

Marisol Blackwater

Character Dossier

Stubborn, principled and tired fishmonger of the harbor town of Saltmarsh

Overview

Marisol Blackwater is a fishmonger living in the harbor town of Saltmarsh. Marisol is 60 years old, originally from Marrow's End, and is known around the Old Quay as stubborn, principled and tired. In conversation Marisol uses trade jargon and then patiently explains it.

Background

Marisol arrived in the harbor town of Saltmarsh 28 years ago after leaving Marrow's End under circumstances Marisol describes differently every time. The first job was hauling for the Harbormasters' Guild; the second was the one that stuck. Today Marisol works as a fishmonger near Gull Street market and is paid, when paid at all, in silver marks.

Marisol learned the trade from Fitzgerald Kaldwin, who still drops by unannounced. The longest-running feud in Marisol's life is with Liora Nightingale, over a matter neither will explain. The person Marisol trusts most is Gideon Fairweather.

Current goal: to prove the old tunnels are real. Greatest fear: letting people down.

Personality and speech

Temperament: stubborn, principled and tired.

Speech pattern: Marisol uses trade jargon and then patiently explains it.

Tells: when lying, Marisol mentions Sorrow the salamander for no reason.

Verified facts

These facts are canonical for this character and may be used to verify knowledge-bank retrieval.

|                       |                              |
|-----------------------|------------------------------|
| Full name      | Marisol Blackwater           |
| Role           | fishmonger                   |
| Home           | the harbor town of Saltmarsh |
| Hometown       | Marrow's End                 |
| Age            | 60                           |
| Favourite dish | cold lentil fritters         |
| Pet            | Sorrow, a salamander         |
| Lucky number   | 839                          |

|                          |                    |
|--------------------------|--------------------|
| Workshop password | thorn-juniper      |
| Mentor            | Fitzgerald Kaldwin |
| Rival             | Liora Nightingale  |
| Closest friend    | Gideon Fairweather |

Secret

Marisol cannot actually read the old script everyone assumes they can, and has memorised the important pages.

Sample dialogue

Visitor: What do you do here?

Marisol: I am the fishmonger. Has been that way longer than you have been asking questions.

Visitor: What is your favourite thing to eat?

Marisol: Cold lentil fritters. Do not tell Liora I said so.

Visitor: Is Sorrow yours?

Marisol: Sorrow belongs to nobody. Sorrow tolerates me. Lucky number is 839, if you were about to ask.

Chronicle

Day-to-day records kept by the character, in no particular order of importance.

Entry 1, summer of year 10

Marisol repaired the cracked compass at the Tidewatch lighthouse for Anouk, who paid in 22 silver marks and a long story about the tariff on salt. Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Marisol has a suspect and is probably right. Yannick came by asking about the harvest count. Marisol said nothing useful and made tea instead. Marisol was hired to carry a oilskin map from the Tidewatch lighthouse to the Brine and Bell tavern without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Marisol and a neighbour outside the Tidewatch lighthouse; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 2, spring of year 10

the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the tax on doors. Marisol read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the new curfew. Marisol read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the harvest count. Marisol read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Marisol moved the wax seal indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the census.

Entry 3, spring of year 10

Rumours about the quarantine reached the Old Quay. Marisol pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Marisol found a wax seal half-buried near the Old Quay and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Marisol moved the glass float indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the harvest count. Marisol repaired the brass lantern at the Old Quay for Juniper, who paid in 53 silver marks and a long story about the tax on doors.

