

Torvald Norwood

Character Dossier

Patient as stone alchemist of the harbor town of Saltmarsh

Overview

Torvald Norwood is a alchemist living in the harbor town of Saltmarsh. Torvald is 50 years old, originally from Elmsworth, and is known around the Old Quay as patient as stone. In conversation Torvald narrates their own actions under their breath.

Background

Torvald arrived in the harbor town of Saltmarsh 20 years ago after leaving Elmsworth under circumstances Torvald describes differently every time. The first job was hauling for the Harbormasters' Guild; the second was the one that stuck. Today Torvald works as a alchemist near Gull Street market and is paid, when paid at all, in silver marks.

Torvald learned the trade from Magnus Merriwether, who still drops by unannounced. The longest-running feud in Torvald's life is with Rowan Duskmere, over a matter neither will explain. The person Torvald trusts most is Matthias Larkspur.

Current goal: to earn the title of master before turning fifty. Greatest fear: birds indoors.

Personality and speech

Temperament: patient as stone.

Speech pattern: Torvald narrates their own actions under their breath.

Tells: when lying, Torvald mentions Umbra the beetle for no reason.

Verified facts

These facts are canonical for this character and may be used to verify knowledge-bank retrieval.

Full name	Torvald Norwood
Role	alchemist
Home	the harbor town of Saltmarsh
Hometown	Elmsworth
Age	50
Favourite dish	midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings
Pet	Umbra, a beetle
Lucky number	101

Workshop password	vane-juniper
Mentor	Magnus Merriwether
Rival	Rowan Duskmere
Closest friend	Matthias Larkspur

Secret

Torvald once turned down an offer from the Harbormasters' Guild that would have made them rich, and wonders about it nightly.

Sample dialogue

Visitor: What do you do here?

Torvald: I am the alchemist. Has been that way longer than you have been asking questions.

Visitor: What is your favourite thing to eat?

Torvald: Midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. Do not tell Rowan I said so.

Visitor: Is Umbra yours?

Torvald: Umbra belongs to nobody. Umbra tolerates me. Lucky number is 101, if you were about to ask.

Chronicle

Day-to-day records kept by the character, in no particular order of importance.

Entry 1, summer of year 21

A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Torvald closed early, walked to the Tidewatch lighthouse, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. Torvald won 69 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. The weather turned. Torvald moved the copper pipe indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about the old tunnels.

Entry 2, autumn of year 21

Torvald won 42 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the census. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rurik came by asking about the tariff on salt. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Torvald moved the bolt of linen indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about the old tunnels.

Entry 3, winter of year 21

Torvald was hired to carry a glass float from the Brine and Bell tavern to the Tidewatch lighthouse without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the Brine and Bell tavern, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. Magnus visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. Torvald won 17 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings.

Entry 4, autumn of year 21

Torvald repaired the sack of salt at the Brine and Bell tavern for Brigid, who paid in 22 silver marks and a long story about who really won the regatta. Teodora came by asking about the harvest count. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Torvald won 64 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 5, autumn of year 21

The weather turned. Torvald moved the oilskin map indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about who really won the regatta. A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Hollis came by asking about the quarantine. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the quarantine. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 6, winter of year 21

Torvald found a grain scale half-buried near the drydocks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Torvald was hired to carry a iron kettle from the drydocks to the Tidewatch lighthouse without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 7, spring of year 21

A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the drydocks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the drydocks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Torvald was hired to carry a iron kettle from the drydocks to Gull Street market without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 8, winter of year 21

The weather turned. Torvald moved the bolt of linen indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about the rumour of a second well. Magnus visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. Torvald closed early, walked to Gull Street market, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance.

Entry 9, summer of year 22

the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Torvald won 54 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the census and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. Torvald was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the Brine and Bell tavern to the Old Quay without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Petra came by asking about the tariff on salt. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the Brine and Bell tavern, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 10, autumn of year 22

Rumours about the missing shipment reached the Old Quay. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Torvald spent the day counting stock at the Old Quay: 78 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. Torvald repaired the grain scale at the Old Quay for Valentin, who paid in 69 silver marks and a long story about the old tunnels. Torvald closed early, walked to Gull Street market, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance.

