

Pilar Greywind

Character Dossier

Boisterous, generous, easily bored radio operator of the Drowned Library beneath Old Cassilon

Overview

Pilar Greywind is a radio operator living in the Drowned Library beneath Old Cassilon. Pilar is 21 years old, originally from Sunder, and is known around the Reading Well as boisterous, generous, easily bored. In conversation Pilar refuses to say the word 'no' outright.

Background

Pilar arrived in the Drowned Library beneath Old Cassilon 8 years ago after leaving Sunder under circumstances Pilar describes differently every time. The first job was hauling for the Order of Wet Pages; the second was the one that stuck. Today Pilar works as a radio operator near the Stacks of Ash and is paid, when paid at all, in ink-weights.

Pilar learned the trade from Isadora Grimsby, who still drops by unannounced. The longest-running feud in Pilar's life is with Caspian Zimmerling, over a matter neither will explain. The person Pilar trusts most is Cassius Nightingale.

Current goal: to build a boat with no nails in it. Greatest fear: being forgotten.

Personality and speech

Temperament: boisterous, generous, easily bored.

Speech pattern: Pilar refuses to say the word 'no' outright.

Tells: when lying, Pilar mentions Ziggy the hound for no reason.

Verified facts

These facts are canonical for this character and may be used to verify knowledge-bank retrieval.

Full name	Pilar Greywind
Role	radio operator
Home	the Drowned Library beneath Old Cassilon
Hometown	Sunder
Age	21
Favourite dish	midnight chestnut soup
Pet	Ziggy, a hound
Lucky number	196

Workshop password	tallow-obsidian
Mentor	Isadora Grimsby
Rival	Caspian Zimmerling
Closest friend	Cassius Nightingale

Secret

Pilar once turned down an offer from the Order of Wet Pages that would have made them rich, and wonders about it nightly.

Sample dialogue

Visitor: What do you do here?

Pilar: I am the radio operator. Has been that way longer than you have been asking questions.

Visitor: What is your favourite thing to eat?

Pilar: Midnight chestnut soup. Do not tell Caspian I said so.

Visitor: Is Ziggy yours?

Pilar: Ziggy belongs to nobody. Ziggy tolerates me. Lucky number is 196, if you were about to ask.

Chronicle

Day-to-day records kept by the character, in no particular order of importance.

Entry 1, summer of year 17

The weather turned. Pilar moved the ledger indoors, fed Ziggy, and wrote three lines to Isadora about the new curfew. The weather turned. Pilar moved the brass lantern indoors, fed Ziggy, and wrote three lines to Isadora about the quarantine. Rumours about the census reached the Archivist's cell. Pilar pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the Archivist's cell. Pilar pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 2, autumn of year 17

Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about the quarantine for an hour and parted better friends than before. Pilar was hired to carry a signal flag from the Stacks of Ash to the sluice gates without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Pilar moved the coil of rope indoors, fed Ziggy, and wrote three lines to Isadora about the right way to mend a net. Pilar won 67 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. Pilar spent the day counting stock at the Stacks of Ash: 72 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short.

Entry 3, winter of year 17

Pilar won 2 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. Pilar found a spool of wire half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Pilar suspects Cassius and is probably right. Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 4, winter of year 17

Pilar closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Ziggy followed at a distance. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Pilar and Caspian outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the cataloguers' gallery, Pilar taught Cassius how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. A stranger asked Pilar for the password to the workshop. Pilar laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 5, summer of year 17

Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the Reading Well. Pilar pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Pilar found a coil of rope half-buried near the Reading Well and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Pilar won 30 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. Hollis came by asking about the new curfew. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 6, winter of year 17

A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Pilar and Caspian outside the Reading Well; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the Reading Well, Pilar taught Cassius how to tell a real signal flag from a fake one by weight alone. Pilar won 21 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. Pilar spent the day counting stock at the Reading Well: 42 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 7, winter of year 17

Rumours about the missing shipment reached the Stacks of Ash. Pilar pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. The weather turned. Pilar moved the glass float indoors, fed Ziggy, and wrote three lines to Isadora about the new curfew. Pilar was hired to carry a grain scale from the Stacks of Ash to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 8, summer of year 17

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the comet. Pilar read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Nadira came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead. Pilar was hired to carry a sextant from the Reading Well to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Pilar and Caspian outside the Reading Well; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Pilar read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 9, summer of year 17

Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Pilar for the password to the workshop. Pilar laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Pilar repaired the grain scale at the Archivist's cell for Brigid, who paid in 87 ink-weights and a long story about the old tunnels.

Entry 10, summer of year 17

Rumours about the new curfew reached the Archivist's cell. Pilar pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Pilar found a coil of rope half-buried near the Archivist's cell and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about the right way to mend a net for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 11, autumn of year 17

Pilar closed early, walked to the Archivist's cell, and watched the lights come on. Ziggy followed at a distance. Pilar was hired to carry a glass float from the sluice gates to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Pilar repaired the brass lantern at the sluice gates for Osric, who paid in 19 ink-weights and a long story about the tariff on salt.

