

Percival Norwood

Character Dossier

Methodical and secretly sentimental lighthouse keeper of Verdance, a floating garden city

Overview

Percival Norwood is a lighthouse keeper living in Verdance, a floating garden city. Percival is 72 years old, originally from Bittermoor, and is known around the Canopy Walk as methodical and secretly sentimental. In conversation Percival compliments people before disagreeing with them.

Background

Percival arrived in Verdance, a floating garden city 8 years ago after leaving Bittermoor under circumstances Percival describes differently every time. The first job was hauling for the Verdance Stewardship; the second was the one that stuck. Today Percival works as a lighthouse keeper near the root-cellar markets and is paid, when paid at all, in seed-notes.

Percival learned the trade from Imogen Ironside, who still drops by unannounced. The longest-running feud in Percival's life is with Corvina Underhill, over a matter neither will explain. The person Percival trusts most is Emeric Fairweather.

Current goal: to be forgotten by the people who remember the fire. Greatest fear: owing anything to the Verdance Stewardship.

Personality and speech

Temperament: methodical and secretly sentimental.

Speech pattern: Percival compliments people before disagreeing with them.

Tells: when lying, Percival mentions Rook the parrot for no reason.

Verified facts

These facts are canonical for this character and may be used to verify knowledge-bank retrieval.

Full name	Percival Norwood
Role	lighthouse keeper
Home	Verdance, a floating garden city
Hometown	Bittermoor
Age	72
Favourite dish	cold apple and onion hash
Pet	Rook, a parrot

Lucky number	578
Workshop password	lantern-mirror
Mentor	Imogen Ironside
Rival	Corvina Underhill
Closest friend	Emeric Fairweather

Secret

Percival sold a family heirloom to pay for Emeric Fairweather's medicine and told everyone it was stolen.

Sample dialogue

Visitor: What do you do here?

Percival: I am the lighthouse keeper. Has been that way longer than you have been asking questions.

Visitor: What is your favourite thing to eat?

Percival: Cold apple and onion hash. Do not tell Corvina I said so.

Visitor: Is Rook yours?

Percival: Rook belongs to nobody. Rook tolerates me. Lucky number is 578, if you were about to ask.

Chronicle

Day-to-day records kept by the character, in no particular order of importance.

Entry 1, autumn of year 15

The weather turned. Percival moved the grain scale indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the old tunnels. Percival closed early, walked to Terrace Twelve, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 46 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 2, winter of year 15

Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 55 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 3, winter of year 15

A dispute over the comet flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the census. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival was hired to carry a iron kettle from the root-cellar markets to Terrace Twelve without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 4, summer of year 15

Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the Canopy Walk to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 5, spring of year 16

Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 45 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the missing shipment. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 6, winter of year 16

Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 75 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Percival moved the hand bell indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the comet. Rumours about the tax on doors reached Terrace Twelve. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 7, winter of year 16

Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival won 41 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the tax on doors. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival repaired the grain scale at the Canopy Walk for Noor, who paid in 15 seed-notes and a long story about the new curfew. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 8, summer of year 16

The weather turned. Percival moved the brass lantern indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the missing shipment. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 75 of everything, except the wax seal, which is always short. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 22 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Rumours about the comet reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 9, winter of year 16

Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. The weather turned. Percival moved the oilskin map indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the new curfew. Percival was hired to carry a cracked compass from the tether docks to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 10, winter of year 16

Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 11 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival repaired the bolt of linen at the tether docks for Isadora, who paid in 71 seed-notes and a long story about who really won the regatta.

Entry 11, winter of year 16

Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Percival moved the hand bell indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the new curfew. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 12, winter of year 16

Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 84 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. Fitzgerald came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the old tunnels. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 13, summer of year 17

Percival found a pair of spectacles half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival was hired to carry a coil of rope from the pollinators' hall to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 14, winter of year 17

Rumours about the quarantine reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 15, winter of year 17

At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 16, winter of year 17

Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 8 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short. Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Mara came by asking about the old tunnels. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 17, winter of year 17

Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. A dispute over the comet flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival was hired to carry a hand bell from Terrace Twelve to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 32 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short.

Entry 18, winter of year 17

Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival was hired to carry a hand bell from the tether docks to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 19, autumn of year 17

Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 67 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. Rumours about the census reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival repaired the clockwork bird at the pollinators' hall for Fenwick, who paid in 14 seed-notes and a long story about the comet. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 23 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short.

Entry 20, autumn of year 17

Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 80 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short. Percival won 89 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. The weather turned. Percival moved the oilskin map indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about whether the bridge will hold. Percival won 21 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 21, autumn of year 17

Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 71 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short. Leocadia came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 22, winter of year 17

A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival repaired the hand bell at Terrace Twelve for Emeric, who paid in 52 seed-notes and a long story about the price of lamp oil. Juniper came by asking about the missing shipment. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 23, winter of year 17

Percival found a glass float half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival found a copper pipe half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival was hired to carry a signal flag from Terrace Twelve to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 24, autumn of year 17

Percival closed early, walked to Terrace Twelve, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 25, spring of year 18

A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival won 65 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival found a grain scale half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. At Terrace Twelve, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 26, summer of year 18

Eamon came by asking about the comet. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival was hired to carry a sextant from Terrace Twelve to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Percival moved the cracked compass indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the old tunnels. Someone left a brass lantern on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 27, summer of year 18

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the census. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 28, winter of year 18

Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival found a cracked compass half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 54 of everything, except the glass float, which is always short.

Entry 29, summer of year 19

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 82 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 30, summer of year 19

Percival was hired to carry a cracked compass from the root-cellar markets to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the census reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival repaired the coil of rope at the root-cellar markets for Greta, who paid in 61 seed-notes and a long story about the census. Percival repaired the iron kettle at the root-cellar markets for Freya, who paid in 12 seed-notes and a long story about the price of lamp oil.

Entry 31, spring of year 19

Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival repaired the clockwork bird at the Canopy Walk for Brigid, who paid in 42 seed-notes and a long story about the tax on doors. Percival repaired the grain scale at the Canopy Walk for Baptiste, who paid in 34 seed-notes and a long story about the comet.

Entry 32, spring of year 19

The weather turned. Percival moved the coil of rope indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the census. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival repaired the bolt of linen at the tether docks for Ingrid, who paid in 62 seed-notes and a long story about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 33, summer of year 19

Rumours about the tax on doors reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about the quarantine reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival won 37 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Yannick came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 34, autumn of year 19

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Percival moved the grain scale indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the singing at the docks. Percival was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the Canopy Walk to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the new curfew. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 35, spring of year 19

Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 2 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. Percival found a signal flag half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 36, winter of year 19

At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 65 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 37, winter of year 19

Percival repaired the cracked compass at the pollinators' hall for Tomasz, who paid in 8 seed-notes and a long story about the harvest count. A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the pollinators' hall; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 38, spring of year 19

Percival was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the Canopy Walk to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival repaired the pair of spectacles at the Canopy Walk for Amadou, who paid in 8 seed-notes and a long story about the quarantine.

