

Winifred Zimmerling

Character Dossier

Melancholy but funny cartographer of the Drowned Library beneath Old Cassilon

Overview

Winifred Zimmerling is a cartographer living in the Drowned Library beneath Old Cassilon. Winifred is 66 years old, originally from Bittermoor, and is known around the Reading Well as melancholy but funny. In conversation Winifred gives directions by landmark, never by street name.

Background

Winifred arrived in the Drowned Library beneath Old Cassilon 17 years ago after leaving Bittermoor under circumstances Winifred describes differently every time. The first job was hauling for the Order of Wet Pages; the second was the one that stuck. Today Winifred works as a cartographer near the Stacks of Ash and is paid, when paid at all, in ink-weights.

Winifred learned the trade from Pilar Greywind, who still drops by unannounced. The longest-running feud in Winifred's life is with Juniper Stillwater, over a matter neither will explain. The person Winifred trusts most is Petra Nightingale.

Current goal: to keep Petra Nightingale out of trouble for one full season. Greatest fear: birds indoors.

Personality and speech

Temperament: melancholy but funny.

Speech pattern: Winifred gives directions by landmark, never by street name.

Tells: when lying, Winifred mentions Tinker the hawk for no reason.

Verified facts

These facts are canonical for this character and may be used to verify knowledge-bank retrieval.

Full name	Winifred Zimmerling
Role	cartographer
Home	the Drowned Library beneath Old Cassilon
Hometown	Bittermoor
Age	66
Favourite dish	twice-cooked mushroom dumplings
Pet	Tinker, a hawk
Lucky number	222

Workshop password	slate-tallow
Mentor	Pilar Greywind
Rival	Juniper Stillwater
Closest friend	Petra Nightingale

Secret

Winifred once forged a letter of passage for a stranger who turned out to be a wanted person, and still keeps the copy.

Sample dialogue

Visitor: What do you do here?

Winifred: I am the cartographer. Has been that way longer than you have been asking questions.

Visitor: What is your favourite thing to eat?

Winifred: Twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Do not tell Juniper I said so.

Visitor: Is Tinker yours?

Winifred: Tinker belongs to nobody. Tinker tolerates me. Lucky number is 222, if you were about to ask.

Chronicle

Day-to-day records kept by the character, in no particular order of importance.

Entry 1, autumn of year 21

Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the Stacks of Ash. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Winifred won 62 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Stacks of Ash: 35 of everything, except the pair of spectacles, which is always short.

Entry 2, autumn of year 21

A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the Reading Well; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Winifred closed early, walked to the Archivist's cell, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Winifred repaired the spool of wire at the Reading Well for Sunniva, who paid in 14 ink-weights and a long story about who really won the regatta.

Entry 3, summer of year 21

The weather turned. Winifred moved the clockwork bird indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the tax on doors. The weather turned. Winifred moved the clockwork bird indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the new curfew. Rumours about the new curfew reached the sluice gates. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 4, summer of year 21

Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the Stacks of Ash. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the Stacks of Ash, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone. Winifred repaired the coil of rope at the Stacks of Ash for Ignatius, who paid in 25 ink-weights and a long story about the old tunnels. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the Stacks of Ash. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 5, winter of year 21

Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the cataloguers' gallery. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Winifred was hired to carry a hand bell from the cataloguers' gallery to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Winifred closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. The weather turned. Winifred moved the oilskin map indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the new curfew. Someone left a signal flag on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right.

Entry 6, summer of year 21

Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Winifred won 57 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the census and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. At the Reading Well, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 7, winter of year 21

Winifred repaired the oilskin map at the Stacks of Ash for Hollis, who paid in 15 ink-weights and a long story about the rumour of a second well. The weather turned. Winifred moved the spool of wire indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the right way to mend a net. Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. At the Stacks of Ash, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real pair of spectacles from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 8, autumn of year 21

A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the Stacks of Ash, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real oilskin map from a fake one by weight alone. Winifred repaired the bundle of letters at the Stacks of Ash for Halcyon, who paid in 60 ink-weights and a long story about the tax on doors.

Entry 9, autumn of year 22

Winifred won 48 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the sluice gates: 39 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short. A dispute over the comet flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 10, winter of year 22

Winifred closed early, walked to the cataloguers' gallery, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Reading Well: 53 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. Winifred was hired to carry a sack of salt from the Reading Well to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Reading Well: 45 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short.