Entry 12, autumn of year 17

Rumours about the harvest count reached the Stacks of Ash. Pilar pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the Stacks of Ash. Pilar pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Tallulah came by asking about the singing at the docks. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead. Ignatius came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead. Ignatius came by asking about the harvest count. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 13, autumn of year 18

Pilar found a glass float half-buried near the Reading Well and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Sable came by asking about the new curfew. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Pilar for the password to the workshop. Pilar laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Pilar and Caspian outside the Reading Well; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Pilar repaired the copper pipe at the Reading Well for Farida, who paid in 4 ink-weights and a long story about the old tunnels.

Entry 14, spring of year 18

Pilar repaired the sextant at the Archivist's cell for Emeric, who paid in 78 ink-weights and a long story about the singing at the docks. Greta came by asking about who really won the regatta. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead. Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 15, spring of year 18

Pilar found a oilskin map half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Pilar won 81 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. Xiomara came by asking about the old tunnels. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 16, autumn of year 18

Pilar repaired the brass lantern at the cataloguers' gallery for Ysolde, who paid in 84 ink-weights and a long story about the tariff on salt. Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Pilar suspects Cassius and is probably right. Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 17, summer of year 18

Pilar won 52 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. Pilar repaired the hand bell at the Stacks of Ash for Katarina, who paid in 35 ink-weights and a long story about the singing at the docks. Pilar was hired to carry a iron kettle from the Stacks of Ash to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Pilar suspects Cassius and is probably right. Calloway came by asking about the harvest count. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 18, summer of year 18

Pilar won 70 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. Pilar spent the day counting stock at the Reading Well: 45 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. Pilar was hired to carry a glass float from the Reading Well to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the new curfew. Pilar read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 19, spring of year 18

Pilar was hired to carry a copper pipe from the Stacks of Ash to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the Stacks of Ash, Pilar taught Cassius how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone. Pilar spent the day counting stock at the Stacks of Ash: 36 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Pilar and Caspian outside the Stacks of Ash; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 20, winter of year 18

Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Pilar read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Pilar for the password to the workshop. Pilar laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 21, autumn of year 18

Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. Pilar was hired to carry a copper pipe from the Reading Well to the sluice gates without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the Reading Well, Pilar taught Cassius how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 22, spring of year 18

Pilar closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. Ziggy followed at a distance. Pilar was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the cataloguers' gallery to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Pilar won 39 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. The weather turned. Pilar moved the grain scale indoors, fed Ziggy, and wrote three lines to Isadora about the price of lamp oil.

Entry 23, summer of year 18

Pilar closed early, walked to the sluice gates, and watched the lights come on. Ziggy followed at a distance. Pilar spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 46 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. At the cataloguers' gallery, Pilar taught Cassius how to tell a real grain scale from a fake one by weight alone. A stranger asked Pilar for the password to the workshop. Pilar laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the cataloguers' gallery. Pilar pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 24, summer of year 18

Rumours about the census reached the sluice gates. Pilar pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Pilar spent the day counting stock at the sluice gates: 27 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. The weather turned. Pilar moved the wax seal indoors, fed Ziggy, and wrote three lines to Isadora about who really won the regatta. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Pilar suspects Cassius and is probably right. Pilar repaired the pair of spectacles at the sluice gates for Bram, who paid in 54 ink-weights and a long story about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 25, autumn of year 18

The weather turned. Pilar moved the tin whistle indoors, fed Ziggy, and wrote three lines to Isadora about the tariff on salt. Katarina came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the cataloguers' gallery, Pilar taught Cassius how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. Pilar was hired to carry a glass float from the cataloguers' gallery to the sluice gates without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Delphine came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 26, summer of year 18

Pilar closed early, walked to the cataloguers' gallery, and watched the lights come on. Ziggy followed at a distance. Pilar spent the day counting stock at the Stacks of Ash: 34 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. A stranger asked Pilar for the password to the workshop. Pilar laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the Stacks of Ash, Pilar taught Cassius how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. At the Stacks of Ash, Pilar taught Cassius how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 27, autumn of year 18

Pilar repaired the coil of rope at the Archivist's cell for Orsolya, who paid in 83 ink-weights and a long story about who really won the regatta. Pilar repaired the tin whistle at the Archivist's cell for Corvina, who paid in 6 ink-weights and a long story about the quarantine. At the Archivist's cell, Pilar taught Cassius how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 28, autumn of year 18

Pilar found a hand bell half-buried near the Stacks of Ash and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Pilar for the password to the workshop. Pilar laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Pilar found a sextant half-buried near the Stacks of Ash and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the new curfew. Pilar read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 29, summer of year 18

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Pilar read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Pilar for the password to the workshop. Pilar laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Pilar spent the day counting stock at the sluice gates: 13 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Pilar suspects Cassius and is probably right.