Entry 39, summer of year 19

Percival won 88 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival repaired the ledger at Terrace Twelve for Dashiell, who paid in 29 seed-notes and a long story about the comet.

Entry 40, winter of year 19

Rumours about the tax on doors reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Percival moved the sack of salt indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the new curfew. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival repaired the iron kettle at the Canopy Walk for Jasper, who paid in 76 seed-notes and a long story about the tariff on salt. The weather turned. Percival moved the grain scale indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about who really won the regatta.

Entry 41, autumn of year 20

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the new curfew. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real signal flag from a fake one by weight alone. Nikolai came by asking about the comet. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 42, winter of year 20

Percival won 14 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival repaired the bundle of letters at the root-cellar markets for Nkechi, who paid in 89 seed-notes and a long story about the harvest count.

Entry 43, winter of year 20

Percival won 35 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached Terrace Twelve. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 44, summer of year 20

Percival found a coil of rope half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Percival moved the hand bell indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about who really won the regatta. The weather turned. Percival moved the hand bell indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the tariff on salt.

Entry 45, summer of year 20

Percival was hired to carry a glass float from the root-cellar markets to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 46, autumn of year 20

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. At Terrace Twelve, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival was hired to carry a hand bell from Terrace Twelve to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 47, winter of year 20

The weather turned. Percival moved the coil of rope indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the tax on doors. Percival repaired the spool of wire at the Canopy Walk for Octavia, who paid in 57 seed-notes and a long story about the tax on doors. Noor came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Percival moved the copper pipe indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 48, spring of year 20

Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 83 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Percival moved the hand bell indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 49, summer of year 20

Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 50, spring of year 20

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival repaired the brass lantern at the tether docks for Soren, who paid in 47 seed-notes and a long story about the new curfew. The weather turned. Percival moved the cracked compass indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 51, autumn of year 20

Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 13 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 59 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 52, spring of year 20

The weather turned. Percival moved the bundle of letters indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the singing at the docks. A dispute over the census flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At Terrace Twelve, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival won 64 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 53, autumn of year 21

Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached Terrace Twelve. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the quarantine. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 54, spring of year 21

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival won 48 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the census and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival found a ledger half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 55, autumn of year 21

At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 56, winter of year 21

Percival repaired the wax seal at the Canopy Walk for Orsolya, who paid in 64 seed-notes and a long story about the missing shipment. Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival found a cracked compass half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 57, summer of year 22

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 7 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short. Percival repaired the wax seal at the pollinators' hall for Nadira, who paid in 53 seed-notes and a long story about who really won the regatta. Percival repaired the brass lantern at the pollinators' hall for Fitzgerald, who paid in 5 seed-notes and a long story about the quarantine.

Entry 58, autumn of year 22

Percival won 57 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival found a sextant half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival found a pair of spectacles half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 59, winter of year 22

At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 60, winter of year 22

Percival repaired the cracked compass at the Canopy Walk for Lysander, who paid in 12 seed-notes and a long story about who really won the regatta. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 61, autumn of year 23

Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 70 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. Percival repaired the bolt of linen at the root-cellar markets for Ravi, who paid in 54 seed-notes and a long story about who really won the regatta. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 62, summer of year 23

A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival repaired the tin whistle at the tether docks for Mara, who paid in 54 seed-notes and a long story about the tax on doors. Percival found a bolt of linen half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 63, summer of year 23

Percival found a clockwork bird half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. The weather turned. Percival moved the pair of spectacles indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about who really won the regatta.

Entry 64, spring of year 23

Rumours about the census reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. The weather turned. Percival moved the tin whistle indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the old tunnels. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 65, summer of year 24

Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 38 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the census. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 66, winter of year 24

Percival won 27 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 5 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 67, summer of year 24

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 68, winter of year 24

The weather turned. Percival moved the sack of salt indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about whether the bridge will hold. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 69, autumn of year 24

Sable came by asking about the harvest count. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. Lysander came by asking about the missing shipment. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 62 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 70, summer of year 24

Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival repaired the bundle of letters at Terrace Twelve for Katarina, who paid in 46 seed-notes and a long story about the tariff on salt. Percival won 81 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Calloway came by asking about the comet. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 71, autumn of year 24

Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. Percival won 82 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. A dispute over the comet flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the pollinators' hall; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 72, autumn of year 24

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival found a spool of wire half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 73, winter of year 25

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. A dispute over the comet flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 74, autumn of year 25

Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 19 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 75, summer of year 25

Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival was hired to carry a oilskin map from the root-cellar markets to Terrace Twelve without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival found a brass lantern half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival repaired the clockwork bird at the root-cellar markets for Hyacinth, who paid in 49 seed-notes and a long story about the census.

Entry 76, spring of year 25

At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. Percival was hired to carry a copper pipe from the root-cellar markets to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 77, summer of year 25

Percival was hired to carry a hand bell from Terrace Twelve to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival won 67 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the census and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival found a pair of spectacles half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 78, summer of year 25

Kestrel came by asking about the singing at the docks. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival won 71 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Hyacinth came by asking about the tariff on salt. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 79, winter of year 25

Percival won 34 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 80, winter of year 25

The weather turned. Percival moved the oilskin map indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about whether the bridge will hold. The weather turned. Percival moved the glass float indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the old tunnels. The weather turned. Percival moved the pair of spectacles indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about who really won the regatta. Percival found a bundle of letters half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 81, autumn of year 26

Percival found a bundle of letters half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Corvina came by asking about the old tunnels. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival won 32 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 82, spring of year 26

Percival was hired to carry a oilskin map from the Canopy Walk to Terrace Twelve without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 83, spring of year 26

Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 84, winter of year 26

Percival found a grain scale half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival was hired to carry a coil of rope from the root-cellar markets to Terrace Twelve without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 85, spring of year 26

Percival was hired to carry a sack of salt from the Canopy Walk to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival repaired the cracked compass at the Canopy Walk for Gideon, who paid in 7 seed-notes and a long story about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 86, spring of year 26

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 87, winter of year 26

A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival was hired to carry a sextant from the Canopy Walk to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 88, spring of year 26

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Pilar came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival was hired to carry a sextant from Terrace Twelve to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 89, summer of year 26

A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 90, spring of year 26

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival found a ledger half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 42 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 91, autumn of year 26

Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 54 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short. Percival was hired to carry a hand bell from the Canopy Walk to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 92, winter of year 26

Percival repaired the iron kettle at the Canopy Walk for Nikolai, who paid in 17 seed-notes and a long story about the new curfew. Percival found a wax seal half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Percival moved the cracked compass indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the tariff on salt. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. The weather turned. Percival moved the oilskin map indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 93, spring of year 27

Percival won 10 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival won 40 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 94, autumn of year 27

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival was hired to carry a cracked compass from the pollinators' hall to Terrace Twelve without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival closed early, walked to Terrace Twelve, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival closed early, walked to Terrace Twelve, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Ysolde came by asking about the comet. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 95, winter of year 27

Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 15 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about the comet reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 96, summer of year 27

Percival found a clockwork bird half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival was hired to carry a tin whistle from Terrace Twelve to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival found a spool of wire half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival was hired to carry a hand bell from Terrace Twelve to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 97, spring of year 27

Percival won 41 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 98, winter of year 27

Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival was hired to carry a sextant from the root-cellar markets to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. The weather turned. Percival moved the sack of salt indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the old tunnels.

Entry 99, winter of year 27

Percival found a ledger half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival found a ledger half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 100, autumn of year 27

Percival found a signal flag half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Petra came by asking about the singing at the docks. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival was hired to carry a hand bell from the pollinators' hall to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the pollinators' hall; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 101, winter of year 27

Percival won 53 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival was hired to carry a sack of salt from Terrace Twelve to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 102, winter of year 27

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 103, spring of year 27

Percival found a brass lantern half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. The weather turned. Percival moved the ledger indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about who really won the regatta. Percival won 14 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 104, summer of year 27

Percival was hired to carry a spool of wire from Terrace Twelve to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 39 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short. At Terrace Twelve, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the new curfew reached Terrace Twelve. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 105, summer of year 28

At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Percival moved the spool of wire indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the price of lamp oil. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 106, spring of year 28

The weather turned. Percival moved the pair of spectacles indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the census. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival won 62 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 107, autumn of year 28

Percival was hired to carry a spool of wire from the pollinators' hall to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the pollinators' hall; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Percival moved the glass float indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the price of lamp oil. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 108, summer of year 28

Percival was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the pollinators' hall to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Jasper came by asking about the tax on doors. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Fenwick came by asking about the missing shipment. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the pollinators' hall to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 109, winter of year 28

Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival repaired the signal flag at the root-cellar markets for Cassius, who paid in 80 seed-notes and a long story about the quarantine. Percival found a bundle of letters half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival was hired to carry a copper pipe from the root-cellar markets to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 110, winter of year 28

Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 26 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short. Dorothea came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Zubair came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 21 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short.

Entry 111, spring of year 28

Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 59 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short. Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 57 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Percival was hired to carry a glass float from the root-cellar markets to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 112, spring of year 28

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 113, winter of year 28

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival found a hand bell half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Anouk came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 114, spring of year 28

At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone. At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. Wren came by asking about who really won the regatta. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival repaired the oilskin map at the Canopy Walk for Kenji, who paid in 53 seed-notes and a long story about the singing at the docks.

Entry 115, spring of year 28

Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival was hired to carry a oilskin map from the Canopy Walk to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 116, spring of year 28

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Percival moved the signal flag indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the missing shipment. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 117, winter of year 28

Percival was hired to carry a hand bell from the root-cellar markets to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival found a ledger half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 118, spring of year 28

A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival won 46 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the missing shipment. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 25 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short.

Entry 119, winter of year 28

At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 44 of everything, except the signal flag, which is always short. Percival repaired the oilskin map at the pollinators' hall for Cassius, who paid in 26 seed-notes and a long story about who really won the regatta.

Entry 120, winter of year 28

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival found a grain scale half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. At Terrace Twelve, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 121, spring of year 28

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the old tunnels. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 122, spring of year 28

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival was hired to carry a hand bell from the Canopy Walk to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival repaired the grain scale at the Canopy Walk for Leocadia, who paid in 46 seed-notes and a long story about the price of lamp oil.

Entry 123, summer of year 28

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. Quentin came by asking about who really won the regatta. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival was hired to carry a signal flag from the Canopy Walk to Terrace Twelve without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 124, spring of year 28

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the pollinators' hall to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival won 8 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the census and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 125, summer of year 29

Percival won 73 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 68 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. Rumours about the comet reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 126, autumn of year 29

Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival repaired the clockwork bird at the pollinators' hall for Ulla, who paid in 12 seed-notes and a long story about the right way to mend a net. Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival found a ledger half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 127, summer of year 29

Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival found a spool of wire half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 128, autumn of year 29

At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 129, winter of year 30

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival was hired to carry a grain scale from the Canopy Walk to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 130, summer of year 30

Percival repaired the wax seal at the tether docks for Benedikt, who paid in 46 seed-notes and a long story about the tariff on salt. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 49 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 131, summer of year 30

Percival repaired the clockwork bird at the tether docks for Astrid, who paid in 74 seed-notes and a long story about the tax on doors. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the old tunnels. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the new curfew reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 132, winter of year 30

The weather turned. Percival moved the coil of rope indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the rumour of a second well. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. A dispute over the comet flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Anouk came by asking about the harvest count. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about the old tunnels reached Terrace Twelve. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 133, autumn of year 30

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival won 56 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 39 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 134, winter of year 30

Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 21 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. Percival found a copper pipe half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the missing shipment. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival was hired to carry a copper pipe from the Canopy Walk to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 135, spring of year 30

Percival found a glass float half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival found a oilskin map half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 136, summer of year 30

Percival was hired to carry a iron kettle from the pollinators' hall to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival was hired to carry a signal flag from the pollinators' hall to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about the quarantine reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 137, summer of year 30

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival repaired the sack of salt at the Canopy Walk for Xiomara, who paid in 52 seed-notes and a long story about who really won the regatta. Percival found a tin whistle half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival found a wax seal half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 138, summer of year 30

Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 10 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. Leocadia came by asking about the tax on doors. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 6 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 139, summer of year 30

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the new curfew. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the new curfew. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Percival moved the clockwork bird indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the price of lamp oil. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the old tunnels. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 140, summer of year 30

Percival was hired to carry a grain scale from Terrace Twelve to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At Terrace Twelve, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 141, spring of year 31

A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Percival moved the iron kettle indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the price of lamp oil. Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. The weather turned. Percival moved the brass lantern indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the singing at the docks. Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 47 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short.

Entry 142, autumn of year 31

Nikolai came by asking about the comet. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 12 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short.

