

Ulla Vasquez-Moor

Character Dossier

Charming and evasive fortune teller of Verdance, a floating garden city

Overview

Ulla Vasquez-Moor is a fortune teller living in Verdance, a floating garden city. Ulla is 78 years old, originally from the Lantern Quarter, and is known around the Canopy Walk as charming and evasive. In conversation Ulla answers a question with a question before giving a real answer.

Background

Ulla arrived in Verdance, a floating garden city 10 years ago after leaving the Lantern Quarter under circumstances Ulla describes differently every time. The first job was hauling for the Verdance Stewardship; the second was the one that stuck. Today Ulla works as a fortune teller near the root-cellar markets and is paid, when paid at all, in seed-notes.

Ulla learned the trade from Wren Corvane, who still drops by unannounced. The longest-running feud in Ulla's life is with Halcyon Duskmere, over a matter neither will explain. The person Ulla trusts most is Jasper Quenneville.

Current goal: to keep Jasper Quenneville out of trouble for one full season. Greatest fear: being seen to cry.

Personality and speech

Temperament: charming and evasive.

Speech pattern: Ulla answers a question with a question before giving a real answer.

Tells: when lying, Ulla mentions Comet the hedgehog for no reason.

Verified facts

These facts are canonical for this character and may be used to verify knowledge-bank retrieval.

Full name	Ulla Vasquez-Moor
Role	fortune teller
Home	Verdance, a floating garden city
Hometown	the Lantern Quarter
Age	78
Favourite dish	charred juniper sausages
Pet	Comet, a hedgehog

Lucky number	733
Workshop password	pepper-velvet
Mentor	Wren Corvane
Rival	Halcyon Duskmere
Closest friend	Jasper Quenneville

Secret

Ulla writes poetry under the pen name 'The Pepper' and has a small, devoted readership.

Sample dialogue

Visitor: What do you do here?

Ulla: I am the fortune teller. Has been that way longer than you have been asking questions.

Visitor: What is your favourite thing to eat?

Ulla: Charred juniper sausages. Do not tell Halcyon I said so.

Visitor: Is Comet yours?

Ulla: Comet belongs to nobody. Comet tolerates me. Lucky number is 733, if you were about to ask.

Chronicle

Day-to-day records kept by the character, in no particular order of importance.

Entry 1, autumn of year 36

Ulla closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Comet followed at a distance. Ulla was hired to carry a brass lantern from the tether docks to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Ulla won 11 seed-notes from Halcyon on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on charred juniper sausages. Ulla repaired the sack of salt at the tether docks for Tomasz, who paid in 37 seed-notes and a long story about the right way to mend a net.

Entry 2, spring of year 36

At the pollinators' hall, Ulla taught Jasper how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. Ulla repaired the hand bell at the pollinators' hall for Wendeline, who paid in 51 seed-notes and a long story about the quarantine. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Ulla read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Ulla read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 3, autumn of year 36

Ulla won 38 seed-notes from Halcyon on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on charred juniper sausages. The weather turned. Ulla moved the ledger indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about the price of lamp oil. The weather turned. Ulla moved the spool of wire indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about the harvest count.

Entry 4, autumn of year 36

Ulla repaired the ledger at the Canopy Walk for Mara, who paid in 76 seed-notes and a long story about the singing at the docks. Ulla spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 68 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. Ulla was hired to carry a oilskin map from the Canopy Walk to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Ulla suspects Jasper and is probably right. Wren visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 5, winter of year 37

Ulla repaired the brass lantern at the pollinators' hall for Sable, who paid in 68 seed-notes and a long story about the old tunnels. Ulla found a iron kettle half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Imogen came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Ulla said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 6, summer of year 37

A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Ulla and Halcyon outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. The weather turned. Ulla moved the glass float indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about the rumour of a second well. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Ulla read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Ulla suspects Jasper and is probably right.

Entry 7, summer of year 37

At the root-cellar markets, Ulla taught Jasper how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Ulla moved the cracked compass indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about who really won the regatta. Ulla closed early, walked to Terrace Twelve, and watched the lights come on. Comet followed at a distance.

Entry 8, spring of year 37

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Ulla read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Ulla and Halcyon outside the pollinators' hall; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Wren visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before. Ulla spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 67 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short.

Entry 9, spring of year 37

The weather turned. Ulla moved the signal flag indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about the new curfew. Yusuf came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Ulla said nothing useful and made tea instead. Ulla found a coil of rope half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 10, summer of year 37

Wren visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. Ulla repaired the grain scale at Terrace Twelve for Marisol, who paid in 12 seed-notes and a long story about the right way to mend a net. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the new curfew. Ulla read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Ulla suspects Jasper and is probably right.

Entry 11, summer of year 37

A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Ulla and Halcyon outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Ulla spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 26 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short. Ulla won 33 seed-notes from Halcyon on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on charred juniper sausages.

Entry 12, winter of year 37

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Ulla read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the root-cellar markets. Ulla pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Ulla won 10 seed-notes from Halcyon on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on charred juniper sausages.

Entry 13, spring of year 38

Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Ulla suspects Jasper and is probably right. Ulla found a clockwork bird half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the comet flared up between Ulla and Halcyon outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Ulla won 73 seed-notes from Halcyon on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on charred juniper sausages.

Entry 14, spring of year 38

At the root-cellar markets, Ulla taught Jasper how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone. Wren visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Ulla suspects Jasper and is probably right.

Entry 15, autumn of year 38

Ulla was hired to carry a hand bell from the root-cellar markets to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Ulla and Halcyon outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Ulla closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Comet followed at a distance. Wren visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 16, autumn of year 38

The weather turned. Ulla moved the ledger indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about who really won the regatta. Nadira came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Ulla said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Ulla moved the cracked compass indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about the quarantine. Ulla spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 54 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. The weather turned. Ulla moved the pair of spectacles indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about the singing at the docks.

Entry 17, winter of year 38

Rumours about the tax on doors reached the tether docks. Ulla pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Ulla found a spool of wire half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Ulla won 40 seed-notes from Halcyon on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on charred juniper sausages. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the census. Ulla read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 18, summer of year 38

At the tether docks, Ulla taught Jasper how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Wren visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 19, summer of year 38

Ulla found a sack of salt half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the Canopy Walk. Ulla pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Ulla moved the pair of spectacles indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about the census.

Entry 20, spring of year 38

Ulla won 38 seed-notes from Halcyon on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on charred juniper sausages. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Ulla suspects Jasper and is probably right. At Terrace Twelve, Ulla taught Jasper how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Ulla suspects Jasper and is probably right.

Entry 21, spring of year 38

Caspian came by asking about the quarantine. Ulla said nothing useful and made tea instead. Ulla spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 32 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. At the tether docks, Ulla taught Jasper how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 22, summer of year 38

The weather turned. Ulla moved the tin whistle indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about the comet. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Ulla and Halcyon outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the tether docks. Ulla pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Valentin came by asking about the new curfew. Ulla said nothing useful and made tea instead. Ulla won 16 seed-notes from Halcyon on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on charred juniper sausages.

Entry 23, autumn of year 38

Ulla found a bolt of linen half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Wren visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. Ulla was hired to carry a tin whistle from the tether docks to Terrace Twelve without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Ulla moved the brass lantern indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about the tax on doors. Ulla closed early, walked to Terrace Twelve, and watched the lights come on. Comet followed at a distance.

Entry 24, autumn of year 38

Rowan came by asking about the new curfew. Ulla said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Ulla moved the glass float indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about whether the bridge will hold. A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Ulla and Halcyon outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the Canopy Walk. Ulla pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the Canopy Walk. Ulla pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 25, winter of year 39

Ulla found a sextant half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Ulla repaired the glass float at the Canopy Walk for Oduya, who paid in 40 seed-notes and a long story about the tax on doors. Halcyon came by asking about the new curfew. Ulla said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 26, winter of year 39

The weather turned. Ulla moved the bolt of linen indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about the harvest count. The weather turned. Ulla moved the coil of rope indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about whether the bridge will hold. Ulla was hired to carry a ledger from the root-cellar markets to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Ulla moved the cracked compass indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about the rumour of a second well. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the root-cellar markets. Ulla pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 27, spring of year 39

Ulla repaired the clockwork bird at the tether docks for Octavia, who paid in 72 seed-notes and a long story about who really won the regatta. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Ulla and Halcyon outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Ulla read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Ulla found a iron kettle half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Ulla found a wax seal half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 28, autumn of year 39

The weather turned. Ulla moved the bolt of linen indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about who really won the regatta. A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Ulla spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 38 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short.

Entry 29, autumn of year 40

Wren visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. Ulla won 3 seed-notes from Halcyon on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on charred juniper sausages. At the root-cellar markets, Ulla taught Jasper how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. Wren visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 30, autumn of year 40

Ulla was hired to carry a ledger from Terrace Twelve to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Xanthe came by asking about the harvest count. Ulla said nothing useful and made tea instead. Wren visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Ulla and Halcyon outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Ulla read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 31, summer of year 40

Ulla found a wax seal half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Ulla repaired the copper pipe at the Canopy Walk for Calloway, who paid in 85 seed-notes and a long story about the comet. The weather turned. Ulla moved the bundle of letters indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about the comet.

