

Fitzgerald Kaldwin

Character Dossier

Methodical and secretly sentimental court astronomer of the Frostwall garrison on the northern border

Overview

Fitzgerald Kaldwin is a court astronomer living in the Frostwall garrison on the northern border. Fitzgerald is 60 years old, originally from Bittermoor, and is known around the east rampart as methodical and secretly sentimental. In conversation Fitzgerald speaks softly and expects people to lean in.

Background

Fitzgerald arrived in the Frostwall garrison on the northern border 27 years ago after leaving Bittermoor under circumstances Fitzgerald describes differently every time. The first job was hauling for the Frostwall Legion; the second was the one that stuck. Today Fitzgerald works as a court astronomer near the quartermaster's stores and is paid, when paid at all, in iron pennies.

Fitzgerald learned the trade from Yevgenia Quenneville, who still drops by unannounced. The longest-running feud in Fitzgerald's life is with Torvald Nightingale, over a matter neither will explain. The person Fitzgerald trusts most is Zora Grimsby.

Current goal: to be forgotten by the people who remember the fire. Greatest fear: mirrors in the dark.

Personality and speech

Temperament: methodical and secretly sentimental.

Speech pattern: Fitzgerald speaks softly and expects people to lean in.

Tells: when lying, Fitzgerald mentions Amos the hawk for no reason.

Verified facts

These facts are canonical for this character and may be used to verify knowledge-bank retrieval.

Full name	Fitzgerald Kaldwin
Role	court astronomer
Home	the Frostwall garrison on the northern border
Hometown	Bittermoor
Age	60
Favourite dish	festival saffron rice
Pet	Amos, a hawk

Lucky number	781
Workshop password	north-jade
Mentor	Yevgenia Quenneville
Rival	Torvald Nightingale
Closest friend	Zora Grimsby

Secret

Fitzgerald secretly funds an orphanage in Bittermoor and would be mortified if anyone found out.

Sample dialogue

Visitor: What do you do here?

Fitzgerald: I am the court astronomer. Has been that way longer than you have been asking questions.

Visitor: What is your favourite thing to eat?

Fitzgerald: Festival saffron rice. Do not tell Torvald I said so.

Visitor: Is Amos yours?

Fitzgerald: Amos belongs to nobody. Amos tolerates me. Lucky number is 781, if you were about to ask.

Chronicle

Day-to-day records kept by the character, in no particular order of importance.

Entry 1, spring of year 22

Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Fitzgerald has a suspect and is probably right. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Fitzgerald has a suspect and is probably right. A stranger asked Fitzgerald for the password to the workshop. Fitzgerald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Greta came by asking about the tariff on salt. Fitzgerald said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 2, autumn of year 22

Fitzgerald closed early, walked to the frozen moat, and watched the lights come on. A stranger asked Fitzgerald for the password to the workshop. Fitzgerald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Fitzgerald was hired to carry a spool of wire from the east rampart to the frozen moat without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the east rampart: 80 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. the Frostwall Legion sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Fitzgerald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 3, winter of year 22

Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the frozen moat: 70 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short. Fitzgerald repaired the sack of salt at the frozen moat for Soren, who paid in 59 iron pennies and a long story about the singing at the docks. Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the frozen moat: 18 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. A stranger asked Fitzgerald for the password to the workshop. Fitzgerald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 4, autumn of year 22

A stranger asked Fitzgerald for the password to the workshop. Fitzgerald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the signal tower: 78 of everything, except the glass float, which is always short. Fitzgerald closed early, walked to the mess hall, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 5, summer of year 23

Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Fitzgerald has a suspect and is probably right. Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the east rampart: 28 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. At the east rampart, Fitzgerald taught a newcomer how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone. Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the east rampart: 63 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. Rumours about the comet reached the east rampart. Fitzgerald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 6, spring of year 23

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Fitzgerald and a neighbour outside the signal tower; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over the census flared up between Fitzgerald and a neighbour outside the signal tower; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the signal tower. Fitzgerald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Fitzgerald for the password to the workshop. Fitzgerald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 7, winter of year 23

A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Fitzgerald and a neighbour outside the signal tower; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Fitzgerald was hired to carry a hand bell from the signal tower to the mess hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Fitzgerald repaired the bolt of linen at the signal tower for Sixten, who paid in 31 iron pennies and a long story about the harvest count. A stranger asked Fitzgerald for the password to the workshop. Fitzgerald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 8, autumn of year 23

Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the mess hall. Fitzgerald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Fitzgerald closed early, walked to the quartermaster's stores, and watched the lights come on. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before. Fitzgerald was hired to carry a sextant from the mess hall to the quartermaster's stores without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 9, winter of year 23