Entry 143, winter of year 31

At Terrace Twelve, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 88 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached Terrace Twelve. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival was hired to carry a glass float from Terrace Twelve to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 144, autumn of year 31

Someone left a brass lantern on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 145, winter of year 31

A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 146, spring of year 31

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival won 31 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival found a glass float half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 147, autumn of year 31

A dispute over the comet flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 23 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short. Percival found a sack of salt half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival won 5 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Sable came by asking about the singing at the docks. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 148, winter of year 31

Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 82 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. Percival was hired to carry a tin whistle from the Canopy Walk to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Oduya came by asking about the new curfew. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 149, spring of year 31

A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival won 27 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the census and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival found a sextant half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival repaired the copper pipe at Terrace Twelve for Percival, who paid in 17 seed-notes and a long story about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 150, winter of year 31

At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 41 of everything, except the wax seal, which is always short. Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival repaired the cracked compass at the pollinators' hall for Osric, who paid in 6 seed-notes and a long story about the missing shipment.

Entry 151, winter of year 31

The weather turned. Percival moved the pair of spectacles indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the rumour of a second well. Percival was hired to carry a wax seal from the pollinators' hall to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Percival moved the coil of rope indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the comet.

Entry 152, autumn of year 31

Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 16 of everything, except the signal flag, which is always short. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival repaired the sack of salt at the Canopy Walk for Ravi, who paid in 43 seed-notes and a long story about the rumour of a second well. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival was hired to carry a ledger from the Canopy Walk to Terrace Twelve without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 153, summer of year 32

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Ravi came by asking about the missing shipment. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 154, autumn of year 32

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Percival moved the glass float indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about whether the bridge will hold. At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 155, spring of year 32

Percival was hired to carry a hand bell from the tether docks to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the quarantine reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Brigid came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival won 83 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 156, winter of year 32

Percival was hired to carry a bundle of letters from Terrace Twelve to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Percival moved the wax seal indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the right way to mend a net. Rumours about the comet reached Terrace Twelve. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At Terrace Twelve, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone. Percival was hired to carry a ledger from Terrace Twelve to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 157, winter of year 33

Percival repaired the cracked compass at Terrace Twelve for Zelda, who paid in 4 seed-notes and a long story about the census. Percival repaired the cracked compass at Terrace Twelve for Mara, who paid in 24 seed-notes and a long story about the quarantine. The weather turned. Percival moved the sack of salt indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the new curfew. Percival won 78 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 158, summer of year 33

Brigid came by asking about the quarantine. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the pollinators' hall to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival won 70 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 159, spring of year 33

Cassius came by asking about the singing at the docks. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Quillon came by asking about the quarantine. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 75 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short.

Entry 160, winter of year 33

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 161, spring of year 34

Someone left a brass lantern on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival repaired the pair of spectacles at the pollinators' hall for Orsolya, who paid in 75 seed-notes and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Percival repaired the glass float at the pollinators' hall for Halcyon, who paid in 20 seed-notes and a long story about the price of lamp oil. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival repaired the hand bell at the pollinators' hall for Wilhelmina, who paid in 89 seed-notes and a long story about the comet.

Entry 162, autumn of year 34

Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 78 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the harvest count.

Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 163, spring of year 34

Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 24 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. Percival was hired to carry a wax seal from Terrace Twelve to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the census. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 7 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short.

Entry 164, winter of year 34

Rumours about the harvest count reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 165, spring of year 34

At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Yannick came by asking about the new curfew. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the comet. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 166, spring of year 34

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival repaired the pair of spectacles at the pollinators' hall for Seraphine, who paid in 67 seed-notes and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 59 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Valentin came by asking about the tax on doors. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 167, autumn of year 34

Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 51 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Brigid came by asking about the census. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 168, autumn of year 34

Cassius came by asking about the census. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival was hired to carry a clockwork bird from Terrace Twelve to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival found a sextant half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival won 28 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the census and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 169, summer of year 35

Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 19 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short.

Entry 170, winter of year 35

Bram came by asking about the comet. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival was hired to carry a grain scale from the Canopy Walk to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival was hired to carry a cracked compass from the Canopy Walk to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 171, summer of year 35

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival repaired the spool of wire at the tether docks for Dorothea, who paid in 75 seed-notes and a long story about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 172, spring of year 35

Percival repaired the sextant at Terrace Twelve for Tomasz, who paid in 23 seed-notes and a long story about the tax on doors. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about the tax on doors reached Terrace Twelve. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 173, summer of year 36

At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Percival moved the copper pipe indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the comet. Percival was hired to carry a bolt of linen from the Canopy Walk to Terrace Twelve without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 174, spring of year 36

Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Percival moved the iron kettle indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the quarantine. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 175, winter of year 36

Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 31 of everything, except the wax seal, which is always short. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival was hired to carry a sack of salt from Terrace Twelve to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 176, spring of year 36

Percival repaired the grain scale at the pollinators' hall for Hollis, who paid in 80 seed-notes and a long story about the price of lamp oil. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 47 of everything, except the glass float, which is always short.

Entry 177, autumn of year 37

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival found a cracked compass half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the quarantine reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 6 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short.

Entry 178, winter of year 37

Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival found a ledger half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Percival moved the copper pipe indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the harvest count.

Entry 179, winter of year 37

Percival won 12 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival found a copper pipe half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival was hired to carry a grain scale from Terrace Twelve to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 180, autumn of year 37

The weather turned. Percival moved the brass lantern indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the price of lamp oil. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the harvest count. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 181, winter of year 37

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Percival moved the tin whistle indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the harvest count. Rumours about the census reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 86 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. Percival closed early, walked to Terrace Twelve, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 182, winter of year 37

Yusuf came by asking about the new curfew. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 61 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 60 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short.

Entry 183, summer of year 37

Percival found a spool of wire half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival found a tin whistle half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Sunniva came by asking about the tariff on salt. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 184, spring of year 37

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Percival moved the pair of spectacles indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the tax on doors. Percival was hired to carry a spool of wire from the Canopy Walk to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 185, winter of year 37

Percival was hired to carry a iron kettle from the root-cellar markets to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival found a brass lantern half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival repaired the bundle of letters at the root-cellar markets for Teodora, who paid in 71 seed-notes and a long story about the singing at the docks.

Entry 186, spring of year 37

Percival repaired the bolt of linen at the root-cellar markets for Greta, who paid in 9 seed-notes and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. Baptiste came by asking about the harvest count. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival won 69 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 187, spring of year 37

The weather turned. Percival moved the clockwork bird indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the harvest count. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the new curfew. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the comet reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival found a tin whistle half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 188, winter of year 37

Rumours about the census reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rurik came by asking about the quarantine. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 189, spring of year 38

Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from Terrace Twelve to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 68 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 190, winter of year 38

At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone. Percival repaired the iron kettle at the tether docks for Lucienne, who paid in 82 seed-notes and a long story about the singing at the docks. At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a brass lantern on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival found a bundle of letters half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 191, winter of year 38

A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the pollinators' hall; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 34 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 44 of everything, except the wax seal, which is always short. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 3 of everything, except the wax seal, which is always short.

