 25, winter of year 15

At Ring Deck 4, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. Yevgenia came by asking about the new curfew. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 26, autumn of year 15

Dashiell found a wax seal half-buried near Dockmaster's Row and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the old tunnels reached Dockmaster's Row. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Dockmaster's Row; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 27, spring of year 15

Dashiell won 90 station credits on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on supper. Dashiell closed early, walked to Dockmaster's Row, and watched the lights come on. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the cracked compass indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Dashiell closed early, walked to Dockmaster's Row, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 28, spring of year 15

A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. Dashiell was hired to carry a brass lantern from the ore refinery to the observation lounge without opening it, and mostly succeeded. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. Dashiell repaired the spool of wire at the ore refinery for Nkechi, who paid in 41 station credits and a long story about the comet.

Entry 29, winter of year 15

Dashiell spent the day counting stock at Dockmaster's Row: 37 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. Dashiell found a glass float half-buried near Dockmaster's Row and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Dockmaster's Row; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Dashiell won 87 station credits on a bet about the census and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 30, autumn of year 15

Dashiell was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from Dockmaster's Row to the observation lounge without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached Dockmaster's Row. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Dockmaster's Row; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Dashiell closed early, walked to the observation lounge, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 31, autumn of year 15

Nikolai came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell was hired to carry a tin whistle from the ore refinery to Ring Deck 4 without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 32, winter of year 15

Dashiell repaired the cracked compass at Dockmaster's Row for Caspian, who paid in 51 station credits and a long story about the comet. Oduya came by asking about the quarantine. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell was hired to carry a glass float from Dockmaster's Row to Ring Deck 4 without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Dashiell was hired to carry a signal flag from Dockmaster's Row to Ring Deck 4 without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 33, autumn of year 15

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. Amadou came by asking about the harvest count. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the observation lounge: 66 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short.

Entry 34, spring of year 15

Dashiell closed early, walked to Dockmaster's Row, and watched the lights come on. Yusuf came by asking about the missing shipment. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 35, winter of year 15

Dashiell was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the ore refinery to Ring Deck 4 without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Dashiell found a bundle of letters half-buried near the ore refinery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. At the ore refinery, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. Dashiell found a bolt of linen half-buried near the ore refinery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 36, autumn of year 15

the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Petra came by asking about the comet. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell repaired the wax seal at the hydroponics bay for Winifred, who paid in 75 station credits and a long story about the missing shipment.

Entry 37, summer of year 15

Greta came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. At the hydroponics bay, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 38, autumn of year 15

Dashiell was hired to carry a ledger from the hydroponics bay to the observation lounge without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Dashiell repaired the glass float at the hydroponics bay for Yevgenia, who paid in 83 station credits and a long story about the comet. At the hydroponics bay, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 39, spring of year 15

Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the hydroponics bay: 81 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the clockwork bird indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. Dashiell was hired to carry a hand bell from the hydroponics bay to the ore refinery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Dashiell was hired to carry a hand bell from the hydroponics bay to the ore refinery without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 40, winter of year 15

At the ore refinery, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. Dashiell closed early, walked to the hydroponics bay, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the ore refinery. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Dashiell was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the ore refinery to the hydroponics bay without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 41, winter of year 15

Leocadia came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. Dashiell repaired the coil of rope at the observation lounge for Orsolya, who paid in 45 station credits and a long story about the harvest count.

Entry 42, summer of year 15

The weather turned. Dashiell moved the oilskin map indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Dockmaster's Row; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 43, winter of year 15

Dashiell found a sack of salt half-buried near the observation lounge and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the observation lounge. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. Yevgenia came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the observation lounge: 33 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short.

Entry 44, winter of year 15

Dashiell found a spool of wire half-buried near the observation lounge and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Dashiell found a brass lantern half-buried near the observation lounge and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Dashiell closed early, walked to Dockmaster's Row, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 45, summer of year 16

Dashiell was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from Ring Deck 4 to the hydroponics bay without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Dashiell was hired to carry a spool of wire from Ring Deck 4 to the hydroponics bay without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At Ring Deck 4, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the iron kettle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the right way to mend a net.