Entry 30, spring of year 18

Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the cataloguers' gallery. Pilar pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Pilar won 26 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. Pilar was hired to carry a signal flag from the cataloguers' gallery to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 31, spring of year 18

Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. Liora came by asking about the right way to mend a net. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Pilar and Caspian outside the Reading Well; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Fenwick came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead. Ravi came by asking about the missing shipment. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 32, autumn of year 18

Pilar won 20 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. Pilar won 13 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. At the sluice gates, Pilar taught Cassius how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the sluice gates. Pilar pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 33, summer of year 19

Pilar won 18 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. Pilar found a bolt of linen half-buried near the Archivist's cell and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Pilar and Caspian outside the Archivist's cell; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the Archivist's cell. Pilar pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 34, autumn of year 19

Pilar was hired to carry a coil of rope from the sluice gates to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Pilar spent the day counting stock at the sluice gates: 28 of everything, except the signal flag, which is always short. Pilar won 47 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. At the sluice gates, Pilar taught Cassius how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone. Pilar found a wax seal half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 35, autumn of year 19

Pilar found a coil of rope half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Pilar closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Ziggy followed at a distance. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Pilar and Caspian outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 36, winter of year 19

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Pilar read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A stranger asked Pilar for the password to the workshop. Pilar laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Pilar suspects Cassius and is probably right. At the Archivist's cell, Pilar taught Cassius how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 37, winter of year 19

A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Pilar and Caspian outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Rumours about the quarantine reached the cataloguers' gallery. Pilar pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the cataloguers' gallery, Pilar taught Cassius how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 38, spring of year 19

At the cataloguers' gallery, Pilar taught Cassius how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. Osric came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead. Pilar found a brass lantern half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 39, spring of year 19

Pilar was hired to carry a spool of wire from the Stacks of Ash to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Pilar won 71 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. The weather turned. Pilar moved the bundle of letters indoors, fed Ziggy, and wrote three lines to Isadora about the comet.

Entry 40, winter of year 19

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Pilar read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Pilar closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. Ziggy followed at a distance. A stranger asked Pilar for the password to the workshop. Pilar laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 41, winter of year 20

Pilar closed early, walked to the sluice gates, and watched the lights come on. Ziggy followed at a distance. Pilar spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 32 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Pilar spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 56 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short.

Entry 42, spring of year 20

Pilar found a brass lantern half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Pilar moved the ledger indoors, fed Ziggy, and wrote three lines to Isadora about the price of lamp oil. Pilar closed early, walked to the sluice gates, and watched the lights come on. Ziggy followed at a distance. Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. Pilar spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 11 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short.

Entry 43, spring of year 20

Pilar spent the day counting stock at the Archivist's cell: 74 of everything, except the wax seal, which is always short. Pilar closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. Ziggy followed at a distance. Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. Pilar was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the Archivist's cell to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Pilar was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the Archivist's cell to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 44, autumn of year 20

Pilar closed early, walked to the cataloguers' gallery, and watched the lights come on. Ziggy followed at a distance. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Pilar and Caspian outside the Reading Well; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Pilar moved the bolt of linen indoors, fed Ziggy, and wrote three lines to Isadora about the rumour of a second well. Pilar found a clockwork bird half-buried near the Reading Well and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Pilar and Caspian outside the Reading Well; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 45, winter of year 21

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Pilar read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Pilar found a bolt of linen half-buried near the Archivist's cell and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Pilar closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. Ziggy followed at a distance. Pilar found a iron kettle half-buried near the Archivist's cell and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 46, spring of year 21

Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Pilar for the password to the workshop. Pilar laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Pilar won 60 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. Pilar won 51 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup.

Entry 47, autumn of year 21

Zeph came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead. Pilar closed early, walked to the sluice gates, and watched the lights come on. Ziggy followed at a distance. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the tax on doors. Pilar read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 48, summer of year 21

Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Pilar suspects Cassius and is probably right. Vesna came by asking about the census. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead. Pilar won 53 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. Xiomara came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Pilar said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 49, autumn of year 22

Pilar won 36 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. Pilar repaired the oilskin map at the cataloguers' gallery for Marisol, who paid in 2 ink-weights and a long story about the new curfew. Pilar was hired to carry a tin whistle from the cataloguers' gallery to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 50, summer of year 22

Pilar was hired to carry a hand bell from the cataloguers' gallery to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded. At the cataloguers' gallery, Pilar taught Cassius how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. At the cataloguers' gallery, Pilar taught Cassius how to tell a real signal flag from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 51, winter of year 22

Pilar closed early, walked to the Archivist's cell, and watched the lights come on. Ziggy followed at a distance. Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Pilar suspects Cassius and is probably right. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the harvest count. Pilar read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 52, winter of year 22

Pilar spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 75 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. Pilar was hired to carry a signal flag from the cataloguers' gallery to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Pilar won 19 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup. Rumours about the new curfew reached the cataloguers' gallery. Pilar pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 53, winter of year 22

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Pilar read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Isadora visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. Pilar was hired to carry a sack of salt from the Reading Well to the sluice gates without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the census reached the Reading Well. Pilar pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 54, autumn of year 22

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the harvest count. Pilar read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Pilar moved the hand bell indoors, fed Ziggy, and wrote three lines to Isadora about the tariff on salt. Pilar won 23 ink-weights from Caspian on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on midnight chestnut soup.