Entry 192, autumn of year 38

Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Noor came by asking about the singing at the docks. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the pollinators' hall; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 193, spring of year 38

Rowan came by asking about the harvest count. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival found a sack of salt half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 194, autumn of year 38

The weather turned. Percival moved the sextant indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the tariff on salt. Percival was hired to carry a iron kettle from Terrace Twelve to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached Terrace Twelve. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 195, winter of year 38

Percival won 2 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Percival won 76 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 196, spring of year 38

Percival won 88 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the census. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Teodora came by asking about the tax on doors. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 197, summer of year 38

Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 6 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. The weather turned. Percival moved the oilskin map indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about who really won the regatta. Percival won 41 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 198, spring of year 38

Percival won 60 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival won 56 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 199, autumn of year 38

Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 200, winter of year 38

Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. The weather turned. Percival moved the signal flag indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the comet. Rumours about the comet reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival won 46 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 201, winter of year 38

The weather turned. Percival moved the tin whistle indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the comet. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 63 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short.

Entry 202, winter of year 38

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the quarantine. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Percival moved the cracked compass indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the quarantine. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 80 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 203, autumn of year 38

Someone left a tin whistle on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 204, autumn of year 38

Greta came by asking about the census. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival repaired the hand bell at the pollinators' hall for Zelda, who paid in 23 seed-notes and a long story about the comet. Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 205, spring of year 39

Percival repaired the sack of salt at the pollinators' hall for Wilhelmina, who paid in 14 seed-notes and a long story about the singing at the docks. Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note.

Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 206, winter of year 39

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the quarantine. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Percival moved the signal flag indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the census. Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 207, winter of year 39

Percival repaired the tin whistle at the root-cellar markets for Sixten, who paid in 73 seed-notes and a long story about the census. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival repaired the oilskin map at the root-cellar markets for Wendeline, who paid in 24 seed-notes and a long story about the missing shipment. Percival repaired the coil of rope at the root-cellar markets for Torvald, who paid in 36 seed-notes and a long story about the new curfew.

Entry 208, winter of year 39

Percival found a brass lantern half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 17 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. Percival won 76 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 209, winter of year 39

Percival found a spool of wire half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Percival moved the grain scale indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the old tunnels. At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 210, spring of year 39

Percival repaired the ledger at Terrace Twelve for Freya, who paid in 31 seed-notes and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. At Terrace Twelve, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. The weather turned. Percival moved the grain scale indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the old tunnels.

Entry 211, summer of year 39

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Percival moved the ledger indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the quarantine. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 212, winter of year 39

Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. The weather turned. Percival moved the bolt of linen indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the tax on doors. Rumours about the quarantine reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the pollinators' hall; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 213, autumn of year 39

Percival found a grain scale half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Fenwick came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival closed early, walked to Terrace Twelve, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 214, summer of year 39

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival repaired the cracked compass at the tether docks for Yannick, who paid in 22 seed-notes and a long story about the price of lamp oil. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 56 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 215, spring of year 39

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival was hired to carry a wax seal from the tether docks to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Katarina came by asking about the harvest count. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 216, autumn of year 39

Percival repaired the copper pipe at Terrace Twelve for Elowen, who paid in 41 seed-notes and a long story about the right way to mend a net. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. At Terrace Twelve, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone. Percival repaired the signal flag at Terrace Twelve for Zubair, who paid in 81 seed-notes and a long story about the missing shipment. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 217, autumn of year 40

Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival won 78 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 218, summer of year 40

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 219, winter of year 40

The weather turned. Percival moved the brass lantern indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the new curfew. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. Valentin came by asking about the new curfew. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 77 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 220, winter of year 40

A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 43 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. Percival was hired to carry a cracked compass from the Canopy Walk to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival found a sextant half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 221, autumn of year 40

Greta came by asking about the quarantine. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone. Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 11 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. The weather turned. Percival moved the grain scale indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the harvest count.

Entry 222, winter of year 40

Percival was hired to carry a coil of rope from the pollinators' hall to Terrace Twelve without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the new curfew. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 223, summer of year 40

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival repaired the sextant at the Canopy Walk for Sunniva, who paid in 18 seed-notes and a long story about who really won the regatta. At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. Percival won 46 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 224, spring of year 40

Percival was hired to carry a glass float from the tether docks to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. The weather turned. Percival moved the sack of salt indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the new curfew.

Entry 225, spring of year 41

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival repaired the signal flag at the root-cellar markets for Zelda, who paid in 48 seed-notes and a long story about the rumour of a second well. The weather turned. Percival moved the brass lantern indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the price of lamp oil. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 226, summer of year 41

Percival found a oilskin map half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival found a hand bell half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival won 72 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. The weather turned. Percival moved the iron kettle indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the singing at the docks.

Entry 227, winter of year 41

Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the comet flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 228, autumn of year 41

Percival won 45 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival found a copper pipe half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 229, autumn of year 42

At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 230, summer of year 42

Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Zubair came by asking about the missing shipment. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 231, autumn of year 42

Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. A dispute over the comet flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 232, spring of year 42

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival won 27 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival was hired to carry a spool of wire from the root-cellar markets to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 233, spring of year 42

Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 35 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short. Viggo came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 234, winter of year 42

Bram came by asking about the singing at the docks. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. Percival won 62 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 235, autumn of year 42

Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 236, winter of year 42

Percival repaired the coil of rope at Terrace Twelve for Isadora, who paid in 9 seed-notes and a long story about the rumour of a second well. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 237, winter of year 42

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the tax on doors. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival found a sextant half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival was hired to carry a spool of wire from the Canopy Walk to Terrace Twelve without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 238, spring of year 42

Percival found a spool of wire half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Percival moved the hand bell indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the census. Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 29 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 239, summer of year 42

Percival was hired to carry a cracked compass from the tether docks to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Calloway came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 240, spring of year 42

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival was hired to carry a wax seal from the pollinators' hall to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. Percival won 52 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 241, spring of year 43

Percival was hired to carry a sextant from the pollinators' hall to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival won 69 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the pollinators' hall; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 242, winter of year 43

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Octavia came by asking about the old tunnels. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival was hired to carry a iron kettle from the root-cellar markets to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 243, autumn of year 43

Percival was hired to carry a coil of rope from the root-cellar markets to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 77 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 32 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 244, winter of year 43

Leocadia came by asking about the tax on doors. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Percival moved the oilskin map indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the old tunnels. Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 245, spring of year 44

Rumours about the new curfew reached Terrace Twelve. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival was hired to carry a brass lantern from Terrace Twelve to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Valentin came by asking about the tax on doors. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 246, winter of year 44

Percival won 27 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Petra came by asking about the missing shipment. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone. Percival repaired the grain scale at the tether docks for Noor, who paid in 32 seed-notes and a long story about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 247, summer of year 44

The weather turned. Percival moved the grain scale indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the missing shipment. Percival won 28 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. The weather turned. Percival moved the tin whistle indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the tariff on salt.