Entry 46, winter of year 16

Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the observation lounge. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the comet. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 47, autumn of year 16

Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the hydroponics bay: 69 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. Dashiell was hired to carry a glass float from the hydroponics bay to Ring Deck 4 without opening it, and mostly succeeded. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. Viggo came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 48, winter of year 16

A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the hydroponics bay; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Dashiell won 70 station credits on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper. Anouk came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell won 88 station credits on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 49, autumn of year 16

Dashiell repaired the cracked compass at the observation lounge for Lysander, who paid in 70 station credits and a long story about the quarantine. Kestrel came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rurik came by asking about the census.

Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 50, summer of year 16

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the iron kettle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the singing at the docks. At Ring Deck 4, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. Dashiell found a oilskin map half-buried near Ring Deck 4 and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 51, spring of year 16

Dashiell won 79 station credits on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on supper. Wren came by asking about the old tunnels. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached Dockmaster's Row. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 52, autumn of year 16

the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the harvest count. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Dashiell found a pair of spectacles half-buried near Dockmaster's Row and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at Dockmaster's Row: 55 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short.

Entry 53, winter of year 16

At Ring Deck 4, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone. Dashiell closed early, walked to the observation lounge, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the new curfew reached Ring Deck 4. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Dashiell repaired the bundle of letters at Ring Deck 4 for Tiberius, who paid in 45 station credits and a long story about the singing at the docks.

Entry 54, autumn of year 16

Rumours about the singing at the docks reached Dockmaster's Row. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Nkechi came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell won 25 station credits on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 55, spring of year 16

Someone left a brass lantern on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the oilskin map indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors. Dashiell won 75 station credits on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on supper. Dashiell repaired the cracked compass at the hydroponics bay for Rurik, who paid in 48 station credits and a long story about the comet.

Entry 56, summer of year 16

A dispute over the comet flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the observation lounge; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the observation lounge, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. At the observation lounge, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 57, spring of year 17

A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Dockmaster's Row; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Dashiell won 85 station credits on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 58, spring of year 17

Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the hydroponics bay: 57 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short. Xavier came by asking about the comet. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell closed early, walked to the observation lounge, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 59, spring of year 17

the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the missing shipment. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the hydroponics bay; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the sack of salt indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the right way to mend a net.

Entry 60, winter of year 17

the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the missing shipment. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Dashiell closed early, walked to Ring Deck 4, and watched the lights come on. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the observation lounge: 88 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the bundle of letters indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet.

Entry 61, winter of year 18

Dashiell found a iron kettle half-buried near Dockmaster's Row and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Dashiell found a ledger half-buried near Dockmaster's Row and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Dashiell was hired to carry a hand bell from Dockmaster's Row to the ore refinery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the sextant indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the right way to mend a net.

Entry 62, spring of year 18

Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the ore refinery: 10 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the copper pipe indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tariff on salt. Dashiell repaired the oilskin map at the ore refinery for Rhoswen, who paid in 78 station credits and a long story about the quarantine. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the old tunnels. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the brass lantern indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 63, spring of year 18

Dashiell won 28 station credits on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the comet. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 64, summer of year 18

A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the hydroponics bay. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Dashiell found a sack of salt half-buried near the hydroponics bay and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 65, spring of year 19

Dashiell spent the day counting stock at Dockmaster's Row: 73 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short. Dashiell won 88 station credits on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on supper. Emeric came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 66, autumn of year 19

Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the observation lounge. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Dashiell found a bundle of letters half-buried near the observation lounge and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Dashiell repaired the ledger at the observation lounge for Quentin, who paid in 83 station credits and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Dashiell found a oilskin map half-buried near the observation lounge and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 67, spring of year 19

Dashiell spent the day counting stock at Ring Deck 4: 71 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short. Brigid came by asking about the singing at the docks. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the pair of spectacles indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet. Dashiell found a hand bell half-buried near Ring Deck 4 and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 68, spring of year 19

A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the observation lounge; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 69, spring of year 20

Dashiell won 48 station credits on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper. Pilar came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. At Dockmaster's Row, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 70, spring of year 20

The weather turned. Dashiell moved the sextant indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the old tunnels. Dashiell found a glass float half-buried near Ring Deck 4 and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Dashiell won 10 station credits on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Ring Deck 4; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at Ring Deck 4: 63 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short.