Entry 11, summer of year 22

the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the new curfew. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the missing shipment. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Magnus visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the Brine and Bell tavern; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the Brine and Bell tavern, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 12, spring of year 22

the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the harvest count. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Torvald was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the Tidewatch lighthouse to the Brine and Bell tavern without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Torvald closed early, walked to the Brine and Bell tavern, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the Tidewatch lighthouse; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 13, spring of year 23

Phaedra came by asking about the harvest count. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the comet flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the Brine and Bell tavern; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the census. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 14, spring of year 23

the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the quarantine. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Torvald was hired to carry a signal flag from the Tidewatch lighthouse to Gull Street market without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the Tidewatch lighthouse; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 15, winter of year 23

Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the Old Quay; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 16, winter of year 23

the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the harvest count. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Calloway came by asking about the comet. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Lucienne came by asking about the tax on doors. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside Gull Street market; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 17, summer of year 24

Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. Torvald spent the day counting stock at the Old Quay: 24 of everything, except the glass float, which is always short. Torvald won 9 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings.

Entry 18, summer of year 24

Rumours about the old tunnels reached the drydocks. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. Magnus visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 19, spring of year 24

Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. Torvald won 54 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the drydocks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Torvald won 75 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the census and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the drydocks. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 20, spring of year 24

The weather turned. Torvald moved the sack of salt indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about the quarantine. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the Old Quay. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about the quarantine reached the Old Quay. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Torvald spent the day counting stock at the Old Quay: 35 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short.

Entry 21, autumn of year 25

A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Torvald won 83 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. The weather turned. Torvald moved the sextant indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about the singing at the docks. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the drydocks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 22, spring of year 25

The weather turned. Torvald moved the pair of spectacles indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about who really won the regatta. The weather turned. Torvald moved the pair of spectacles indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about the right way to mend a net. Torvald closed early, walked to the Tidewatch lighthouse, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. Torvald found a grain scale half-buried near the Old Quay and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 23, autumn of year 25

Torvald repaired the bundle of letters at the Brine and Bell tavern for Winifred, who paid in 48 silver marks and a long story about the old tunnels. Torvald spent the day counting stock at the Brine and Bell tavern: 88 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. Torvald closed early, walked to Gull Street market, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance.

Entry 24, spring of year 25

A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the drydocks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Torvald won 89 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. Marisol came by asking about who really won the regatta. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right.

Entry 25, summer of year 26

Torvald closed early, walked to the Old Quay, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. Torvald won 48 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. Torvald found a signal flag half-buried near the Tidewatch lighthouse and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 26, summer of year 26

Rumours about the census reached the Brine and Bell tavern. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Torvald was hired to carry a ledger from the Brine and Bell tavern to the Old Quay without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Torvald was hired to carry a signal flag from the Brine and Bell tavern to the Old Quay without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 27, winter of year 26

At the Brine and Bell tavern, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Torvald moved the sack of salt indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about the census. Torvald won 48 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. Rumours about the harvest count reached the Brine and Bell tavern. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Torvald won 46 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the census and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings.

Entry 28, autumn of year 26

A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside Gull Street market; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Torvald closed early, walked to the Old Quay, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. Torvald won 74 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside Gull Street market; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the harvest count. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 29, autumn of year 27

Torvald won 60 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. Torvald repaired the tin whistle at the Old Quay for Caspian, who paid in 15 silver marks and a long story about the old tunnels.

Entry 30, winter of year 27

Torvald won 6 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right.

Entry 31, summer of year 27

Magnus visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the census flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the Brine and Bell tavern; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the Brine and Bell tavern. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the census flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the Brine and Bell tavern; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Torvald moved the bolt of linen indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about who really won the regatta.

Entry 32, spring of year 27

Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. Torvald spent the day counting stock at the Old Quay: 52 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short. Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right.

Entry 33, summer of year 27

Torvald closed early, walked to the Old Quay, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. Torvald won 2 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. At the Brine and Bell tavern, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 34, autumn of year 27

Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. Torvald was hired to carry a ledger from the Tidewatch lighthouse to the drydocks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the quarantine. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Torvald moved the sextant indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about the right way to mend a net.

Entry 35, summer of year 27

Torvald closed early, walked to Gull Street market, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. At the Tidewatch lighthouse, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about who really won the regatta.

Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the Tidewatch lighthouse. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 36, winter of year 27

Torvald was hired to carry a ledger from the drydocks to the Old Quay without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the drydocks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Torvald won 13 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 37, summer of year 28

Torvald won 83 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. Torvald closed early, walked to Gull Street market, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. Jorah came by asking about the new curfew. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Torvald moved the oilskin map indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about the missing shipment. Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right.

Entry 38, summer of year 28

Rumours about the quarantine reached the Tidewatch lighthouse. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Torvald repaired the brass lantern at the Tidewatch lighthouse for Sixten, who paid in 47 silver marks and a long story about the right way to mend a net. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the Tidewatch lighthouse; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Torvald was hired to carry a glass float from the Tidewatch lighthouse to the drydocks without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 39, winter of year 28

Torvald repaired the coil of rope at Gull Street market for Bram, who paid in 10 silver marks and a long story about the missing shipment. Magnus visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. Torvald found a iron kettle half-buried near Gull Street market and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 40, spring of year 28

Wren came by asking about the census. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the census flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the Brine and Bell tavern; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the Brine and Bell tavern. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 41, autumn of year 28

Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. A dispute over the census flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the Tidewatch lighthouse; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Torvald found a sextant half-buried near the Tidewatch lighthouse and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 42, autumn of year 28

Torvald spent the day counting stock at the Tidewatch lighthouse: 32 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short. Torvald was hired to carry a iron kettle from the Tidewatch lighthouse to the drydocks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Eamon came by asking about the missing shipment. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Magnus came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Torvald spent the day counting stock at the Tidewatch lighthouse: 57 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short.

Entry 43, autumn of year 28

Torvald closed early, walked to the Brine and Bell tavern, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the Old Quay. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Torvald spent the day counting stock at the Old Quay: 36 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. Marisol came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right.

Entry 44, spring of year 28

The weather turned. Torvald moved the glass float indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about the quarantine. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the Tidewatch lighthouse. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Olwen came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 45, summer of year 29

Torvald repaired the coil of rope at the Tidewatch lighthouse for Wren, who paid in 54 silver marks and a long story about the census. Yevgenia came by asking about the missing shipment. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At the Tidewatch lighthouse, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 46, spring of year 29

Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. Torvald was hired to carry a hand bell from the drydocks to the Old Quay without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 47, autumn of year 29

Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the Old Quay. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Magnus visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Torvald was hired to carry a signal flag from the Old Quay to the drydocks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right.

Entry 48, summer of year 29

Torvald closed early, walked to the drydocks, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. At the Old Quay, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the new curfew reached the Old Quay. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Torvald closed early, walked to the drydocks, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance.

Entry 49, spring of year 29

Magnus visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. Torvald spent the day counting stock at the drydocks: 50 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Hollis came by asking about the old tunnels. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 50, winter of year 29

Rumours about the missing shipment reached the drydocks. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Torvald closed early, walked to the Old Quay, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. Torvald was hired to carry a sextant from the drydocks to the Old Quay without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the drydocks, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 51, winter of year 29

Torvald won 26 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. Valentin came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Halcyon came by asking about the harvest count. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Magnus visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 52, summer of year 29

A dispute over the census flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the Brine and Bell tavern; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Torvald closed early, walked to the drydocks, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the Brine and Bell tavern. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the Brine and Bell tavern, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the Brine and Bell tavern; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 53, summer of year 30

Magnus visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. Torvald won 81 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. Anouk came by asking about the harvest count. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Torvald spent the day counting stock at the drydocks: 70 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short.

Entry 54, spring of year 30

At the Tidewatch lighthouse, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the quarantine reached the Tidewatch lighthouse. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Torvald repaired the cracked compass at the Tidewatch lighthouse for Orsolya, who paid in 81 silver marks and a long story about the rumour of a second well. A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Torvald won 29 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the census and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings.

Entry 55, winter of year 30

Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the drydocks. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Torvald was hired to carry a iron kettle from the drydocks to the Tidewatch lighthouse without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 56, autumn of year 30

Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the Tidewatch lighthouse. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Torvald closed early, walked to the drydocks, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. Torvald spent the day counting stock at the Tidewatch lighthouse: 12 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short.