Entry 248, spring of year 44

Fitzgerald came by asking about the old tunnels. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the missing shipment. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 249, autumn of year 44

The weather turned. Percival moved the ledger indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the comet. Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 54 of everything, except the glass float, which is always short. Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 21 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. Percival repaired the brass lantern at the root-cellar markets for Elowen, who paid in 87 seed-notes and a long story about the comet. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 250, autumn of year 44

The weather turned. Percival moved the sack of salt indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the old tunnels. Percival repaired the cracked compass at Terrace Twelve for Gideon, who paid in 85 seed-notes and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Percival repaired the cracked compass at Terrace Twelve for Oduya, who paid in 84 seed-notes and a long story about the singing at the docks. Zubair came by asking about the harvest count. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the census. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 251, winter of year 44

Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival repaired the grain scale at the root-cellar markets for Sixten, who paid in 39 seed-notes and a long story about the tax on doors.

Entry 252, summer of year 44

Katarina came by asking about the comet. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 253, summer of year 45

Percival repaired the spool of wire at the root-cellar markets for Orsolya, who paid in 8 seed-notes and a long story about the harvest count. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the tax on doors. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 64 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short.

Entry 254, autumn of year 45

Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 255, autumn of year 45

Percival was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the tether docks to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival repaired the pair of spectacles at the tether docks for Kenji, who paid in 50 seed-notes and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 256, winter of year 45

Percival found a bundle of letters half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the quarantine. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival found a cracked compass half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Lucienne came by asking about the old tunnels. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 257, autumn of year 46

Percival found a coil of rope half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 86 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the missing shipment. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 258, spring of year 46

Ingrid came by asking about who really won the regatta. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the comet. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 259, winter of year 46

Rumours about the quarantine reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Quillon came by asking about the tariff on salt. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 260, summer of year 46

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival was hired to carry a ledger from the Canopy Walk to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 261, winter of year 47

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival won 40 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 262, winter of year 47

Percival closed early, walked to Terrace Twelve, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Percival moved the sack of salt indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the new curfew. At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Percival moved the sextant indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the old tunnels.

Entry 263, autumn of year 47

Percival won 4 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Someone left a brass lantern on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 264, spring of year 47

Percival found a bolt of linen half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival repaired the bolt of linen at the root-cellar markets for Wendeline, who paid in 75 seed-notes and a long story about the harvest count. Rumours about the quarantine reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 265, spring of year 48

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival repaired the sextant at the Canopy Walk for Olwen, who paid in 8 seed-notes and a long story about the new curfew. The weather turned. Percival moved the bundle of letters indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about who really won the regatta.

Entry 266, autumn of year 48

At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone. Percival repaired the brass lantern at the Canopy Walk for Phaedra, who paid in 62 seed-notes and a long story about the census. Percival won 49 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the census and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival found a brass lantern half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival found a glass float half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 267, spring of year 48

Percival found a brass lantern half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival repaired the sextant at the root-cellar markets for Wilhelmina, who paid in 38 seed-notes and a long story about the old tunnels. Percival was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the root-cellar markets to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival repaired the sack of salt at the root-cellar markets for Nikolai, who paid in 83 seed-notes and a long story about the new curfew.

Entry 268, winter of year 48

Percival was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the root-cellar markets to Terrace Twelve without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Nkechi came by asking about the singing at the docks. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 269, autumn of year 48

Percival repaired the wax seal at the pollinators' hall for Teodora, who paid in 25 seed-notes and a long story about the right way to mend a net. Percival was hired to carry a oilskin map from the pollinators' hall to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the comet reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 270, summer of year 48

Rumours about the tax on doors reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 43 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 76 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short.

Entry 271, summer of year 48

Percival won 34 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Umberto came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 11 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 272, summer of year 48

The weather turned. Percival moved the bolt of linen indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the comet. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 273, winter of year 48

Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival was hired to carry a sextant from the Canopy Walk to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 87 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short.

Entry 274, autumn of year 48

A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 275, winter of year 48

Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 35 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the pollinators' hall; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 276, spring of year 48

Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival found a sextant half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival found a bolt of linen half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 277, autumn of year 49

Percival was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the tether docks to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 55 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short. Corvina came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the harvest count. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 278, autumn of year 49

Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 279, autumn of year 49

Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival found a tin whistle half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival won 65 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival found a tin whistle half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the census reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 280, autumn of year 49

The weather turned. Percival moved the spool of wire indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about who really won the regatta. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival repaired the ledger at the root-cellar markets for Emeric, who paid in 55 seed-notes and a long story about the price of lamp oil. The weather turned. Percival moved the wax seal indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the tariff on salt.

Entry 281, spring of year 49

Percival found a hand bell half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Brigid came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 282, summer of year 49

Phaedra came by asking about the quarantine. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival repaired the iron kettle at the Canopy Walk for Ysolde, who paid in 88 seed-notes and a long story about the right way to mend a net.

Entry 283, summer of year 49

Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 46 of everything, except the signal flag, which is always short. Percival repaired the coil of rope at the pollinators' hall for Jorah, who paid in 2 seed-notes and a long story about the comet.

Entry 284, summer of year 49

Percival was hired to carry a sextant from the Canopy Walk to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a wax seal on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival found a wax seal half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Percival moved the hand bell indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about who really won the regatta.

Entry 285, summer of year 49

Percival repaired the signal flag at the tether docks for Hyacinth, who paid in 18 seed-notes and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Percival found a spool of wire half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about the comet reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 286, autumn of year 49

Percival was hired to carry a sack of salt from the root-cellar markets to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival repaired the copper pipe at the root-cellar markets for Seraphine, who paid in 4 seed-notes and a long story about the quarantine. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 287, autumn of year 49

A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 22 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 11 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short. At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 288, autumn of year 49

A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Sable came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 289, summer of year 49

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the census. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a brass lantern on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Percival was hired to carry a spool of wire from the Canopy Walk to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Dorothea came by asking about the comet. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 290, spring of year 49

Rumours about the missing shipment reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 291, summer of year 49

Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 7 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. Percival found a wax seal half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Amadou came by asking about the singing at the docks. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 292, autumn of year 49

Percival won 30 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At Terrace Twelve, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 293, summer of year 49

Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 28 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. Yannick came by asking about the old tunnels. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Percival moved the brass lantern indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the right way to mend a net. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the old tunnels. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 294, autumn of year 49

Percival repaired the bolt of linen at Terrace Twelve for Corvina, who paid in 25 seed-notes and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop.

Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. The weather turned. Percival moved the cracked compass indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the quarantine. Percival found a bundle of letters half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 295, spring of year 49

Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival found a brass lantern half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival was hired to carry a glass float from the pollinators' hall to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Cassius came by asking about the singing at the docks. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 296, spring of year 49

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Marisol came by asking about the singing at the docks. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 297, autumn of year 50

Percival repaired the coil of rope at Terrace Twelve for Juniper, who paid in 70 seed-notes and a long story about the harvest count. Percival repaired the wax seal at Terrace Twelve for Greta, who paid in 38 seed-notes and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Percival found a cracked compass half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 298, winter of year 50

Rumours about the missing shipment reached Terrace Twelve. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival won 35 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 299, autumn of year 50

Benedikt came by asking about the census. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. At Terrace Twelve, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Percival moved the sextant indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the harvest count.

Entry 300, winter of year 50

Percival repaired the grain scale at the root-cellar markets for Fitzgerald, who paid in 81 seed-notes and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 55 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short. Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 301, summer of year 51

Freya came by asking about the tax on doors. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival was hired to carry a brass lantern from the pollinators' hall to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 65 of everything, except the wax seal, which is always short.

Entry 302, summer of year 51

Percival repaired the wax seal at the pollinators' hall for Delphine, who paid in 39 seed-notes and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Percival found a grain scale half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Sable came by asking about the singing at the docks. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the pollinators' hall to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 303, summer of year 51

Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival repaired the spool of wire at the pollinators' hall for Ingrid, who paid in 17 seed-notes and a long story about the right way to mend a net. Percival won 85 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 304, spring of year 51

At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the census. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 305, winter of year 51

Percival found a grain scale half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Percival moved the sextant indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the harvest count. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 306, spring of year 51

Rumours about the quarantine reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 307, spring of year 51

Percival won 72 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival repaired the wax seal at the tether docks for Dashiell, who paid in 8 seed-notes and a long story about the tariff on salt. Percival found a sextant half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival was hired to carry a bolt of linen from the tether docks to Terrace Twelve without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the harvest count reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 308, spring of year 51

The weather turned. Percival moved the bundle of letters indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the old tunnels. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival repaired the oilskin map at the tether docks for Tiberius, who paid in 68 seed-notes and a long story about the comet. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 309, autumn of year 51

Rumours about the new curfew reached Terrace Twelve. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 310, summer of year 51

At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. Percival won 22 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival won 14 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. The weather turned. Percival moved the brass lantern indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the singing at the docks. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 78 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short.

Entry 311, winter of year 51

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival was hired to carry a iron kettle from the pollinators' hall to Terrace Twelve without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival repaired the pair of spectacles at the pollinators' hall for Wendeline, who paid in 55 seed-notes and a long story about the census.

Entry 312, summer of year 51

Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 313, autumn of year 51

The weather turned. Percival moved the spool of wire indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about who really won the regatta. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival won 74 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 314, winter of year 51

The weather turned. Percival moved the coil of rope indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the right way to mend a net. Percival was hired to carry a hand bell from the root-cellar markets to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the new curfew reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 315, autumn of year 51

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 61 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival won 67 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 32 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short.

Entry 316, winter of year 51

Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival repaired the copper pipe at the Canopy Walk for Imogen, who paid in 4 seed-notes and a long story about the census. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 317, spring of year 51

Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 59 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short. At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Liora came by asking about the quarantine. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 318, spring of year 51

At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the pollinators' hall; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Petra came by asking about the harvest count. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 319, summer of year 51

Rumours about the missing shipment reached Terrace Twelve. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At Terrace Twelve, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 320, summer of year 51

Percival won 53 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. The weather turned. Percival moved the sack of salt indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about whether the bridge will hold. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival won 55 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 321, spring of year 51

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the census reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival found a oilskin map half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 322, autumn of year 51

Percival found a pair of spectacles half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival won 17 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 323, autumn of year 51

The weather turned. Percival moved the ledger indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the census. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 324, winter of year 51

The weather turned. Percival moved the bolt of linen indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the right way to mend a net. Percival won 7 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 325, autumn of year 51

Percival closed early, walked to Terrace Twelve, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the census. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival won 4 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Calloway came by asking about the singing at the docks. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 326, autumn of year 51

Percival won 40 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Pilar came by asking about the census. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached Terrace Twelve. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 327, spring of year 51

Rumours about the harvest count reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Percival moved the oilskin map indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the rumour of a second well. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival won 17 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 328, summer of year 51

Lucienne came by asking about the singing at the docks. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the root-cellar markets; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 329, autumn of year 52

Octavia came by asking about the census. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Tomasz came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival repaired the coil of rope at the tether docks for Jorah, who paid in 13 seed-notes and a long story about who really won the regatta. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the missing shipment for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival repaired the grain scale at the tether docks for Qadira, who paid in 72 seed-notes and a long story about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 330, winter of year 52

The weather turned. Percival moved the wax seal indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the comet. Percival won 86 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Percival and Corvina outside Terrace Twelve; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Percival moved the spool of wire indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about whether the bridge will hold. Percival found a iron kettle half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 331, summer of year 52

Percival closed early, walked to Terrace Twelve, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival repaired the bolt of linen at the pollinators' hall for Liora, who paid in 40 seed-notes and a long story about who really won the regatta. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 332, summer of year 52

Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 78 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 333, winter of year 52

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the harvest count. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Percival moved the bundle of letters indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the singing at the docks. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 334, summer of year 52

The weather turned. Percival moved the clockwork bird indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the missing shipment. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. Emeric came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 335, spring of year 52

Dorothea came by asking about the tax on doors. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Percival moved the grain scale indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the singing at the docks.

Entry 336, summer of year 52

At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Percival moved the oilskin map indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the rumour of a second well. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the pollinators' hall; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the tax on doors. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 337, summer of year 53

At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone. Percival repaired the spool of wire at the pollinators' hall for Brigid, who paid in 23 seed-notes and a long story about the tax on doors. Percival closed early, walked to Terrace Twelve, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone. Percival repaired the clockwork bird at the pollinators' hall for Zora, who paid in 19 seed-notes and a long story about the new curfew.