Entry 71, spring of year 20

the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Dashiell repaired the glass float at the hydroponics bay for Thaddeus, who paid in 75 station credits and a long story about the right way to mend a net. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the hydroponics bay: 67 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the quarantine. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 72, winter of year 20

A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Wren came by asking about the new curfew. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell repaired the tin whistle at the hydroponics bay for Ysolde, who paid in 81 station credits and a long story about the singing at the docks.

Entry 73, summer of year 21

Dashiell was hired to carry a grain scale from the ore refinery to the hydroponics bay without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Dashiell won 89 station credits on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 74, summer of year 21

Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the observation lounge: 28 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the observation lounge; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 75, autumn of year 21

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the observation lounge; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the observation lounge. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 76, summer of year 21

The weather turned. Dashiell moved the oilskin map indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the old tunnels. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. At Dockmaster's Row, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 77, winter of year 22

Dashiell closed early, walked to the ore refinery, and watched the lights come on. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the tax on doors. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the hydroponics bay: 70 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 78, autumn of year 22

The weather turned. Dashiell moved the copper pipe indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. Dashiell closed early, walked to the hydroponics bay, and watched the lights come on. Dashiell won 50 station credits on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on supper. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at Ring Deck 4: 38 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short.

Entry 79, spring of year 22

Dashiell won 49 station credits on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on supper. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at Ring Deck 4: 62 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the clockwork bird indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet. Dashiell found a oilskin map half-buried near Ring Deck 4 and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Dashiell closed early, walked to the observation lounge, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 80, spring of year 22

Dashiell repaired the sextant at Ring Deck 4 for Katarina, who paid in 31 station credits and a long story about the comet. Dashiell was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from Ring Deck 4 to the ore refinery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Dashiell closed early, walked to the ore refinery, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 81, autumn of year 22

A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 82, autumn of year 22

Rumours about the comet reached Ring Deck 4. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 83, winter of year 22

Dashiell was hired to carry a sextant from Ring Deck 4 to Dockmaster's Row without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the comet. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the missing shipment. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 84, winter of year 22

Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the tin whistle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors. Dashiell found a signal flag half-buried near Dockmaster's Row and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 85, spring of year 22

At the observation lounge, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the observation lounge; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the cracked compass indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census.

Entry 86, autumn of year 22

Dashiell repaired the oilskin map at the hydroponics bay for Ursula, who paid in 19 station credits and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. Dashiell closed early, walked to Ring Deck 4, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 87, spring of year 22

The weather turned. Dashiell moved the coil of rope indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the old tunnels. At the observation lounge, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 88, winter of year 22

Eamon came by asking about the census. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the wax seal indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the harvest count. Dashiell won 38 station credits on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 89, winter of year 22

Umberto came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. Rumours about the quarantine reached Dockmaster's Row. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Dashiell repaired the tin whistle at Dockmaster's Row for Osric, who paid in 75 station credits and a long story about the census.

Entry 90, winter of year 22

Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the glass float indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the missing shipment. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the hydroponics bay; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 91, autumn of year 22

Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the observation lounge: 49 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the comet reached the observation lounge. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 92, spring of year 22

Dashiell found a pair of spectacles half-buried near the ore refinery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the census reached the ore refinery. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the census. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 93, spring of year 22

Dashiell found a grain scale half-buried near the ore refinery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Dashiell closed early, walked to Ring Deck 4, and watched the lights come on. Greta came by asking about the missing shipment. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell closed early, walked to Ring Deck 4, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the quarantine reached the ore refinery. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 94, spring of year 22

Dashiell repaired the cracked compass at Dockmaster's Row for Rowan, who paid in 69 station credits and a long story about the right way to mend a net. At Dockmaster's Row, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. At Dockmaster's Row, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real signal flag from a fake one by weight alone. Dashiell won 55 station credits on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 95, summer of year 22