Entry 11, winter of year 22

A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the Stacks of Ash; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right.

Entry 12, autumn of year 22

A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Reading Well: 66 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. At the Reading Well, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 13, spring of year 22

At the Reading Well, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone. Dorothea came by asking about the new curfew. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Winifred won 80 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the census and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Winifred closed early, walked to the sluice gates, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance.

Entry 14, winter of year 22

Winifred found a clockwork bird half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 15, summer of year 22

Winifred spent the day counting stock at the sluice gates: 3 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short. The weather turned. Winifred moved the ledger indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the census. A dispute over the missing shipment flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Winifred found a glass float half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 16, winter of year 22

Winifred found a iron kettle half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Winifred closed early, walked to the sluice gates, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Winifred found a copper pipe half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 17, autumn of year 22

Winifred was hired to carry a signal flag from the Reading Well to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded. The weather turned. Winifred moved the oilskin map indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the tax on doors. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Reading Well: 76 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. Winifred found a pair of spectacles half-buried near the Reading Well and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 18, summer of year 22

Winifred closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. Winifred found a brass lantern half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Winifred found a sextant half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 19, autumn of year 22

Elowen came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. Winifred won 9 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 20, spring of year 22

Winifred closed early, walked to the sluice gates, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Dashiell came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 70 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. Winifred won 46 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the census and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Winifred found a signal flag half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 21, autumn of year 23

Winifred closed early, walked to the Archivist's cell, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. Winifred repaired the pair of spectacles at the cataloguers' gallery for Sunniva, who paid in 35 ink-weights and a long story about the right way to mend a net. Winifred closed early, walked to the Archivist's cell, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance.

Entry 22, spring of year 23

Winifred repaired the grain scale at the Stacks of Ash for Zubair, who paid in 33 ink-weights and a long story about the new curfew. Winifred repaired the sextant at the Stacks of Ash for Soren, who paid in 24 ink-weights and a long story about the missing shipment. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the Stacks of Ash. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 23, summer of year 23

Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Winifred won 58 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 24, summer of year 23

Winifred repaired the bolt of linen at the sluice gates for Sixten, who paid in 17 ink-weights and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Winifred closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 25, autumn of year 24

Winifred won 10 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the old tunnels. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Winifred repaired the cracked compass at the cataloguers' gallery for Liora, who paid in 80 ink-weights and a long story about the quarantine. Winifred closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance.

Entry 26, summer of year 24

Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Winifred closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance.

Entry 27, autumn of year 24

Winifred was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the Stacks of Ash to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Winifred won 79 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the missing shipment and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Winifred repaired the pair of spectacles at the Stacks of Ash for Liora, who paid in 90 ink-weights and a long story about the price of lamp oil. The weather turned. Winifred moved the ledger indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the tariff on salt. Winifred closed early, walked to the cataloguers' gallery, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance.

Entry 28, winter of year 24

Rumours about the harvest count reached the Stacks of Ash. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Winifred closed early, walked to the sluice gates, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Winifred repaired the clockwork bird at the Stacks of Ash for Elowen, who paid in 70 ink-weights and a long story about the census. Winifred won 86 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 29, spring of year 25

The weather turned. Winifred moved the cracked compass indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the census. Winifred repaired the coil of rope at the Reading Well for Juniper, who paid in 68 ink-weights and a long story about the tax on doors. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Reading Well: 50 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Winifred closed early, walked to the Archivist's cell, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Winifred found a bolt of linen half-buried near the Reading Well and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 30, spring of year 25

Rumours about the harvest count reached the Archivist's cell. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Winifred repaired the spool of wire at the Archivist's cell for Thaddeus, who paid in 23 ink-weights and a long story about the right way to mend a net. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the Archivist's cell. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 31, summer of year 25

Winifred found a glass float half-buried near the Archivist's cell and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the Archivist's cell; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Winifred was hired to carry a sextant from the Archivist's cell to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Winifred repaired the sextant at the Archivist's cell for Yevgenia, who paid in 3 ink-weights and a long story about the harvest count. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 32, summer of year 25

A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the Stacks of Ash; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the Stacks of Ash. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the Stacks of Ash. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Stacks of Ash: 86 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short.

