

Emeric Fairweather

Character Dossier

Blunt, practical and allergic to small talk innkeeper of the Emerald Court of Ardenne

Overview

Emeric Fairweather is a innkeeper living in the Emerald Court of Ardenne. Emeric is 43 years old, originally from Kingsreach, and is known around the Mirror Gallery as blunt, practical and allergic to small talk. In conversation Emeric uses trade jargon and then patiently explains it.

Background

Emeric arrived in the Emerald Court of Ardenne 18 years ago after leaving Kingsreach under circumstances Emeric describes differently every time. The first job was hauling for House Ardenne; the second was the one that stuck. Today Emeric works as a innkeeper near the royal mews and is paid, when paid at all, in crowns.

Emeric learned the trade from Xanthe Blackwater, who still drops by unannounced. The longest-running feud in Emeric's life is with Sunniva Jessop, over a matter neither will explain. The person Emeric trusts most is Xiomara Grimsby.

Current goal: to reopen the shop their parents lost. Greatest fear: the bells at midnight.

Personality and speech

Temperament: blunt, practical and allergic to small talk.

Speech pattern: Emeric uses trade jargon and then patiently explains it.

Tells: when lying, Emeric mentions Dumpling the beetle for no reason.

Verified facts

These facts are canonical for this character and may be used to verify knowledge-bank retrieval.

Full name	Emeric Fairweather
Role	innkeeper
Home	the Emerald Court of Ardenne
Hometown	Kingsreach
Age	43
Favourite dish	charred peach hand pies
Pet	Dumpling, a beetle
Lucky number	187

Workshop password	brine-cinder
Mentor	Xanthe Blackwater
Rival	Sunniva Jessop
Closest friend	Xiomara Grimsby

Secret

Emeric sold a family heirloom to pay for Xiomara Grimsby's medicine and told everyone it was stolen.

Sample dialogue

Visitor: What do you do here?

Emeric: I am the innkeeper. Has been that way longer than you have been asking questions.

Visitor: What is your favourite thing to eat?

Emeric: Charred peach hand pies. Do not tell Sunniva I said so.

Visitor: Is Dumpling yours?

Emeric: Dumpling belongs to nobody. Dumpling tolerates me. Lucky number is 187, if you were about to ask.

Chronicle

Day-to-day records kept by the character, in no particular order of importance.

Entry 1, summer of year 33

Xanthe visited unannounced. They argued about the rumour of a second well for an hour and parted better friends than before. Emeric repaired the spool of wire at the royal mews for Farida, who paid in 65 crowns and a long story about the price of lamp oil. Emeric spent the day counting stock at the royal mews: 17 of everything, except the ledger, which is always short. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Emeric and Sunniva outside the royal mews; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Emeric spent the day counting stock at the royal mews: 75 of everything, except the coil of rope, which is always short.

Entry 2, spring of year 33

Emeric found a sack of salt half-buried near the Sunken Garden and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Emeric won 75 crowns from Sunniva on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on charred peach hand pies. At the Sunken Garden, Emeric taught Xiomara how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the census reached the Sunken Garden. Emeric pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 3, summer of year 33

Xanthe visited unannounced. They argued about the comet for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the census flared up between Emeric and Sunniva outside the royal mews; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Emeric and Sunniva outside the royal mews; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 4, winter of year 33

Emeric closed early, walked to the Sunken Garden, and watched the lights come on. Dumpling followed at a distance. Rhoswen came by asking about the tax on doors. Emeric said nothing useful and made tea instead. Emeric spent the day counting stock at the royal mews: 87 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. A stranger asked Emeric for the password to the workshop. Emeric laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not.

Entry 5, autumn of year 33

Emeric repaired the grain scale at the Chancery for Nikolai, who paid in 63 crowns and a long story about the missing shipment. Emeric spent the day counting stock at the Chancery: 7 of everything, except the bundle of letters, which is always short. Emeric repaired the oilskin map at the Chancery for Kenji, who paid in 19 crowns and a long story about who really won the regatta.

Entry 6, winter of year 33

Brigid came by asking about the tax on doors. Emeric said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about the comet reached the lower kitchens. Emeric pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Emeric won 89 crowns from Sunniva on a bet about the census and spent all of it on charred peach hand pies. At the lower kitchens, Emeric taught Xiomara how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 7, autumn of year 33

Oduya came by asking about the tariff on salt. Emeric said nothing useful and made tea instead. At the lower kitchens, Emeric taught Xiomara how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone. Hollis came by asking about the new curfew. Emeric said nothing useful and made tea instead. House Ardenne sent a notice about the comet. Emeric read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. House Ardenne sent a notice about the tariff on salt. Emeric read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 8, spring of year 33

Xanthe visited unannounced. They argued about the harvest count for an hour and parted better friends than before. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Emeric and Sunniva outside the Mirror Gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Emeric won 13 crowns from Sunniva on a bet about the rumour of a second well and spent all of it on charred peach hand pies.