A dispute over the census flared up between Fitzgerald and a neighbour outside the mess hall; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Fitzgerald closed early, walked to the quartermaster's stores, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the mess hall. Fitzgerald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 10, spring of year 23

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. Fitzgerald won 42 iron pennies on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on supper. Fitzgerald won 71 iron pennies on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 11, spring of year 23

Rumours about the quarantine reached the quartermaster's stores. Fitzgerald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the quartermaster's stores: 16 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. At the quartermaster's stores, Fitzgerald taught a newcomer how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 12, spring of year 23

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Fitzgerald moved the ledger indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the quarantine. Fitzgerald repaired the bundle of letters at the frozen moat for Ignatius, who paid in 38 iron pennies and a long story about the price of lamp oil. At the frozen moat, Fitzgerald taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 13, autumn of year 23

Fitzgerald was hired to carry a wax seal from the quartermaster's stores to the mess hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Fitzgerald was hired to carry a ledger from the quartermaster's stores to the mess hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Fitzgerald has a suspect and is probably right. Kwame came by asking about the singing at the docks. Fitzgerald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Fitzgerald won 72 iron pennies on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 14, autumn of year 23

the Frostwall Legion sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Fitzgerald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Fitzgerald was hired to carry a cracked compass from the frozen moat to the east rampart without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Fitzgerald won 9 iron pennies on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 15, summer of year 23

Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the signal tower: 42 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Fitzgerald won 41 iron pennies on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on supper. Fitzgerald won 3 iron pennies on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on supper. Fitzgerald was hired to carry a brass lantern from the signal tower to the east rampart without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 16, autumn of year 23

Fitzgerald was hired to carry a copper pipe from the mess hall to the frozen moat without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Fitzgerald repaired the sextant at the mess hall for Yannick, who paid in 78 iron pennies and a long story about the new curfew. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Fitzgerald and a neighbour outside the mess hall; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Fitzgerald has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 17, summer of year 23

Ysolde came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Fitzgerald said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the frozen moat, Fitzgerald taught a newcomer how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone. A stranger asked Fitzgerald for the password to the workshop. Fitzgerald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Liora came by asking about the missing shipment. Fitzgerald said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Fitzgerald moved the coil of rope indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet.

Entry 18, spring of year 23

At the quartermaster's stores, Fitzgerald taught a newcomer how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. Xiomara came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Fitzgerald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the quartermaster's stores: 88 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. At the quartermaster's stores, Fitzgerald taught a newcomer how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 19, spring of year 23

Fitzgerald was hired to carry a hand bell from the frozen moat to the mess hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Frostwall Legion sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Fitzgerald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At the frozen moat, Fitzgerald taught a newcomer how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 20, winter of year 23

A stranger asked Fitzgerald for the password to the workshop. Fitzgerald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the signal tower, Fitzgerald taught a newcomer how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. A stranger asked Fitzgerald for the password to the workshop. Fitzgerald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Fitzgerald for the password to the workshop. Fitzgerald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 21, spring of year 24

Rumours about the old tunnels reached the signal tower. Fitzgerald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Fitzgerald was hired to carry a glass float from the signal tower to the frozen moat without opening it, and mostly succeeded. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Fitzgerald has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 22, autumn of year 24

Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the frozen moat: 24 of everything, except the glass float, which is always short. Tallulah came by asking about the new curfew. Fitzgerald said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Frostwall Legion sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Fitzgerald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Fitzgerald closed early, walked to the signal tower, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 23, summer of year 24

Fitzgerald found a iron kettle half-buried near the mess hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Fitzgerald won 30 iron pennies on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on supper. Fitzgerald was hired to carry a coil of rope from the mess hall to the signal tower without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Fitzgerald moved the copper pipe indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the quarantine. Rumours about the census reached the mess hall. Fitzgerald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 24, autumn of year 24

Fitzgerald was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the east rampart to the frozen moat without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the east rampart: 21 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. Rumours about the new curfew reached the east rampart. Fitzgerald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 25, autumn of year 24

Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Fitzgerald has a suspect and is probably right. Fitzgerald found a bundle of letters half-buried near the mess hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Fitzgerald won 51 iron pennies on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on supper. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 26, summer of year 24

Fitzgerald repaired the copper pipe at the signal tower for Ingrid, who paid in 73 iron pennies and a long story about the missing shipment. Fitzgerald closed early, walked to the frozen moat, and watched the lights come on. Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the signal tower: 39 of everything, except the signal flag, which is always short. Fitzgerald closed early, walked to the frozen moat, and watched the lights come on. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 27, autumn of year 24