Entry 33, spring of year 25

Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the Reading Well. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Winifred closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 34, autumn of year 25

Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Winifred was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the Archivist's cell to the sluice gates without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Winifred found a ledger half-buried near the Archivist's cell and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 35, summer of year 25

Winifred closed early, walked to the Archivist's cell, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Ulla came by asking about the new curfew. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. Winifred found a tin whistle half-buried near the Reading Well and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Winifred was hired to carry a bolt of linen from the Reading Well to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 36, summer of year 25

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the Archivist's cell; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the Archivist's cell, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real ledger from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 37, summer of year 25

Winifred found a clockwork bird half-buried near the Stacks of Ash and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Winifred repaired the bolt of linen at the Stacks of Ash for Calloway, who paid in 30 ink-weights and a long story about the harvest count. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the tax on doors for an hour and parted better friends than before. At the Stacks of Ash, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about whether the bridge will hold. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 38, winter of year 25

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Winifred won 30 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Osric came by asking about the missing shipment. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 39, summer of year 25

Kestrel came by asking about the census. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. Winifred was hired to carry a brass lantern from the sluice gates to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right.

Entry 40, autumn of year 25

Winifred repaired the signal flag at the cataloguers' gallery for Katarina, who paid in 50 ink-weights and a long story about the price of lamp oil. Katarina came by asking about the comet. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. Winifred found a copper pipe half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a sack of salt on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Winifred won 28 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about who really won the regatta and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings.

Entry 41, summer of year 25

Rumours about the missing shipment reached the Stacks of Ash. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Winifred closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Winifred was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the Stacks of Ash to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Stacks of Ash: 5 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short.

Entry 42, spring of year 25

Winifred won 9 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Soren came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Winifred moved the brass lantern indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the tax on doors. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 43, spring of year 25

Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. Winifred repaired the brass lantern at the Reading Well for Ysolde, who paid in 26 ink-weights and a long story about the price of lamp oil. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Reading Well: 54 of everything, except the tin whistle, which is always short.

Entry 44, winter of year 25

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the harvest count. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Zeph came by asking about the singing at the docks. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 45, summer of year 25

Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Archivist's cell: 90 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short. Winifred was hired to carry a iron kettle from the Archivist's cell to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before. Winifred found a iron kettle half-buried near the Archivist's cell and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 46, winter of year 25

Tallulah came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. Winifred closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. At the Reading Well, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone. Winifred found a bundle of letters half-buried near the Reading Well and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the Reading Well. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 47, spring of year 25

Winifred was hired to carry a coil of rope from the cataloguers' gallery to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Winifred was hired to carry a grain scale from the cataloguers' gallery to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 48, winter of year 25

A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the cataloguers' gallery, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Winifred moved the iron kettle indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the tax on doors. Winifred won 71 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. At the cataloguers' gallery, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 49, summer of year 26

Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Archivist's cell: 10 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. Winifred won 6 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Winifred closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance.

Entry 50, winter of year 26

Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Viggo came by asking about the census. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Winifred moved the signal flag indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the old tunnels.

Entry 51, winter of year 26

Winifred spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 64 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Teodora came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Winifred moved the sack of salt indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the tariff on salt.

Entry 52, autumn of year 26

At the Reading Well, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Winifred moved the copper pipe indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the right way to mend a net. Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Winifred won 70 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. At the Reading Well, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 53, winter of year 26

Winifred repaired the cracked compass at the Stacks of Ash for Imogen, who paid in 50 ink-weights and a long story about the old tunnels. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Stacks of Ash: 8 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short. Winifred closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance.

Entry 54, winter of year 26

Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the cataloguers' gallery. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the cataloguers' gallery, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 3 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 55, spring of year 26

Winifred was hired to carry a grain scale from the Archivist's cell to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Winifred repaired the cracked compass at the Archivist's cell for Tomasz, who paid in 56 ink-weights and a long story about the harvest count. Someone left a oilskin map on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right.

Entry 56, spring of year 26

Winifred was hired to carry a bolt of linen from the cataloguers' gallery to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over the census flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Winifred repaired the wax seal at the cataloguers' gallery for Thaddeus, who paid in 46 ink-weights and a long story about the quarantine. Winifred was hired to carry a hand bell from the cataloguers' gallery to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Winifred repaired the glass float at the cataloguers' gallery for Sunniva, who paid in 29 ink-weights and a long story about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 57, winter of year 27

A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 58, spring of year 27

Winifred won 48 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the Stacks of Ash; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about who really won the regatta. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Winifred was hired to carry a hand bell from the Stacks of Ash to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Winifred closed early, walked to the cataloguers' gallery, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance.