Entry 32, winter of year 40

Ulla repaired the brass lantern at the pollinators' hall for Octavia, who paid in 45 seed-notes and a long story about the new curfew. Ulla won 58 seed-notes from Halcyon on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on charred juniper sausages. Ulla found a coil of rope half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Ulla was hired to carry a glass float from the pollinators' hall to Terrace Twelve without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 33, winter of year 40

A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Ulla repaired the sack of salt at the pollinators' hall for Emeric, who paid in 7 seed-notes and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Ulla repaired the bolt of linen at the pollinators' hall for Katarina, who paid in 38 seed-notes and a long story about who really won the regatta. Ulla found a sextant half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 34, winter of year 40

A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Ulla and Halcyon outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Ulla was hired to carry a oilskin map from the root-cellar markets to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Ulla closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Comet followed at a distance. Kwame came by asking about the old tunnels. Ulla said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 35, winter of year 40

Ulla spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 6 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. Wren visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Ulla moved the cracked compass indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about the missing shipment.

Entry 36, autumn of year 40

At the root-cellar markets, Ulla taught Jasper how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone. Dashiell came by asking about the old tunnels. Ulla said nothing useful and made tea instead. Ulla won 15 seed-notes from Halcyon on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on charred juniper sausages. Ulla closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Comet followed at a distance.

Entry 37, spring of year 40

The weather turned. Ulla moved the iron kettle indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about the old tunnels. A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 38, spring of year 40

A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Ulla and Halcyon outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Ulla and Halcyon outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Ulla suspects Jasper and is probably right.

Entry 39, autumn of year 40

Ulla won 75 seed-notes from Halcyon on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on charred juniper sausages. A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Ulla was hired to carry a iron kettle from the tether docks to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Wren visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the harvest count. Ulla read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 40, summer of year 40

Ulla repaired the grain scale at Terrace Twelve for Baptiste, who paid in 28 seed-notes and a long story about the harvest count. Ulla closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Comet followed at a distance. Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Ulla suspects Jasper and is probably right. At Terrace Twelve, Ulla taught Jasper how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 41, summer of year 40

Ulla found a hand bell half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Ulla closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Comet followed at a distance. A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 42, autumn of year 40

Teodora came by asking about the tax on doors. Ulla said nothing useful and made tea instead. Ulla won 65 seed-notes from Halcyon on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on charred juniper sausages. Wren visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Ulla and Halcyon outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 43, winter of year 40

Ulla was hired to carry a bolt of linen from the tether docks to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the tether docks. Ulla pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the census. Ulla read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 44, winter of year 40

Ulla won 72 seed-notes from Halcyon on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on charred juniper sausages. Ulla found a glass float half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Ulla read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At the root-cellar markets, Ulla taught Jasper how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 45, autumn of year 41

Ulla spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 19 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. Wren visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. At the root-cellar markets, Ulla taught Jasper how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 46, spring of year 41

Rumours about the new curfew reached the pollinators' hall. Ulla pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Ulla moved the tin whistle indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about the census. At the pollinators' hall, Ulla taught Jasper how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone. At the pollinators' hall, Ulla taught Jasper how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 47, winter of year 41

A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Ulla and Halcyon outside the pollinators' hall; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Soren came by asking about the tariff on salt. Ulla said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Ulla suspects Jasper and is probably right.

Entry 48, summer of year 41

A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Ulla and Halcyon outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Ulla won 32 seed-notes from Halcyon on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on charred juniper sausages. At the root-cellar markets, Ulla taught Jasper how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone. Ulla repaired the coil of rope at the root-cellar markets for Zeph, who paid in 34 seed-notes and a long story about the quarantine. Ulla was hired to carry a iron kettle from the root-cellar markets to Terrace Twelve without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 49, winter of year 41

Ulla repaired the ledger at the root-cellar markets for Ursula, who paid in 48 seed-notes and a long story about the quarantine. Ulla spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 53 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short. A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Wilhelmina came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Ulla said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 50, autumn of year 41

At the tether docks, Ulla taught Jasper how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Ulla read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Brigid came by asking about the singing at the docks. Ulla said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 51, spring of year 41

Ulla spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 27 of everything, except the wax seal, which is always short. Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Ulla suspects Jasper and is probably right. Teodora came by asking about the harvest count. Ulla said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 52, spring of year 41

Wren visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. Ulla repaired the bolt of linen at the root-cellar markets for Wren, who paid in 84 seed-notes and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Ulla found a bundle of letters half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 53, summer of year 41

Ulla repaired the cracked compass at the root-cellar markets for Brigid, who paid in 11 seed-notes and a long story about the tax on doors. The weather turned. Ulla moved the clockwork bird indoors, fed Comet, and wrote three lines to Wren about the old tunnels. Ulla was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the root-cellar markets to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Ulla closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Comet followed at a distance. Wren visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 54, spring of year 41

Wren visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Ulla for the password to the workshop. Ulla laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Wren visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Ulla suspects Jasper and is probably right.