At the east rampart, Fitzgerald taught a newcomer how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Fitzgerald moved the sack of salt indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tariff on salt. Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the east rampart: 24 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short. Fitzgerald found a grain scale half-buried near the east rampart and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 28, autumn of year 24

Fitzgerald was hired to carry a sack of salt from the east rampart to the mess hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Frostwall Legion sent a notice about the old tunnels. Fitzgerald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 29, winter of year 25

At the signal tower, Fitzgerald taught a newcomer how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone. Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the signal tower: 79 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the signal tower: 60 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. Leocadia came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Fitzgerald said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Fitzgerald moved the ledger indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 30, autumn of year 25

Fitzgerald found a oilskin map half-buried near the frozen moat and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Fitzgerald won 59 iron pennies on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. Fitzgerald found a tin whistle half-buried near the frozen moat and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Fitzgerald found a brass lantern half-buried near the frozen moat and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Cassius came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Fitzgerald said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 31, summer of year 25

the Frostwall Legion sent a notice about the quarantine. Fitzgerald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Fitzgerald for the password to the workshop. Fitzgerald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Fitzgerald closed early, walked to the east rampart, and watched the lights come on. The weather turned. Fitzgerald moved the coil of rope indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about who really won the regatta. At the signal tower, Fitzgerald taught a newcomer how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 32, winter of year 25

A dispute over the comet flared up between Fitzgerald and a neighbour outside the frozen moat; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rosalind came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Fitzgerald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Fitzgerald has a suspect and is probably right. Fitzgerald closed early, walked to the east rampart, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 33, winter of year 25

Fitzgerald was hired to carry a copper pipe from the mess hall to the signal tower without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Fitzgerald closed early, walked to the signal tower, and watched the lights come on. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the mess hall. Fitzgerald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 34, winter of year 25

Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Fitzgerald has a suspect and is probably right. Fitzgerald closed early, walked to the quartermaster's stores, and watched the lights come on. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Fitzgerald and a neighbour outside the signal tower; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 35, autumn of year 25

A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Fitzgerald and a neighbour outside the frozen moat; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Fitzgerald for the password to the workshop. Fitzgerald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the census reached the frozen moat. Fitzgerald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 36, summer of year 25

Fitzgerald was hired to carry a signal flag from the frozen moat to the quartermaster's stores without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Fitzgerald found a wax seal half-buried near the frozen moat and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. At the frozen moat, Fitzgerald taught a newcomer how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 37, spring of year 25

Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the east rampart: 3 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. Fitzgerald was hired to carry a brass lantern from the east rampart to the frozen moat without opening it, and mostly succeeded. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 38, spring of year 25

Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the signal tower: 54 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. Fitzgerald found a hand bell half-buried near the signal tower and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Fitzgerald and a neighbour outside the signal tower; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 39, summer of year 25

the Frostwall Legion sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Fitzgerald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Delphine came by asking about the quarantine. Fitzgerald said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Fitzgerald moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the price of lamp oil.

Entry 40, summer of year 25

Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Fitzgerald has a suspect and is probably right. Fitzgerald was hired to carry a hand bell from the frozen moat to the mess hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Fitzgerald was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the frozen moat to the mess hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 41, summer of year 26

Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Fitzgerald has a suspect and is probably right. At the signal tower, Fitzgerald taught a newcomer how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. the Frostwall Legion sent a notice about the tax on doors. Fitzgerald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 42, spring of year 26

The weather turned. Fitzgerald moved the glass float indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the harvest count. Fitzgerald closed early, walked to the mess hall, and watched the lights come on. Fitzgerald was hired to carry a copper pipe from the east rampart to the mess hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Fitzgerald won 36 iron pennies on a bet about the census and spent all of it on supper.

Entry 43, autumn of year 26

Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the frozen moat: 30 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. Octavia came by asking about the new curfew. Fitzgerald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about the comet reached the frozen moat. Fitzgerald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Fitzgerald spent the day counting stock at the frozen moat: 3 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. A dispute over the census flared up between Fitzgerald and a neighbour outside the frozen moat; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 44, winter of year 26

Fitzgerald won 53 iron pennies on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on supper. the Frostwall Legion sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Fitzgerald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At the frozen moat, Fitzgerald taught a newcomer how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Fitzgerald found a ledger half-buried near the frozen moat and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Fitzgerald repaired the cracked compass at the frozen moat for Osric, who paid in 45 iron pennies and a long story about the new curfew.

Entry 45, summer of year 27

Fitzgerald won 46 iron pennies on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on supper. Fitzgerald found a tin whistle half-buried near the quartermaster's stores and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Fitzgerald for the password to the workshop. Fitzgerald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the quartermaster's stores, Fitzgerald taught a newcomer how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone.