

Imogen Ironside

Character Dossier

Cheerfully pessimistic blacksmith of the traveling Circus of Marrow and Light

Overview

Imogen Ironside is a blacksmith living in the traveling Circus of Marrow and Light. Imogen is 52 years old, originally from the Ninth Terrace, and is known around the big top as cheerfully pessimistic. In conversation Imogen addresses everyone as 'friend' until they earn a name.

Background

Imogen arrived in the traveling Circus of Marrow and Light 3 years ago after leaving the Ninth Terrace under circumstances Imogen describes differently every time. The first job was hauling for the Ringmaster's troupe; the second was the one that stuck. Today Imogen works as a blacksmith near the menagerie wagons and is paid, when paid at all, in copper bits.

Imogen learned the trade from Baptiste Hollowell, who still drops by unannounced. The longest-running feud in Imogen's life is with Vesna Nightingale, over a matter neither will explain. The person Imogen trusts most is Xanthe Blackwater.

Current goal: to keep Xanthe Blackwater out of trouble for one full season. Greatest fear: open water.

Personality and speech

Temperament: cheerfully pessimistic.

Speech pattern: Imogen addresses everyone as 'friend' until they earn a name.

Tells: when lying, Imogen mentions Thimble the goat for no reason.

Verified facts

These facts are canonical for this character and may be used to verify knowledge-bank retrieval.

Full name	Imogen Ironside
Role	blacksmith
Home	the traveling Circus of Marrow and Light
Hometown	the Ninth Terrace
Age	52
Favourite dish	charred chestnut soup
Pet	Thimble, a goat
Lucky number	353

Workshop password	brine-iris
Mentor	Baptiste Hollowell
Rival	Vesna Nightingale
Closest friend	Xanthe Blackwater

Secret

Imogen is terrified of deep water and hides it with jokes.

Sample dialogue

Visitor: What do you do here?

Imogen: I am the blacksmith. Has been that way longer than you have been asking questions.

Visitor: What is your favourite thing to eat?

Imogen: Charred chestnut soup. Do not tell Vesna I said so.

Visitor: Is Thimble yours?

Imogen: Thimble belongs to nobody. Thimble tolerates me. Lucky number is 353, if you were about to ask.

Chronicle

Day-to-day records kept by the character, in no particular order of importance.

Entry 1, winter of year 9

Imogen repaired the glass float at the menagerie wagons for Eamon, who paid in 29 copper bits and a long story about the right way to mend a net. Imogen found a coil of rope half-buried near the menagerie wagons and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Imogen closed early, walked to the ticket wagon, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. At the menagerie wagons, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 2, winter of year 9

Imogen found a signal flag half-buried near the ticket wagon and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Imogen moved the ledger indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the quarantine. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 3, spring of year 9

Imogen spent the day counting stock at the ticket wagon: 58 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Imogen moved the glass float indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the price of lamp oil. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Imogen moved the sextant indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the old tunnels.

Entry 4, spring of year 9

Imogen closed early, walked to the menagerie wagons, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the missing shipment. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At the big top, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 5, autumn of year 9

Ravi came by asking about the harvest count. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. Imogen found a coil of rope half-buried near the costume tent and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Imogen was hired to carry a coil of rope from the costume tent to the cookfire without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 6, autumn of year 9

Imogen repaired the spool of wire at the cookfire for Zeph, who paid in 59 copper bits and a long story about the tax on doors. Imogen was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the cookfire to the big top without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Imogen repaired the hand bell at the cookfire for Ingrid, who paid in 24 copper bits and a long story about who really won the regatta. Imogen found a clockwork bird half-buried near the cookfire and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Imogen won 78 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup.

Entry 7, summer of year 9

Imogen closed early, walked to the ticket wagon, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Phaedra came by asking about the missing shipment. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the costume tent: 53 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the costume tent: 86 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short.

Entry 8, winter of year 9

Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the big top; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Oduya came by asking about the harvest count. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 9, summer of year 9

Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. At the big top, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. Imogen found a spool of wire half-buried near the big top and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the big top: 33 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short.

Entry 10, winter of year 9

Zubair came by asking about the old tunnels. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the menagerie wagons, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. Imogen found a spool of wire half-buried near the menagerie wagons and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right.

Entry 11, summer of year 9

Imogen was hired to carry a grain scale from the ticket wagon to the big top without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Imogen found a iron kettle half-buried near the ticket wagon and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the ticket wagon: 50 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short.

Entry 12, winter of year 9

Viggo came by asking about the tariff on salt. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Imogen moved the clockwork bird indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the quarantine. Imogen was hired to carry a signal flag from the big top to the ticket wagon without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Imogen won 19 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the big top: 14 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short.

Entry 13, summer of year 9

A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the cookfire; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the cookfire: 36 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. Imogen repaired the bolt of linen at the cookfire for Hamish, who paid in 45 copper bits and a long story about the old tunnels. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 14, autumn of year 9

Imogen found a copper pipe half-buried near the costume tent and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Imogen won 64 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the census and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. Imogen closed early, walked to the ticket wagon, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the comet. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 15, winter of year 9

the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the tax on doors. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. At the menagerie wagons, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real signal flag from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 16, spring of year 9

A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the costume tent; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Imogen closed early, walked to the ticket wagon, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. At the costume tent, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone. Imogen closed early, walked to the ticket wagon, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right.

Entry 17, winter of year 9

Imogen found a hand bell half-buried near the big top and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the quarantine reached the big top. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Imogen won 81 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup.

Entry 18, winter of year 9

Imogen closed early, walked to the ticket wagon, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the menagerie wagons. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the menagerie wagons, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the quarantine. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 19, autumn of year 9

the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the census. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Imogen repaired the bolt of linen at the cookfire for Pilar, who paid in 80 copper bits and a long story about the quarantine. Imogen found a bundle of letters half-buried near the cookfire and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the cookfire; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Imogen won 6 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup.

Entry 20, autumn of year 9

A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the cookfire; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Imogen found a signal flag half-buried near the cookfire and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the cookfire; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 21, autumn of year 9

Hamish came by asking about the census. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. Imogen won 52 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 22, spring of year 9

Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Imogen closed early, walked to the costume tent, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. Rumours about the census reached the ticket wagon. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the ticket wagon, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 23, autumn of year 9

Imogen closed early, walked to the menagerie wagons, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the big top: 81 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. The weather turned. Imogen moved the coil of rope indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the quarantine. Imogen closed early, walked to the menagerie wagons, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance.

Entry 24, spring of year 9

Imogen closed early, walked to the menagerie wagons, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Mara came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 25, winter of year 9

Imogen repaired the sextant at the costume tent for Sixten, who paid in 55 copper bits and a long story about the old tunnels. Imogen was hired to carry a oilskin map from the costume tent to the cookfire without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the costume tent, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 26, autumn of year 9

Imogen repaired the iron kettle at the cookfire for Vesna, who paid in 58 copper bits and a long story about the old tunnels. The weather turned. Imogen moved the grain scale indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the rumour of a second well. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. The weather turned. Imogen moved the cracked compass indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the comet. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the cookfire. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 27, autumn of year 9

At the menagerie wagons, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Imogen moved the iron kettle indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the old tunnels. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Imogen was hired to carry a grain scale from the menagerie wagons to the ticket wagon without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 28, winter of year 9

Imogen repaired the wax seal at the costume tent for Lysander, who paid in 90 copper bits and a long story about the quarantine. Imogen closed early, walked to the ticket wagon, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the costume tent. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Imogen moved the bolt of linen indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about who really won the regatta.

Entry 29, spring of year 9

A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the big top; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the big top; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the quarantine reached the big top. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 30, summer of year 9

A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the ticket wagon; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Imogen moved the wax seal indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the price of lamp oil. Nadira came by asking about the tariff on salt. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Imogen moved the ledger indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the tariff on salt.

Entry 31, spring of year 9

Imogen won 89 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. At the costume tent, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Imogen moved the brass lantern indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the quarantine.

Entry 32, summer of year 9

The weather turned. Imogen moved the pair of spectacles indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the tax on doors. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the menagerie wagons; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the menagerie wagons, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Imogen repaired the sextant at the menagerie wagons for Eamon, who paid in 17 copper bits and a long story about who really won the regatta.

Entry 33, spring of year 9

Imogen repaired the iron kettle at the costume tent for Zora, who paid in 16 copper bits and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the costume tent; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the costume tent; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Ysolde came by asking about the singing at the docks. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 34, autumn of year 9

Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Imogen found a hand bell half-buried near the cookfire and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Imogen moved the iron kettle indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about whether the bridge will hold. The weather turned. Imogen moved the cracked compass indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the price of lamp oil. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the cookfire; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 35, autumn of year 9

Imogen found a oilskin map half-buried near the cookfire and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Imogen won 45 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. At the cookfire, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 36, autumn of year 9

At the ticket wagon, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. Imogen won 78 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Imogen won 71 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup.

Entry 37, autumn of year 10

At the cookfire, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Imogen moved the pair of spectacles indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the harvest count. The weather turned. Imogen moved the signal flag indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the tax on doors. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the cookfire; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 38, autumn of year 10

Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the cookfire. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the comet. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 39, spring of year 10

Imogen found a glass float half-buried near the ticket wagon and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the new curfew. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Ursula came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. Imogen found a oilskin map half-buried near the ticket wagon and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 40, winter of year 10

Imogen repaired the spool of wire at the menagerie wagons for Isadora, who paid in 59 copper bits and a long story about the price of lamp oil. Imogen found a coil of rope half-buried near the menagerie wagons and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before. Imogen found a copper pipe half-buried near the menagerie wagons and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 41, summer of year 10

At the menagerie wagons, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone. Xavier came by asking about who really won the regatta. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the menagerie wagons, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the menagerie wagons; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 42, spring of year 10

Imogen was hired to carry a signal flag from the menagerie wagons to the ticket wagon without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Imogen was hired to carry a sextant from the menagerie wagons to the ticket wagon without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Imogen won 70 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the menagerie wagons. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 43, winter of year 10

the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Imogen moved the tin whistle indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the tax on doors. Fenwick came by asking about the quarantine. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 44, spring of year 10

Imogen closed early, walked to the ticket wagon, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. Imogen won 75 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 45, winter of year 11

Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. Quentin came by asking about the comet. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the costume tent: 26 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. At the costume tent, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. Imogen repaired the glass float at the costume tent for Ysolde, who paid in 35 copper bits and a long story about the tax on doors.

Entry 46, autumn of year 11

Imogen won 75 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Jasper came by asking about the old tunnels. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Imogen moved the copper pipe indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the singing at the docks.

Entry 47, winter of year 11

Imogen won 75 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the ticket wagon, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Imogen moved the spool of wire indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the new curfew. Imogen found a iron kettle half-buried near the ticket wagon and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 48, autumn of year 11

Imogen repaired the bundle of letters at the cookfire for Farida, who paid in 29 copper bits and a long story about who really won the regatta. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Imogen was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the cookfire to the costume tent without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 49, autumn of year 12

At the big top, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rhoswen came by asking about who really won the regatta. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 50, summer of year 12

A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 51, spring of year 12

Imogen won 38 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. At the costume tent, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the costume tent; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the costume tent. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 52, winter of year 12

The weather turned. Imogen moved the spool of wire indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the old tunnels. Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the costume tent: 29 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. A dispute over the census flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the costume tent; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 53, autumn of year 13

A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the big top; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the big top; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Imogen moved the sextant indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the census.

Entry 54, summer of year 13

the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the harvest count. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Imogen won 19 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Imogen found a signal flag half-buried near the costume tent and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Imogen closed early, walked to the cookfire, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance.

Entry 55, summer of year 13

Imogen won 16 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the census and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the big top. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 56, winter of year 13

Sunniva came by asking about the census. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. Soren came by asking about the comet. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the census. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the census flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the big top; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 57, summer of year 13

Imogen closed early, walked to the big top, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. Imogen won 51 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the ticket wagon. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 58, winter of year 13

A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the costume tent; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Imogen was hired to carry a bolt of linen from the costume tent to the ticket wagon without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Imogen repaired the bundle of letters at the costume tent for Ulla, who paid in 54 copper bits and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right.

Entry 59, summer of year 13

Imogen repaired the pair of spectacles at the ticket wagon for Katarina, who paid in 36 copper bits and a long story about the quarantine. The weather turned. Imogen moved the bundle of letters indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the missing shipment. Imogen won 12 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the ticket wagon: 11 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short.

Entry 60, winter of year 13

At the ticket wagon, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before. Imogen closed early, walked to the big top, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance.

Entry 61, summer of year 13

Imogen repaired the glass float at the big top for Sable, who paid in 90 copper bits and a long story about the old tunnels. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Imogen closed early, walked to the ticket wagon, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. Imogen was hired to carry a sextant from the big top to the ticket wagon without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 62, spring of year 13

Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. The weather turned. Imogen moved the bolt of linen indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the census. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the costume tent; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Imogen won 72 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Orsolya came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 63, autumn of year 13

At the cookfire, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone. Imogen found a iron kettle half-buried near the cookfire and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 64, summer of year 13

the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the costume tent; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Imogen won 3 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Imogen found a spool of wire half-buried near the costume tent and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Imogen repaired the glass float at the costume tent for Leocadia, who paid in 39 copper bits and a long story about the singing at the docks.

Entry 65, summer of year 14

Kestrel came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the comet. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the menagerie wagons: 14 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short.

Entry 66, winter of year 14

Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 67, winter of year 14

Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Imogen closed early, walked to the cookfire, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. Imogen closed early, walked to the cookfire, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 68, winter of year 14

Imogen found a bundle of letters half-buried near the cookfire and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Imogen moved the cracked compass indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the right way to mend a net. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the harvest count. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Imogen won 12 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the cookfire; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 69, autumn of year 14

Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the ticket wagon. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Imogen found a iron kettle half-buried near the ticket wagon and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Imogen won 47 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Imogen closed early, walked to the cookfire, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance.

Entry 70, spring of year 14

Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about the quarantine reached the menagerie wagons. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the menagerie wagons, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 71, autumn of year 14

Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the ticket wagon. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the ticket wagon: 82 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short. Imogen found a sack of salt half-buried near the ticket wagon and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 72, summer of year 14

Rumours about the old tunnels reached the ticket wagon. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the ticket wagon; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Imogen repaired the spool of wire at the ticket wagon for Lucienne, who paid in 36 copper bits and a long story about the right way to mend a net.

Entry 73, spring of year 14

Rumours about the harvest count reached the big top. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the big top, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone. Imogen closed early, walked to the cookfire, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. Imogen won 67 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Teodora came by asking about who really won the regatta. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 74, summer of year 14

The weather turned. Imogen moved the bolt of linen indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about who really won the regatta. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the costume tent; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the new curfew reached the costume tent. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the quarantine. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 75, winter of year 14

the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the harvest count. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Imogen won 22 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Imogen found a coil of rope half-buried near the cookfire and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 76, spring of year 14

Imogen repaired the ledger at the big top for Yusuf, who paid in 23 copper bits and a long story about the comet. Imogen repaired the cracked compass at the big top for Rurik, who paid in 51 copper bits and a long story about the census. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. At the big top, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 77, autumn of year 15

Imogen closed early, walked to the costume tent, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. Rumours about the harvest count reached the ticket wagon. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 78, autumn of year 15

A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the missing shipment. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Imogen won 84 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup.

Entry 79, spring of year 15

the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the new curfew. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Jasper came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Imogen won 53 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup.

Entry 80, summer of year 15

A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Imogen closed early, walked to the ticket wagon, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival came by asking about the missing shipment. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 81, winter of year 16

Imogen was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the cookfire to the costume tent without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Imogen found a copper pipe half-buried near the cookfire and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 82, autumn of year 16

Imogen found a ledger half-buried near the cookfire and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the cookfire. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the cookfire, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone. Imogen closed early, walked to the menagerie wagons, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance.

Entry 83, summer of year 16

Imogen spent the day counting stock at the ticket wagon: 37 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the ticket wagon; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the ticket wagon. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 84, summer of year 16

Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the harvest count. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 85, autumn of year 16

At the menagerie wagons, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the new curfew reached the menagerie wagons. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Imogen found a sextant half-buried near the menagerie wagons and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 86, autumn of year 16

Imogen won 48 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Imogen repaired the brass lantern at the cookfire for Hamish, who paid in 71 copper bits and a long story about the missing shipment. Imogen repaired the cracked compass at the cookfire for Hyacinth, who paid in 88 copper bits and a long story about the new curfew. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the census. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Imogen was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the cookfire to the big top without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 87, winter of year 16

Leocadia came by asking about the quarantine. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Imogen moved the spool of wire indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the quarantine. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 88, spring of year 16

Phaedra came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. Seraphine came by asking about the tariff on salt. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Imogen moved the copper pipe indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the new curfew. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the big top. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 89, winter of year 16

Imogen closed early, walked to the costume tent, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the menagerie wagons. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. Imogen repaired the brass lantern at the menagerie wagons for Zeph, who paid in 8 copper bits and a long story about the old tunnels. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the menagerie wagons: 63 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short.

Entry 90, summer of year 16

Imogen was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the ticket wagon to the cookfire without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Imogen won 33 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the census and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the ticket wagon: 49 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the ticket wagon: 31 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short. The weather turned. Imogen moved the glass float indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 91, winter of year 16

Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Imogen was hired to carry a brass lantern from the big top to the cookfire without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Imogen was hired to carry a sextant from the big top to the cookfire without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Imogen repaired the oilskin map at the big top for Xiomara, who paid in 15 copper bits and a long story about the comet.

Entry 92, winter of year 16

Imogen repaired the wax seal at the big top for Gideon, who paid in 57 copper bits and a long story about the singing at the docks. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Imogen closed early, walked to the ticket wagon, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. Imogen won 84 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup.

Entry 93, autumn of year 16

A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the costume tent. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Imogen was hired to carry a sextant from the costume tent to the menagerie wagons without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 94, summer of year 16

Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Imogen won 84 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Imogen repaired the sextant at the costume tent for Bram, who paid in 86 copper bits and a long story about the harvest count.

Entry 95, summer of year 16

Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Ulla came by asking about the new curfew. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the cookfire, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 96, winter of year 16

Imogen was hired to carry a bolt of linen from the cookfire to the costume tent without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Imogen was hired to carry a sack of salt from the cookfire to the costume tent without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Imogen repaired the bolt of linen at the cookfire for Ravi, who paid in 26 copper bits and a long story about the tax on doors.

Entry 97, winter of year 17

Imogen found a ledger half-buried near the cookfire and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the cookfire. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Imogen repaired the cracked compass at the cookfire for Isadora, who paid in 26 copper bits and a long story about the singing at the docks. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the cookfire; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 98, winter of year 17

Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Imogen closed early, walked to the big top, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance.

Entry 99, spring of year 17

Imogen spent the day counting stock at the cookfire: 27 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the cookfire: 51 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the cookfire: 8 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short.

Entry 100, summer of year 17

Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Imogen was hired to carry a copper pipe from the ticket wagon to the big top without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 101, spring of year 17

Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Imogen won 16 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup.

Entry 102, winter of year 17

Imogen spent the day counting stock at the big top: 89 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. The weather turned. Imogen moved the ledger indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about whether the bridge will hold. Imogen repaired the cracked compass at the big top for Teodora, who paid in 14 copper bits and a long story about the comet.

Entry 103, autumn of year 17

Imogen spent the day counting stock at the costume tent: 26 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the costume tent; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 104, winter of year 17

Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the costume tent. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the costume tent: 20 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Imogen found a sack of salt half-buried near the costume tent and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the new curfew. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Imogen repaired the sextant at the costume tent for Zeph, who paid in 90 copper bits and a long story about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 105, summer of year 18

Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Imogen won 10 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 106, autumn of year 18

At the ticket wagon, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the ticket wagon. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 107, winter of year 18

Imogen won 19 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup. Baptiste visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Imogen found a grain scale half-buried near the big top and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Imogen was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the big top to the costume tent without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Kenji came by asking about who really won the regatta. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 108, summer of year 18

Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the big top: 8 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short. Imogen won 49 copper bits from Vesna on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on charred chestnut soup.

Entry 109, winter of year 19

Imogen closed early, walked to the cookfire, and watched the lights come on. Thimble followed at a distance. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the ticket wagon: 8 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the ticket wagon; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Imogen moved the iron kettle indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the singing at the docks. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the ticket wagon. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 110, autumn of year 19

Imogen repaired the copper pipe at the costume tent for Hollis, who paid in 5 copper bits and a long story about the rumour of a second well. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the costume tent; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Imogen moved the clockwork bird indoors, fed Thimble, and wrote three lines to Baptiste about the comet.

Entry 111, autumn of year 19

Imogen found a cracked compass half-buried near the ticket wagon and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Ysolde came by asking about the new curfew. Imogen said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Imogen and Vesna outside the ticket wagon; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the ticket wagon, Imogen taught Xanthe how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 112, spring of year 19

Imogen was hired to carry a tin whistle from the cookfire to the big top without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Ringmaster's troupe sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Imogen read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Imogen for the password to the workshop. Imogen laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 113, spring of year 20

Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Imogen repaired the tin whistle at the menagerie wagons for Percival, who paid in 90 copper bits and a long story about the singing at the docks. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Imogen suspects Xanthe and is probably right. Imogen spent the day counting stock at the menagerie wagons: 3 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the menagerie wagons. Imogen pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.