At the ore refinery, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone. Dashiell closed early, walked to Dockmaster's Row, and watched the lights come on. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 96, autumn of year 22

Dashiell repaired the sack of salt at the observation lounge for Baptiste, who paid in 52 station credits and a long story about the price of lamp oil. At the observation lounge, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone. At the observation lounge, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 97, autumn of year 23

The weather turned. Dashiell moved the glass float indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the price of lamp oil. Dashiell was hired to carry a oilskin map from the ore refinery to Dockmaster's Row without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the ore refinery, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 98, autumn of year 23

the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the harvest count. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Dashiell closed early, walked to the ore refinery, and watched the lights come on. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Ring Deck 4; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 99, spring of year 23

Dashiell found a sack of salt half-buried near the hydroponics bay and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Halcyon came by asking about the harvest count. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the hydroponics bay: 7 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short. Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 100, summer of year 23

Dashiell spent the day counting stock at Dockmaster's Row: 74 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. Vesna came by asking about the comet. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at Dockmaster's Row: 67 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short.

Entry 101, winter of year 23

At the hydroponics bay, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. Dashiell repaired the sextant at the hydroponics bay for Quentin, who paid in 79 station credits and a long story about the price of lamp oil. Dashiell was hired to carry a wax seal from the hydroponics bay to the observation lounge without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the hydroponics bay, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 102, winter of year 23 the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the quarantine. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Dashiell closed early, walked to Dockmaster's Row, and watched the lights come on. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the ore refinery: 78 of everything, except the wax seal, which is always short. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 103, winter of year 23

Dashiell spent the day counting stock at Dockmaster's Row: 19 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short. Liora came by asking about the tax on doors. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 104, autumn of year 23

A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Dockmaster's Row; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Greta came by asking about the singing at the docks. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Petra came by asking about who really won the regatta. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Corvina came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell was hired to carry a bundle of letters from Dockmaster's Row to Ring Deck 4 without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 105, summer of year 23

Dashiell found a oilskin map half-buried near Ring Deck 4 and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. Dashiell closed early, walked to Dockmaster's Row, and watched the lights come on. Freya came by asking about the tariff on salt. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 106, summer of year 23

The weather turned. Dashiell moved the pair of spectacles indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the right way to mend a net. Rumours about the comet reached the observation lounge. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Wilhelmina came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell was hired to carry a iron kettle from the observation lounge to Ring Deck 4 without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 107, autumn of year 23

Dashiell found a clockwork bird half-buried near Ring Deck 4 and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. Xavier came by asking about the tariff on salt. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. At Ring Deck 4, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at Ring Deck 4: 50 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short.

Entry 108, winter of year 23

A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At Dockmaster's Row, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. Dashiell won 45 station credits on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 109, summer of year 24

Hollis came by asking about the census. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Dashiell found a grain scale half-buried near the observation lounge and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Dashiell found a iron kettle half-buried near the observation lounge and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 110, autumn of year 24

Sable came by asking about the old tunnels. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell closed early, walked to the hydroponics bay, and watched the lights come on. At Dockmaster's Row, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the oilskin map indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tariff on salt.

Entry 111, spring of year 24

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the iron kettle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the quarantine. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the iron kettle indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census.

Entry 112, autumn of year 24

Jasper came by asking about the census. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell repaired the cracked compass at the hydroponics bay for Osric, who paid in 71 station credits and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Dashiell won 34 station credits on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper. Dashiell was hired to carry a bolt of linen from the hydroponics bay to the ore refinery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Dashiell found a pair of spectacles half-buried near the hydroponics bay and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 113, winter of year 24

At the observation lounge, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the observation lounge: 5 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short. Dashiell was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the observation lounge to the hydroponics bay without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Dashiell found a spool of wire half-buried near the observation lounge and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 114, summer of year 24

Dashiell found a copper pipe half-buried near Dockmaster's Row and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Dashiell found a hand bell half-buried near Dockmaster's Row and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Dashiell won 61 station credits on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on supper. Dashiell found a cracked compass half-buried near Dockmaster's Row and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 115, autumn of year 24