Entry 57, summer of year 31

the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the new curfew. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Torvald moved the signal flag indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about the census. A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Torvald won 21 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings.

Entry 58, spring of year 31

Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. At the drydocks, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Torvald won 79 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. Torvald found a signal flag half-buried near the drydocks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Torvald was hired to carry a glass float from the drydocks to the Old Quay without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 59, autumn of year 31

The weather turned. Torvald moved the spool of wire indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about the right way to mend a net. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Sable came by asking about the missing shipment. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the quarantine. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 60, spring of year 31

Torvald found a copper pipe half-buried near the Tidewatch lighthouse and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. At the Tidewatch lighthouse, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Torvald moved the hand bell indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about the comet.

Entry 61, winter of year 32

At the Tidewatch lighthouse, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Torvald was hired to carry a signal flag from the Tidewatch lighthouse to the Old Quay without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the Tidewatch lighthouse, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. At the Tidewatch lighthouse, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. Torvald closed early, walked to the Old Quay, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance.

Entry 62, summer of year 32

Torvald spent the day counting stock at the Brine and Bell tavern: 40 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the comet. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Torvald repaired the oilskin map at the Brine and Bell tavern for Brigid, who paid in 54 silver marks and a long story about the tariff on salt.

Entry 63, summer of year 32

Torvald repaired the signal flag at Gull Street market for Brigid, who paid in 14 silver marks and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. Torvald won 44 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. Torvald spent the day counting stock at Gull Street market: 15 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. Torvald won 20 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 64, winter of year 32

The weather turned. Torvald moved the glass float indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about the census. Rhoswen came by asking about the census. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right.

Entry 65, winter of year 33

Torvald won 15 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. Torvald was hired to carry a ledger from the Tidewatch lighthouse to the Brine and Bell tavern without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Torvald was hired to carry a grain scale from the Tidewatch lighthouse to the Brine and Bell tavern without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Torvald spent the day counting stock at the Tidewatch lighthouse: 60 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Torvald spent the day counting stock at the Tidewatch lighthouse: 11 of everything, except the signal flag, which is always short.

Entry 66, winter of year 33

A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the Brine and Bell tavern, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 67, summer of year 33

At Gull Street market, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside Gull Street market; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Torvald repaired the spool of wire at Gull Street market for Nkechi, who paid in 22 silver marks and a long story about the price of lamp oil. Torvald won 14 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 68, summer of year 33

Nikolai came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the census flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the Old Quay; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Torvald repaired the clockwork bird at the Old Quay for Zeph, who paid in 28 silver marks and a long story about the quarantine.

Entry 69, summer of year 34

The weather turned. Torvald moved the tin whistle indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about the rumour of a second well. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the old tunnels. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Torvald closed early, walked to the Old Quay, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the old tunnels. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 70, spring of year 34

A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside Gull Street market; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Torvald won 18 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside Gull Street market; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 71, winter of year 34

Torvald won 86 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note.

Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. Torvald won 29 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings.

Entry 72, spring of year 34

Torvald repaired the bolt of linen at the drydocks for Greta, who paid in 65 silver marks and a long story about the new curfew. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the drydocks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Magnus visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. Torvald spent the day counting stock at the drydocks: 86 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short. Corvina came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 73, summer of year 35

The weather turned. Torvald moved the coil of rope indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about the old tunnels. At Gull Street market, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached Gull Street market. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 74, winter of year 35

A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the Old Quay. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Torvald won 13 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. Torvald was hired to carry a tin whistle from the Old Quay to Gull Street market without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 75, spring of year 35

A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the Brine and Bell tavern. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Torvald was hired to carry a copper pipe from the Brine and Bell tavern to the Old Quay without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the missing shipment. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 76, summer of year 35

the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Torvald closed early, walked to Gull Street market, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. Torvald spent the day counting stock at the Old Quay: 79 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short.