Entry 59, summer of year 27

Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the cataloguers' gallery. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the cataloguers' gallery, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a clockwork bird on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right.

Entry 60, autumn of year 27

Rumours about the missing shipment reached the Archivist's cell. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the Archivist's cell, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Winifred moved the copper pipe indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the comet. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the Archivist's cell. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 61, autumn of year 28

A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the Stacks of Ash; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Emeric came by asking about the missing shipment. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. The weather turned. Winifred moved the bolt of linen indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the tariff on salt. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 62, autumn of year 28

At the Stacks of Ash, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the tax on doors reached the Stacks of Ash. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Rumours about the census reached the Stacks of Ash. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the Stacks of Ash, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Stacks of Ash: 38 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short.

Entry 63, winter of year 28

Tallulah came by asking about the census. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Winifred was hired to carry a glass float from the cataloguers' gallery to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the cataloguers' gallery. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 64, autumn of year 28

Winifred found a signal flag half-buried near the Reading Well and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Winifred repaired the clockwork bird at the Reading Well for Liora, who paid in 40 ink-weights and a long story about the singing at the docks. Winifred repaired the pair of spectacles at the Reading Well for Oduya, who paid in 68 ink-weights and a long story about the census.

Entry 65, winter of year 29

The weather turned. Winifred moved the sack of salt indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the tax on doors. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the Reading Well; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Reading Well: 52 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short.

Entry 66, spring of year 29

Winifred spent the day counting stock at the sluice gates: 6 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. Winifred was hired to carry a copper pipe from the sluice gates to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a bundle of letters on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right.

Entry 67, summer of year 29

Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Winifred repaired the brass lantern at the cataloguers' gallery for Rowan, who paid in 7 ink-weights and a long story about the singing at the docks. Winifred closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Winifred closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 68, winter of year 29

A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the Archivist's cell; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Winifred repaired the pair of spectacles at the Archivist's cell for Matthias, who paid in 35 ink-weights and a long story about the price of lamp oil.

Entry 69, summer of year 29

A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the comet. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. The weather turned. Winifred moved the signal flag indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the quarantine. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the census. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 70, autumn of year 29

Rumours about the harvest count reached the Stacks of Ash. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Someone left a brass lantern on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Nadira came by asking about the tariff on salt. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. Winifred won 13 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Liora came by asking about the comet. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 71, summer of year 29

A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Stacks of Ash: 66 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short. At the Stacks of Ash, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real clockwork bird from a fake one by weight alone. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 72, spring of year 29

Kestrel came by asking about the singing at the docks. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 83 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. Winifred repaired the clockwork bird at the cataloguers' gallery for Teodora, who paid in 41 ink-weights and a long story about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 73, summer of year 29

Winifred won 88 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the census for an hour and parted better friends than before. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Pilar came by asking about the tax on doors. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 74, autumn of year 29

Winifred repaired the ledger at the cataloguers' gallery for Soren, who paid in 47 ink-weights and a long story about the comet. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the quarantine. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Winifred found a pair of spectacles half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 75, autumn of year 29

Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before. Winifred won 69 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about whether the bridge will hold and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Winifred was hired to carry a cracked compass from the Archivist's cell to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 76, winter of year 29

Winifred was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the sluice gates to the Stacks of Ash without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Winifred found a sack of salt half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. At the sluice gates, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. Winifred found a bolt of linen half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the price of lamp oil for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 77, spring of year 30

Winifred was hired to carry a sextant from the Archivist's cell to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Winifred found a sack of salt half-buried near the Archivist's cell and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Someone left a spool of wire on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right.

Entry 78, winter of year 30

Winifred found a grain scale half-buried near the Archivist's cell and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Winifred was hired to carry a brass lantern from the Archivist's cell to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Brigid came by asking about the tariff on salt. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. Wilhelmina came by asking about whether the bridge will hold. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 79, winter of year 30

Rumours about the harvest count reached the cataloguers' gallery. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Winifred found a spool of wire half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the cataloguers' gallery, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real spool of wire from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 80, autumn of year 30

Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. The weather turned. Winifred moved the tin whistle indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the census. Winifred won 69 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the price of lamp oil and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Winifred found a wax seal half-buried near the Reading Well and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 81, spring of year 30

Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Reading Well: 40 of everything, except the oilskin map, which is always short. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 82, spring of year 30