Dashiell closed early, walked to Ring Deck 4, and watched the lights come on. Dashiell was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the hydroponics bay to Ring Deck 4 without opening it, and mostly succeeded. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 116, autumn of year 24

The weather turned. Dashiell moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the new curfew. Rumours about the quarantine reached the hydroponics bay. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the hydroponics bay; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Dashiell was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the hydroponics bay to Dockmaster's Row without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Dashiell closed early, walked to Dockmaster's Row, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 117, autumn of year 24

Dashiell was hired to carry a sextant from the ore refinery to Ring Deck 4 without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the missing shipment. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Dashiell was hired to carry a ledger from the ore refinery to Ring Deck 4 without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 118, autumn of year 24

Dashiell was hired to carry a spool of wire from Dockmaster's Row to Ring Deck 4 without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Dockmaster's Row; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At Dockmaster's Row, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone. Phaedra came by asking about the new curfew. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Dockmaster's Row; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 119, autumn of year 24

Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the observation lounge: 13 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. Dashiell found a grain scale half-buried near the observation lounge and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the observation lounge; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the right way to mend a net.

Entry 120, summer of year 24

Rumours about the tax on doors reached Ring Deck 4. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At Ring Deck 4, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 121, autumn of year 25

Hamish came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Hyacinth came by asking about the tax on doors. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Tiberius came by asking about the quarantine. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 122, summer of year 25

A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the hydroponics bay, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the hydroponics bay. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the hydroponics bay, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 123, spring of year 25

Dashiell closed early, walked to the observation lounge, and watched the lights come on. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Dockmaster's Row; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 124, summer of year 25

Rumours about the comet reached the hydroponics bay. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 125, autumn of year 26

The weather turned. Dashiell moved the cracked compass indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the quarantine. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. Dashiell was hired to carry a spool of wire from Dockmaster's Row to the observation lounge without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at Dockmaster's Row: 72 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short. At Dockmaster's Row, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 126, spring of year 26

A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the new curfew. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Dashiell was hired to carry a oilskin map from the ore refinery to the observation lounge without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 127, summer of year 26

Dashiell found a glass float half-buried near Ring Deck 4 and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Dashiell repaired the wax seal at Ring Deck 4 for Fenwick, who paid in 20 station credits and a long story about the quarantine. Dashiell was hired to carry a bolt of linen from Ring Deck 4 to the ore refinery without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 128, summer of year 26

A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Dockmaster's Row; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Dashiell closed early, walked to Ring Deck 4, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the comet reached Dockmaster's Row. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at Dockmaster's Row: 8 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short.

Entry 129, summer of year 26

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the tax on doors. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Dashiell won 60 station credits on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on supper. Dashiell closed early, walked to the hydroponics bay, and watched the lights come on. A dispute over the census flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Ring Deck 4; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 130, autumn of year 26

At the hydroponics bay, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone. Dashiell repaired the iron kettle at the hydroponics bay for Wren, who paid in 52 station credits and a long story about the tariff on salt. Percival came by asking about the comet. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the hydroponics bay. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the bundle of letters indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the quarantine.

Entry 131, autumn of year 26

Dashiell was hired to carry a hand bell from the hydroponics bay to the observation lounge without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Dashiell closed early, walked to the observation lounge, and watched the lights come on. Dashiell closed early, walked to the observation lounge, and watched the lights come on. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At the hydroponics bay, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 132, summer of year 26

the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the comet. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the observation lounge; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 133, autumn of year 26

Dashiell closed early, walked to the hydroponics bay, and watched the lights come on. Dashiell was hired to carry a tin whistle from Dockmaster's Row to the hydroponics bay without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the harvest count reached Dockmaster's Row. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the census flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Dockmaster's Row; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 134, winter of year 26

Dashiell won 15 station credits on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on supper. Imogen came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Dashiell closed early, walked to Ring Deck 4, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 135, autumn of year 26

Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the sextant indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the missing shipment. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Dashiell repaired the bundle of letters at Ring Deck 4 for Sunniva, who paid in 28 station credits and a long story about the census. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at Ring Deck 4: 25 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short.