Entry 338, spring of year 53

Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 69 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival won 66 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 339, winter of year 53

Rumours about the new curfew reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. At the Canopy Walk, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 340, spring of year 53

Rowan came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival won 51 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 341, spring of year 53

The weather turned. Percival moved the copper pipe indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the missing shipment. Winifred came by asking about the tax on doors. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival repaired the bundle of letters at the tether docks for Ursula, who paid in 86 seed-notes and a long story about the quarantine.

Entry 342, spring of year 53

Rumours about the missing shipment reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Leocadia came by asking about the census. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival repaired the sack of salt at the pollinators' hall for Yannick, who paid in 13 seed-notes and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Eamon came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 343, autumn of year 53

At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 68 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short. Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets:

82 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short.

Entry 344, summer of year 53

Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 345, autumn of year 54

Percival was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the root-cellar markets to Terrace Twelve without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 346, winter of year 54

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the old tunnels. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 83 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short. Percival was hired to carry a coil of rope from Terrace Twelve to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 347, winter of year 54

Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 67 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. Astrid came by asking about the tax on doors. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival closed early, walked to the root-cellar markets, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 348, autumn of year 54

Percival won 59 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Percival moved the bundle of letters indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the singing at the docks. At the pollinators' hall, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the pollinators' hall; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 349, winter of year 54

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival found a pair of spectacles half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Liora came by asking about the singing at the docks. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 350, winter of year 54

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a hand bell on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 351, summer of year 54

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the old tunnels. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival was hired to carry a signal flag from the Canopy Walk to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival found a hand bell half-buried near the Canopy Walk and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Percival moved the bolt of linen indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the tax on doors.

Entry 352, autumn of year 54

Percival won 60 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival won 34 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 81 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short.

Entry 353, summer of year 55

At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 354, spring of year 55

A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the Canopy Walk; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival won 65 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. The weather turned. Percival moved the signal flag indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the tax on doors. Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 83 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short.

Entry 355, summer of year 55

Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 356, summer of year 55

Percival won 80 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival found a oilskin map half-buried near the root-cellar markets and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 357, summer of year 56

Percival found a brass lantern half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Percival moved the oilskin map indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the tariff on salt. Percival spent the day counting stock at the tether docks: 12 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 358, autumn of year 56

At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. Percival was hired to carry a spool of wire from the root-cellar markets to the tether docks without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 359, winter of year 56

Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. The weather turned. Percival moved the sextant indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the tax on doors. Percival repaired the hand bell at the Canopy Walk for Xiomara, who paid in 15 seed-notes and a long story about the tax on doors. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 360, winter of year 56

Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. The weather turned. Percival moved the sack of salt indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the old tunnels. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 361, spring of year 56

Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the census. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 362, winter of year 56

At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone. Percival repaired the sextant at the root-cellar markets for Magnus, who paid in 76 seed-notes and a long story about the tax on doors. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone. Emeric came by asking about the missing shipment. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 363, spring of year 56

Percival found a brass lantern half-buried near the pollinators' hall and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Percival moved the cracked compass indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the comet. Percival won 31 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the pollinators' hall to the root-cellar markets without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 364, summer of year 56

A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 42 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. Percival closed early, walked to the Canopy Walk, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 365, summer of year 57

Percival won 26 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Percival moved the brass lantern indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the comet. Percival was hired to carry a sextant from the tether docks to the Canopy Walk without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 366, winter of year 57

Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 79 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. At the root-cellar markets, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 367, winter of year 57

Percival repaired the hand bell at the tether docks for Nadira, who paid in 43 seed-notes and a long story about the right way to mend a net. Percival was hired to carry a grain scale from the tether docks to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 368, summer of year 57

At the tether docks, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Percival moved the sack of salt indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the right way to mend a net. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the old tunnels. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 369, summer of year 57

Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Percival won 13 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 370, autumn of year 57

Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 24 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. Percival was hired to carry a hand bell from Terrace Twelve to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival found a signal flag half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 371, summer of year 57

Someone left a brass lantern on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 372, winter of year 57

Percival won 28 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Astrid came by asking about the missing shipment. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Percival moved the copper pipe indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the quarantine. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 373, autumn of year 57

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Percival closed early, walked to the tether docks, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Tomasz came by asking about the harvest count. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 374, spring of year 57

Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival repaired the wax seal at the pollinators' hall for Magnus, who paid in 3 seed-notes and a long story about the price of lamp oil. The weather turned. Percival moved the spool of wire indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about the old tunnels.

Entry 375, winter of year 57

Rumours about the old tunnels reached the Canopy Walk. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival won 5 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Percival won 71 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 376, summer of year 57

Percival repaired the pair of spectacles at the Canopy Walk for Kwame, who paid in 39 seed-notes and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. Percival repaired the grain scale at the Canopy Walk for Caspian, who paid in 55 seed-notes and a long story about the tax on doors. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right.

Entry 377, spring of year 57

Percival found a tin whistle half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from Terrace Twelve to the pollinators' hall without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 378, winter of year 57

Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 48 of everything, except the glass float, which is always short. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the harvest count. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival spent the day counting stock at Terrace Twelve: 33 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short. Percival repaired the bundle of letters at Terrace Twelve for Thaddeus, who paid in 64 seed-notes and a long story about the quarantine. At Terrace Twelve, Percival taught Emeric how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 379, summer of year 57

Imogen visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Imogen came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival found a pair of spectacles half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 380, autumn of year 57

Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. Percival spent the day counting stock at the pollinators' hall: 87 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop.

Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival won 12 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the pollinators' hall. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 381, spring of year 57

Lucienne came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. A stranger asked Percival for the password to the workshop. Percival laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Percival spent the day counting stock at the Canopy Walk: 82 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short.

Entry 382, autumn of year 57

Zelda came by asking about the census. Percival said nothing useful and made tea instead. Percival closed early, walked to Terrace Twelve, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance. Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Percival suspects Emeric and is probably right. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Percival and Corvina outside the tether docks; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Percival won 44 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash.

Entry 383, autumn of year 57

the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the tax on doors. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival won 86 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the census and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Percival found a iron kettle half-buried near the tether docks and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the comet reached the tether docks. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 384, autumn of year 57

Percival found a tin whistle half-buried near Terrace Twelve and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Percival won 66 seed-notes from Corvina on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on cold apple and onion hash. the Verdance Stewardship sent a notice about the harvest count. Percival read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Percival closed early, walked to the pollinators' hall, and watched the lights come on. Rook followed at a distance.

Entry 385, autumn of year 57

Percival spent the day counting stock at the root-cellar markets: 59 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. The weather turned. Percival moved the brass lantern indoors, fed Rook, and wrote three lines to Imogen about whether the bridge will hold. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the root-cellar markets. Percival pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.