Winifred was hired to carry a tin whistle from the Stacks of Ash to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Winifred closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Stacks of Ash: 19 of everything, except the sack of salt, which is always short. At the Stacks of Ash, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real wax seal from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 83, winter of year 30

The weather turned. Winifred moved the glass float indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the singing at the docks. Winifred was hired to carry a copper pipe from the Stacks of Ash to the sluice gates without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Winifred closed early, walked to the sluice gates, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. At the Stacks of Ash, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone. At the Stacks of Ash, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 84, winter of year 30

Winifred closed early, walked to the sluice gates, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Winifred repaired the oilskin map at the cataloguers' gallery for Yevgenia, who paid in 89 ink-weights and a long story about the tariff on salt. At the cataloguers' gallery, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 85, winter of year 30

Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the sluice gates. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Winifred was hired to carry a copper pipe from the sluice gates to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Elowen came by asking about the quarantine. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 86, autumn of year 30

The weather turned. Winifred moved the clockwork bird indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about whether the bridge will hold. Imogen came by asking about the old tunnels. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. Winifred won 62 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the new curfew and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings.

Entry 87, autumn of year 30

the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the comet. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Winifred closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Winifred closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 88, autumn of year 30

A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. The weather turned. Winifred moved the spool of wire indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about whether the bridge will hold. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 89, summer of year 31

Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the old tunnels for an hour and parted better friends than before. Winifred was hired to carry a bundle of letters from the Archivist's cell to the Reading Well without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Xiomara came by asking about the census. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. Winifred won 17 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings.

Entry 90, autumn of year 31

Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the cataloguers' gallery. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the cataloguers' gallery, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 91, autumn of year 31

At the cataloguers' gallery, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 3 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short.

Entry 92, summer of year 31

Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the cataloguers' gallery. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the cataloguers' gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 93, spring of year 31

Winifred closed early, walked to the Archivist's cell, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Winifred repaired the wax seal at the Reading Well for Farida, who paid in 76 ink-weights and a long story about the old tunnels. Winifred closed early, walked to the Archivist's cell, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Winifred closed early, walked to the Archivist's cell, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance.

Entry 94, spring of year 31

Winifred repaired the spool of wire at the Reading Well for Orsolya, who paid in 60 ink-weights and a long story about the harvest count. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. The weather turned. Winifred moved the glass float indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the comet. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 95, winter of year 31

Winifred closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the singing at the docks for an hour and parted better friends than before.

Entry 96, autumn of year 31

A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Winifred found a cracked compass half-buried near the Stacks of Ash and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 97, winter of year 32

Hollis came by asking about who really won the regatta. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. Someone left a glass float on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the Stacks of Ash; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Winifred was hired to carry a grain scale from the Stacks of Ash to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 98, spring of year 32

Winifred found a iron kettle half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Winifred won 28 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. A dispute over the old tunnels flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the sluice gates; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 99, summer of year 32

Winifred was hired to carry a wax seal from the cataloguers' gallery to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Winifred closed early, walked to the Archivist's cell, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Rurik came by asking about the comet. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the quarantine. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. At the cataloguers' gallery, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 100, autumn of year 32

A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the Stacks of Ash; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. The weather turned. Winifred moved the pair of spectacles indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the harvest count. A dispute over the comet flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the Stacks of Ash; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 101, summer of year 33

Winifred was hired to carry a grain scale from the sluice gates to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the sluice gates. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Winifred found a coil of rope half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 102, spring of year 33

Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Winifred repaired the copper pipe at the Archivist's cell for Xiomara, who paid in 3 ink-weights and a long story about the quarantine. Someone left a bolt of linen on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Hollis came by asking about the missing shipment. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about the comet reached the Archivist's cell. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 103, spring of year 33

Ignatius came by asking about the singing at the docks. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. A dispute over the harvest count flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the Archivist's cell; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the Archivist's cell, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 104, summer of year 33

Winifred spent the day counting stock at the sluice gates: 27 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. The weather turned. Winifred moved the ledger indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the right way to mend a net. Winifred found a bundle of letters half-buried near the sluice gates and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Someone left a coil of rope on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right.

Entry 105, autumn of year 33

Winifred won 78 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about whether the bridge will hold for an hour and parted better friends than before. Winifred repaired the bolt of linen at the Reading Well for Zora, who paid in 75 ink-weights and a long story about who really won the regatta.