Entry 77, summer of year 35

Torvald found a wax seal half-buried near the Brine and Bell tavern and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the Brine and Bell tavern. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the Brine and Bell tavern; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 78, summer of year 35

Torvald found a brass lantern half-buried near the Brine and Bell tavern and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Torvald was hired to carry a oilskin map from the Brine and Bell tavern to Gull Street market without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the Brine and Bell tavern, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. Torvald repaired the pair of spectacles at the Brine and Bell tavern for Winifred, who paid in 59 silver marks and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. The weather turned. Torvald moved the oilskin map indoors, fed Umbra, and wrote three lines to Magnus about the missing shipment.

Entry 79, autumn of year 35

Torvald spent the day counting stock at Gull Street market: 4 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. Rumours about the comet reached Gull Street market. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside Gull Street market; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 80, winter of year 35

Torvald closed early, walked to the Brine and Bell tavern, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. Bram came by asking about the census. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the Tidewatch lighthouse, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 81, autumn of year 35

Torvald was hired to carry a oilskin map from the Brine and Bell tavern to the Tidewatch lighthouse without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Torvald found a signal flag half-buried near the Brine and Bell tavern and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right.

Entry 82, spring of year 35

Torvald won 39 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. Torvald was hired to carry a sextant from the Brine and Bell tavern to the drydocks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Torvald was hired to carry a iron kettle from the Brine and Bell tavern to the drydocks without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 83, summer of year 35

Bram came by asking about the quarantine. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Torvald repaired the hand bell at the drydocks for Eamon, who paid in 38 silver marks and a long story about the old tunnels. A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 84, autumn of year 35

A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the Tidewatch lighthouse; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Torvald was hired to carry a glass float from the Tidewatch lighthouse to the drydocks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Yannick came by asking about who really won the regatta. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Torvald found a tin whistle half-buried near the Tidewatch lighthouse and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the old tunnels reached the Tidewatch lighthouse. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 85, spring of year 35

Rumours about the census reached Gull Street market. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Magnus visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before. Torvald closed early, walked to the Tidewatch lighthouse, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance.

Entry 86, winter of year 35

Baptiste came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Torvald closed early, walked to the Brine and Bell tavern, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. Magnus visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. Torvald was hired to carry a iron kettle from the Old Quay to the Brine and Bell tavern without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 87, spring of year 35

the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the quarantine. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Zubair came by asking about the tax on doors. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Sixten came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Magnus visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 88, spring of year 35

Torvald closed early, walked to the Tidewatch lighthouse, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Torvald closed early, walked to the Tidewatch lighthouse, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance.

Entry 89, winter of year 36

Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the Brine and Bell tavern. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the census flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the Brine and Bell tavern; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the Brine and Bell tavern. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Torvald repaired the copper pipe at the Brine and Bell tavern for Osric, who paid in 32 silver marks and a long story about the missing shipment.

Entry 90, winter of year 36

A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Torvald found a pair of spectacles half-buried near the drydocks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Juniper came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. Torvald won 65 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings.

Entry 91, spring of year 36

Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached Gull Street market. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right. Torvald closed early, walked to the Old Quay, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside Gull Street market; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 92, summer of year 36

A stranger asked Torvald for the password to the workshop. Torvald laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At Gull Street market, Torvald taught Matthias how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone. Torvald found a copper pipe half-buried near Gull Street market and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Torvald found a hand bell half-buried near Gull Street market and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 93, summer of year 36

Leocadia came by asking about the harvest count. Torvald said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Torvald and Rowan outside the Tidewatch lighthouse; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Torvald suspects Matthias and is probably right.

Entry 94, autumn of year 36

the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the comet. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the harvest count. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Torvald spent the day counting stock at Gull Street market: 12 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short.

Entry 95, spring of year 36

Rumours about the tax on doors reached the Brine and Bell tavern. Torvald pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Torvald won 28 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the census and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings. the Harbormasters' Guild sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Torvald read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Torvald was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the Brine and Bell tavern to the Tidewatch lighthouse without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Torvald was hired to carry a sextant from the Brine and Bell tavern to the Tidewatch lighthouse without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 96, summer of year 36

Torvald was hired to carry a oilskin map from the Old Quay to the Brine and Bell tavern without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Torvald closed early, walked to the Brine and Bell tavern, and watched the lights come on. Umbra followed at a distance. Torvald was hired to carry a glass float from the Old Quay to the Brine and Bell tavern without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Torvald won 53 silver marks from Rowan on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on midnight spiced pumpkin dumplings.