Entry 4, winter of year 10

Marisol closed early, walked to Gull Street market, and watched the lights come on. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Marisol read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Marisol and a neighbour outside the Old Quay; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 5, spring of year 10

Dorothea came by asking about the quarantine. Marisol said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Marisol has a suspect and is probably right. Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Marisol has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 6, winter of year 10

Bram came by asking about who really won the regatta. Marisol said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Marisol for the password to the workshop. Marisol laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the Tidewatch lighthouse, Marisol taught a newcomer how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 7, winter of year 10

the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Marisol read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Marisol and a neighbour outside the Old Quay; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Marisol moved the coil of rope indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the singing at the docks. At the Old Quay, Marisol taught a newcomer how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 8, spring of year 10

Rowan came by asking about the harvest count. Marisol said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about the new curfew reached the drydocks. Marisol pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Marisol has a suspect and is probably right. Marisol closed early, walked to the Tidewatch lighthouse, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 9, summer of year 11

Marisol repaired the bolt of linen at Gull Street market for Farida, who paid in 52 silver marks and a long story about the tariff on salt. Marisol was hired to carry a cracked compass from Gull Street market to the Brine and Bell tavern without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Marisol found a spool of wire half-buried near Gull Street market and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 10, winter of year 11

Magnus came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Marisol said nothing useful and made tea instead. Marisol was hired to carry a grain scale from the Old Quay to the Brine and Bell tavern without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the Old Quay, Marisol taught a newcomer how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Marisol moved the clockwork bird indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the missing shipment.

Entry 11, winter of year 11

Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Marisol has a suspect and is probably right. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. Marisol won 40 silver marks on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on supper. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 12, autumn of year 11

the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Marisol read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At Gull Street market, Marisol taught a newcomer how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. Marisol found a pair of spectacles half-buried near Gull Street market and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Marisol moved the bolt of linen indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the harvest count.

Entry 13, winter of year 11

Marisol won 62 silver marks on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on supper. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Marisol and a neighbour outside the Tidewatch lighthouse; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Marisol found a sextant half-buried near the Tidewatch lighthouse and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Marisol moved the hand bell indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet.

Entry 14, winter of year 11

A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Marisol and a neighbour outside the Tidewatch lighthouse; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Zeph came by asking about the harvest count. Marisol said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Marisol read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Marisol found a pair of spectacles half-buried near the Tidewatch lighthouse and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 15, autumn of year 11

Marisol found a clockwork bird half-buried near the Tidewatch lighthouse and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Marisol moved the sextant indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about whether the bridge will hold. A stranger asked Marisol for the password to the workshop. Marisol laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Marisol for the password to the workshop. Marisol laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 16, winter of year 11

Rumours about the tax on doors reached the Tidewatch lighthouse. Marisol pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Marisol was hired to carry a bolt of linen from the Tidewatch lighthouse to the drydocks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the new curfew reached the Tidewatch lighthouse. Marisol pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Marisol moved the ledger indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the tax on doors. Marisol repaired the sextant at the Tidewatch lighthouse for Dashiell, who paid in 10 silver marks and a long story about the harvest count.

Entry 17, spring of year 11

At the Brine and Bell tavern, Marisol taught a newcomer how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the Brine and Bell tavern. Marisol pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the Brine and Bell tavern, Marisol taught a newcomer how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone. A stranger asked Marisol for the password to the workshop. Marisol laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Marisol spent the day counting stock at the Brine and Bell tavern: 72 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short.

Entry 18, summer of year 11

Marisol was hired to carry a coil of rope from the drydocks to the Tidewatch lighthouse without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Marisol moved the spool of wire indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the rumour of a second well. Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Marisol has a suspect and is probably right.

Entry 19, winter of year 11

Marisol repaired the cracked compass at the Old Quay for Amadou, who paid in 64 silver marks and a long story about the comet. Marisol was hired to carry a bolt of linen from the Old Quay to the Tidewatch lighthouse without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the census reached the Old Quay. Marisol pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Marisol closed early, walked to the Tidewatch lighthouse, and watched the lights come on.

Entry 20, spring of year 11

An old teacher visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. Marisol repaired the bolt of linen at the drydocks for Seraphine, who paid in 32 silver marks and a long story about the price of lamp oil. The weather turned. Marisol moved the signal flag indoors and wrote three lines to an old friend about the comet.