Entry 106, spring of year 33

Winifred closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. At the cataloguers' gallery, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Winifred moved the sack of salt indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the singing at the docks. Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 107, winter of year 33

Winifred won 23 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Winifred found a copper pipe half-buried near the Reading Well and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the comet flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the Reading Well; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the Reading Well; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Winifred closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance.

Entry 108, winter of year 33

The weather turned. Winifred moved the grain scale indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the tariff on salt. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Winifred won 78 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Winifred won 72 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings.

Entry 109, spring of year 33

Winifred found a cracked compass half-buried near the Reading Well and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the Reading Well; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the Reading Well, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 110, autumn of year 33

The weather turned. Winifred moved the brass lantern indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about whether the bridge will hold. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. Winifred was hired to carry a pair of spectacles from the sluice gates to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 111, winter of year 33

The weather turned. Winifred moved the coil of rope indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the tariff on salt. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the sluice gates, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real brass lantern from a fake one by weight alone. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the tariff on salt for an hour and parted better friends than before. Someone left a ledger on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right.

Entry 112, spring of year 33

Winifred repaired the glass float at the Archivist's cell for Thaddeus, who paid in 48 ink-weights and a long story about the price of lamp oil. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Archivist's cell: 75 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. At the Archivist's cell, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right.

Entry 113, winter of year 34

At the cataloguers' gallery, Winifred taught Petra how to tell a real bolt of linen from a fake one by weight alone. Winifred found a clockwork bird half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A stranger asked Winifred for the password to the workshop. Winifred laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 114, winter of year 34

Winifred spent the day counting stock at the Archivist's cell: 37 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. Winifred closed early, walked to the cataloguers' gallery, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. The weather turned. Winifred moved the spool of wire indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the harvest count. Winifred closed early, walked to the cataloguers' gallery, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Winifred found a grain scale half-buried near the Archivist's cell and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 115, summer of year 34

Winifred closed early, walked to the sluice gates, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Winifred won 19 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the old tunnels and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Winifred closed early, walked to the sluice gates, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. The weather turned. Winifred moved the sack of salt indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about the tax on doors. A dispute over the new curfew flared up between Winifred and Juniper outside the Stacks of Ash; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 116, winter of year 34

Winifred was hired to carry a hand bell from the Stacks of Ash to the Archivist's cell without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a iron kettle on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Rumours about the missing shipment reached the Stacks of Ash. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Pilar visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. Winifred repaired the clockwork bird at the Stacks of Ash for Tomasz, who paid in 12 ink-weights and a long story about the tax on doors.

Entry 117, spring of year 35

Winifred won 39 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Winifred repaired the cracked compass at the Reading Well for Leocadia, who paid in 64 ink-weights and a long story about the tariff on salt. Winifred repaired the wax seal at the Reading Well for Wendeline, who paid in 38 ink-weights and a long story about who really won the regatta. Winifred was hired to carry a hand bell from the Reading Well to the cataloguers' gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Someone left a pair of spectacles on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right.

Entry 118, winter of year 35

Rumours about the quarantine reached the sluice gates. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Winifred won 5 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Winifred closed early, walked to the Stacks of Ash, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. the Order of Wet Pages sent a notice about the price of lamp oil. Winifred read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Someone left a grain scale on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right.

Entry 119, spring of year 35

The weather turned. Winifred moved the hand bell indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about whether the bridge will hold. Winifred closed early, walked to the Reading Well, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. Someone left a sextant on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Winifred suspects Petra and is probably right. Winifred won 39 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings.

Entry 120, autumn of year 35

Winifred won 20 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings. Winifred closed early, walked to the Archivist's cell, and watched the lights come on. Tinker followed at a distance. The weather turned. Winifred moved the oilskin map indoors, fed Tinker, and wrote three lines to Pilar about whether the bridge will hold.

Entry 121, autumn of year 35

Rumours about the new curfew reached the Archivist's cell. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Astrid came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead. Winifred won 86 ink-weights from Juniper on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on twice-cooked mushroom dumplings.

Entry 122, winter of year 35

Winifred repaired the pair of spectacles at the cataloguers' gallery for Hollis, who paid in 45 ink-weights and a long story about whether the bridge will hold. Winifred spent the day counting stock at the cataloguers' gallery: 57 of everything, except the cracked compass, which is always short. Winifred found a sack of salt half-buried near the cataloguers' gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the cataloguers' gallery. Winifred pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Olwen came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Winifred said nothing useful and made tea instead.