Entry 136, autumn of year 26

the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the oilskin map indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the harvest count. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Dashiell closed early, walked to the observation lounge, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 137, spring of year 26

The weather turned. Dashiell moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the ore refinery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Dashiell found a sextant half-buried near the ore refinery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 138, winter of year 26

Dashiell repaired the iron kettle at the ore refinery for Vesna, who paid in 37 station credits and a long story about the rumour of a second well. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 139, winter of year 26

A dispute over the comet flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the observation lounge; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the hand bell indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the old tunnels. Dashiell was hired to carry a brass lantern from the observation lounge to Dockmaster's Row without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 140, spring of year 26

Dashiell won 33 station credits on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on supper. Imogen came by asking about the old tunnels. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the wax seal indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the price of lamp oil. Dashiell closed early, walked to the ore refinery, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 141, spring of year 27

A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the hydroponics bay; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Xanthe came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 142, summer of year 27

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. Dashiell repaired the bundle of letters at Ring Deck 4 for Fitzgerald, who paid in 71 station credits and a long story about the quarantine. Dashiell closed early, walked to Dockmaster's Row, and watched the lights come on. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the census. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 143, winter of year 27

A dispute over the census flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the observation lounge; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Ursula came by asking about the old tunnels. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about the old tunnels reached the observation lounge. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 144, autumn of year 27

At Dockmaster's Row, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the missing shipment. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Dashiell closed early, walked to the observation lounge, and watched the lights come on. Dashiell repaired the brass lantern at Dockmaster's Row for Hyacinth, who paid in 27 station credits and a long story about who really won the regatta. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside Dockmaster's Row; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 145, winter of year 27

A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. Dashiell found a hand bell half-buried near the observation lounge and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 146, autumn of year 27

A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the hydroponics bay, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 147, summer of year 27

Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached Ring Deck 4. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Xanthe came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached Ring Deck 4. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 148, winter of year 27

Dashiell won 63 station credits on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. The weather turned. Dashiell moved the pair of spectacles indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors. Dashiell repaired the signal flag at the hydroponics bay for Olwen, who paid in 12 station credits and a long story about the census. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 149, winter of year 28

Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the observation lounge: 84 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short. Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. Dashiell won 43 station credits on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on supper. Tallulah came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Dashiell said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 150, summer of year 28

A dispute over the comet flared up between Dashiell and a neighbour outside the ore refinery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Dashiell found a coil of rope half-buried near the ore refinery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 151, winter of year 28

The weather turned. Dashiell moved the grain scale indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the right way to mend a net. Dashiell was hired to carry a spool of wire from the hydroponics bay to Dockmaster's Row without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Dashiell closed early, walked to Dockmaster's Row, and watched the lights come on. At the hydroponics bay, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 152, winter of year 28

Dashiell closed early, walked to the ore refinery, and watched the lights come on. Dashiell repaired the iron kettle at Dockmaster's Row for Nkechi, who paid in 26 station credits and a long story about the old tunnels. Dashiell closed early, walked to the ore refinery, and watched the lights come on. A stranger asked Dashiell for the password to the workshop. Dashiell laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at Dockmaster's Row: 2 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short.

Entry 153, summer of year 28

Dashiell was hired to carry a oilskin map from the ore refinery to Dockmaster's Row without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the ore refinery, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. Dashiell closed early, walked to Dockmaster's Row, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 154, winter of year 28

the Oryn Extraction Consortium sent a notice about the census. Dashiell read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At Ring Deck 4, Dashiell taught a newcomer how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 155, winter of year 28

Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Dashiell has a suspect and is probably right. Dashiell repaired the tin whistle at the ore refinery for Viggo, who paid in 23 station credits and a long story about the new curfew. Rumours about the census reached the ore refinery. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 156, autumn of year 28

Dashiell won 35 station credits on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on supper. Dashiell was hired to carry a tin whistle from the observation lounge to the ore refinery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the comet reached the observation lounge. Dashiell pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Dashiell spent the day counting stock at the observation lounge: 22 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short.