Entry 9, spring of year 34

Emeric closed early, walked to the royal mews, and watched the lights come on. Dumpling followed at a distance. Emeric closed early, walked to the royal mews, and watched the lights come on. Dumpling followed at a distance. A stranger asked Emeric for the password to the workshop. Emeric laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the Chancery, Emeric taught Xiomara how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone. At the Chancery, Emeric taught Xiomara how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 10, winter of year 34

At the Chancery, Emeric taught Xiomara how to tell a real sextant from a fake one by weight alone. Xanthe visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Emeric closed early, walked to the lower kitchens, and watched the lights come on. Dumpling followed at a distance.

Entry 11, summer of year 34

Emeric spent the day counting stock at the Sunken Garden: 82 of everything, except the sextant, which is always short. The weather turned. Emeric moved the bolt of linen indoors, fed Dumpling, and wrote three lines to Xanthe about the new curfew. Emeric was hired to carry a clockwork bird from the Sunken Garden to the Mirror Gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 12, spring of year 34

Emeric spent the day counting stock at the royal mews: 54 of everything, except the iron kettle, which is always short. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Emeric and Sunniva outside the royal mews; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the quarantine reached the royal mews. Emeric pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Emeric spent the day counting stock at the royal mews: 8 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. House Ardenne sent a notice about the quarantine. Emeric read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 13, winter of year 34

Xanthe visited unannounced. They argued about who really won the regatta for an hour and parted better friends than before. House Ardenne sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Emeric read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Emeric and Sunniva outside the lower kitchens; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 14, spring of year 34

Emeric spent the day counting stock at the Chancery: 24 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. Rumours about the comet reached the Chancery. Emeric pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. At the Chancery, Emeric taught Xiomara how to tell a real coil of rope from a fake one by weight alone. At the Chancery, Emeric taught Xiomara how to tell a real hand bell from a fake one by weight alone. Someone left a copper pipe on the doorstep with no note. Emeric suspects Xiomara and is probably right.

Entry 15, summer of year 34

Emeric spent the day counting stock at the Sunken Garden: 37 of everything, except the clockwork bird, which is always short. Rumours about the price of lamp oil reached the Sunken Garden. Emeric pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Emeric and Sunniva outside the Sunken Garden; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Emeric was hired to carry a grain scale from the Sunken Garden to the Mirror Gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 16, autumn of year 34

Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the Chancery. Emeric pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Emeric won 6 crowns from Sunniva on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on charred peach hand pies. House Ardenne sent a notice about the tax on doors. Emeric read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Emeric was hired to carry a sack of salt from the Chancery to the Mirror Gallery without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 17, winter of year 34

A dispute over the tax on doors flared up between Emeric and Sunniva outside the royal mews; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the tariff on salt reached the royal mews. Emeric pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Emeric was hired to carry a glass float from the royal mews to the Chancery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Emeric spent the day counting stock at the royal mews: 78 of everything, except the brass lantern, which is always short. At the royal mews, Emeric taught Xiomara how to tell a real iron kettle from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 18, winter of year 34

The weather turned. Emeric moved the signal flag indoors, fed Dumpling, and wrote three lines to Xanthe about who really won the regatta. The weather turned. Emeric moved the oilskin map indoors, fed Dumpling, and wrote three lines to Xanthe about the missing shipment. A stranger asked Emeric for the password to the workshop. Emeric laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Emeric was hired to carry a sack of salt from the Sunken Garden to the royal mews without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 19, spring of year 34

Emeric repaired the bundle of letters at the royal mews for Cassius, who paid in 16 crowns and a long story about the quarantine. Someone left a cracked compass on the doorstep with no note. Emeric suspects Xiomara and is probably right. At the royal mews, Emeric taught Xiomara how to tell a real bundle of letters from a fake one by weight alone. The weather turned. Emeric moved the clockwork bird indoors, fed Dumpling, and wrote three lines to Xanthe about the rumour of a second well.

Entry 20, autumn of year 34

Rumours about whether the bridge will hold reached the lower kitchens. Emeric pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Emeric was hired to carry a oilskin map from the lower kitchens to the Sunken Garden without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Emeric spent the day counting stock at the lower kitchens: 78 of everything, except the hand bell, which is always short. Emeric won 39 crowns from Sunniva on a bet about the singing at the docks and spent all of it on charred peach hand pies.

Entry 21, winter of year 34

Hyacinth came by asking about the tax on doors. Emeric said nothing useful and made tea instead. Emeric was hired to carry a copper pipe from the royal mews to the Sunken Garden without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Gideon came by asking about the quarantine. Emeric said nothing useful and made tea instead. Rumours about the census reached the royal mews. Emeric pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the rumour of a second well flared up between Emeric and Sunniva outside the royal mews; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 22, summer of year 34

At the Mirror Gallery, Emeric taught Xiomara how to tell a real sack of salt from a fake one by weight alone. Qadira came by asking about the comet. Emeric said nothing useful and made tea instead. Emeric won 36 crowns from Sunniva on a bet about the tax on doors and spent all of it on charred peach hand pies. Benedikt came by asking about the missing shipment. Emeric said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 23, spring of year 34

Emeric spent the day counting stock at the Sunken Garden: 76 of everything, except the wax seal, which is always short. Emeric won 53 crowns from Sunniva on a bet about the right way to mend a net and spent all of it on charred peach hand pies. Emeric found a ledger half-buried near the Sunken Garden and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 24, summer of year 34

Emeric repaired the clockwork bird at the royal mews for Tomasz, who paid in 43 crowns and a long story about the rumour of a second well. Kwame came by asking about the tariff on salt. Emeric said nothing useful and made tea instead. A stranger asked Emeric for the password to the workshop.

Emeric laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Emeric was hired to carry a glass float from the royal mews to the Sunken Garden without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 25, winter of year 35

Emeric was hired to carry a copper pipe from the Mirror Gallery to the Chancery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. Rumours about who really won the regatta reached the Mirror Gallery. Emeric pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. A dispute over the quarantine flared up between Emeric and Sunniva outside the Mirror Gallery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 26, spring of year 35

Hyacinth came by asking about the tax on doors. Emeric said nothing useful and made tea instead. Emeric found a grain scale half-buried near the royal mews and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Emeric repaired the glass float at the royal mews for Sable, who paid in 7 crowns and a long story about the census. Emeric found a sack of salt half-buried near the royal mews and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 27, autumn of year 35

A dispute over the comet flared up between Emeric and Sunniva outside the Chancery; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. At the Chancery, Emeric taught Xiomara how to tell a real glass float from a fake one by weight alone. Rumours about the rumour of a second well reached the Chancery. Emeric pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 28, spring of year 35

Emeric won 85 crowns from Sunniva on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on charred peach hand pies. A dispute over the right way to mend a net flared up between Emeric and Sunniva outside the royal mews; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A stranger asked Emeric for the password to the workshop. Emeric laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. Emeric closed early, walked to the lower kitchens, and watched the lights come on. Dumpling followed at a distance.

Entry 29, spring of year 36

Rumours about the right way to mend a net reached the Sunken Garden. Emeric pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Emeric won 68 crowns from Sunniva on a bet about the comet and spent all of it on charred peach hand pies. Emeric closed early, walked to the lower kitchens, and watched the lights come on. Dumpling followed at a distance. A stranger asked Emeric for the password to the workshop. Emeric laughed and said it was written on the wall, which it is not. At the Sunken Garden, Emeric taught Xiomara how to tell a real tin whistle from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 30, spring of year 36

The weather turned. Emeric moved the glass float indoors, fed Dumpling, and wrote three lines to Xanthe about the price of lamp oil. At the royal mews, Emeric taught Xiomara how to tell a real copper pipe from a fake one by weight alone. Corvina came by asking about the tax on doors. Emeric said nothing useful and made tea instead.

Entry 31, autumn of year 36

Emeric repaired the hand bell at the Mirror Gallery for Baptiste, who paid in 30 crowns and a long story about the harvest count. Tallulah came by asking about the price of lamp oil. Emeric said nothing useful and made tea instead. House Ardenne sent a notice about the harvest count. Emeric read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Emeric repaired the cracked compass at the Mirror Gallery for Pilar, who paid in 5 crowns and a long story about the new curfew.

Entry 32, spring of year 36

The weather turned. Emeric moved the brass lantern indoors, fed Dumpling, and wrote three lines to Xanthe about the new curfew. The weather turned. Emeric moved the grain scale indoors, fed Dumpling, and wrote three lines to Xanthe about the tax on doors. Emeric was hired to carry a coil of rope from the royal mews to the Sunken Garden without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 33, spring of year 37

Zora came by asking about the rumour of a second well. Emeric said nothing useful and made tea instead. Hyacinth came by asking about the singing at the docks. Emeric said nothing useful and made tea instead. Emeric found a sack of salt half-buried near the lower kitchens and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. A dispute over the tariff on salt flared up between Emeric and Sunniva outside the lower kitchens; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding.

Entry 34, autumn of year 37

A dispute over who really won the regatta flared up between Emeric and Sunniva outside the royal mews; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. A dispute over the price of lamp oil flared up between Emeric and Sunniva outside the royal mews; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. House Ardenne sent a notice about the new curfew. Emeric read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table.

Entry 35, winter of year 37

Rumours about the old tunnels reached the lower kitchens. Emeric pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. House Ardenne sent a notice about the singing at the docks. Emeric read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Emeric spent the day counting stock at the lower kitchens: 23 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Emeric won 66 crowns from Sunniva on a bet about the tariff on salt and spent all of it on charred peach hand pies.

Entry 36, summer of year 37

Rumours about the comet reached the Sunken Garden. Emeric pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it. Emeric closed early, walked to the lower kitchens, and watched the lights come on. Dumpling followed at a distance. A dispute over the singing at the docks flared up between Emeric and Sunniva outside the Sunken Garden; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Xanthe visited unannounced. They argued about the new curfew for an hour and parted better friends than before. Emeric spent the day counting stock at the Sunken Garden: 76 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short.

Entry 37, spring of year 37

At the Chancery, Emeric taught Xiomara how to tell a real cracked compass from a fake one by weight alone. Emeric repaired the iron kettle at the Chancery for Ursula, who paid in 45 crowns and a long story about the census. Emeric spent the day counting stock at the Chancery: 52 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short.

Entry 38, spring of year 37

The weather turned. Emeric moved the grain scale indoors, fed Dumpling, and wrote three lines to Xanthe about the price of lamp oil. Emeric found a sack of salt half-buried near the royal mews and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Emeric spent the day counting stock at the royal mews: 59 of everything, except the spool of wire, which is always short. Emeric closed early, walked to the lower kitchens, and watched the lights come on. Dumpling followed at a distance. Emeric repaired the oilskin map at the royal mews for Orsolya, who paid in 57 crowns and a long story about the quarantine.

Entry 39, spring of year 37

Emeric won 48 crowns from Sunniva on a bet about the quarantine and spent all of it on charred peach hand pies. House Ardenne sent a notice about the rumour of a second well. Emeric read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Emeric closed early, walked to the Sunken Garden, and watched the lights come on. Dumpling followed at a distance. At the Mirror Gallery, Emeric taught Xiomara how to tell a real signal flag from a fake one by weight alone.

Entry 40, autumn of year 37

Emeric spent the day counting stock at the royal mews: 86 of everything, except the copper pipe, which is always short. Emeric was hired to carry a brass lantern from the royal mews to the Chancery without opening it, and mostly succeeded. A dispute over whether the bridge will hold flared up between Emeric and Sunniva outside the royal mews; it ended, as usual, with neither of them conceding. Rumours about the singing at the docks reached the royal mews. Emeric pretended not to care and then asked everyone about it.

Entry 41, autumn of year 37

Emeric closed early, walked to the Chancery, and watched the lights come on. Dumpling followed at a distance. Emeric repaired the spool of wire at the royal mews for Xavier, who paid in 39 crowns and a long story about the right way to mend a net. Gustav came by asking about the new curfew. Emeric said nothing useful and made tea instead. Emeric spent the day counting stock at the royal mews: 59 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short.

Entry 42, spring of year 37

Emeric repaired the glass float at the royal mews for Kwame, who paid in 88 crowns and a long story about who really won the regatta. House Ardenne sent a notice about the right way to mend a net. Emeric read it twice, folded it into a square and used it to level a table. Emeric was hired to carry a cracked compass from the royal mews to the Chancery without opening it, and mostly succeeded.

Entry 43, summer of year 37

The weather turned. Emeric moved the tin whistle indoors, fed Dumpling, and wrote three lines to Xanthe about the harvest count. Emeric repaired the brass lantern at the royal mews for Amadou, who paid in 83 crowns and a long story about the new curfew. Emeric found a glass float half-buried near the royal mews and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Katarina came by asking about the new curfew. Emeric said nothing useful and made tea instead. Emeric spent the day counting stock at the royal mews: 55 of everything, except the bolt of linen, which is always short.

Entry 44, winter of year 37

Emeric found a bundle of letters half-buried near the Mirror Gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. Emeric spent the day counting stock at the Mirror Gallery: 8 of everything, except the grain scale, which is always short. Emeric won 44 crowns from Sunniva on a bet about the harvest count and spent all of it on charred peach hand pies. Emeric found a sextant half-buried near the Mirror Gallery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it.

Entry 45, summer of year 37

Emeric found a iron kettle half-buried near the Chancery and spent the evening trying to work out who had lost it. The weather turned. Emeric moved the tin whistle indoors, fed Dumpling, and wrote three lines to Xanthe about the tariff on salt. Emeric closed early, walked to the royal mews, and watched the lights come on. Dumpling followed at a distance.